6. Verses 13-18. When a business man, in a large way, takes upon himself the entire management, and is neither trusting nor training others to take charge of things, what is likely to happen?

Feb. 16. The Ten Commandments. Exodus 20:1-17. Golden Text: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself. Luke 10:27.

7. Verse 17. Why would you say, or not, that no person can be a reconciled child of God, who plans to break ... the 10 commandments?

Feb. 23. Moses Praying For Israel. (May be used with Missionary applications.) Exodus 32:1-34:9. Golden Text: The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working. James 5:16.

8. Verse 1. What was the real reason of these people wanting gods to be made for them?

March 2. The Report of the Spies. Numbers 13:1-14:38. Golden Text: This is the victory that hath overcome the world, even our faith. 1 John 5:4.

9. Verses 1-3. Seeing God had promised the land of Canaan to Israel, was it wise, or otherwise, and why, to send spies to search the land?

March 9. Joshua, Patriot and Leader. Joshua 1:1-9. Golden Text: Be strong and of good courage. Joshua 1:9.

10. Verses 1, 2. What qualities did Joshua have to fit him to be the successor of such a distinguished man as Moses?

March 16. The Cities of Refuge. Joshua 20. Golden Text: Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. Matt. 5:7.

11. Verses 3, 4. What was to be the purpose of these cities of refuge?

March 23. Israel Warned Against Compromise. (May be used with Temperance Applications.) Joshua 13:1-24:28. Golden Text: Evil companionships corrupt good morals. 1 Cor. 15:33.

12. Verses 14-18. Is it practical, or possible, and why, for a man in this age of rush, and with all the temptations to which we are exposed, to serve God in a way to be pleasing to him?

Lesson for Sunday, April 6, 1919. God Our Heavenly Father. Gen. 1:1, 27; Psalm 103:1-14; Matt. 6:24-34

THE BAGDAD RAILWAY.

Big Scheme Takes New Lease of Life.

With the elimination of Turkey from the control of Mesopotamia and Syria great developments may be expected in those regions in which the Bagdad Railway will take a commanding part. A correspondent of the London Times says of the section of the railway including the Taurus tunnels:

The railway between Bozanti, in the Taurus range, and Aleppo, is, on the whole, in first-class condition. Some excellent work has been done. The organization near the Taurus tunnel is extremely interesting. Trains can run all the way, but the tunnels need lining with masonry. This is urgent, otherwise they will fall in after the heavy rains; indeed, some of the new cuttings have already fallen. The scenery is magnificent in the tunnel area, and there is a very fine bridge with piers 220 feet high.

"On the Amanus range the tunnel work has been finished, though there are many difficulties owing to the sinking of the high banks. The track is laid and well ballasted for heavy trains to run at forty-five miles per hour. There is ample rolling stock and materials to meet present needs.

"The most striking feature of the railway construction work has been the survey. Owing to the precipitous nature of the mountains, ordinary methods were impossible. A special stereo-photographic theodolite was invented for photographing the mountain passes, and tunnels of a total length of eleven kilometres were plotted and planned from maps made from photographs."

Concerning the economic possibilities of the region touched by this part of the railway, the correspondent says:

"Adana vilayet has an extremely rich soil and two or three crops are possible every year. At present, owing to the unsettled state of the country, land is very cheap. Under good government labor should be plentiful, and it is probable that other things being equal, more progress could be made there than in Palestine and Syria.

"There are many mines in the Taurus area. Coal also is found in the vicinity, but the quality has not yet been proved. Forests are plentiful and magnificent, and all the requirements of Egypt could be supplied if cutting were organized and the necessary shipping could be provided.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the people wish for allied occupation. The Turks were as feared as the Armenians of the late Government, and felt equally oppressed. All that they want is to be left in peace. This became quite clear when a few remnants of the Union and Progress Party endeavored to excite the people; they frightened a few, but they had no following."

CHICAGO, Ill., March 27.—Mrs. Margaret Reeves, wife of Melville Reeves, known as the "skyscraper burglar," was awarded $25,000 in damages against Nicholas Hunt, formerly chief of detectives, and Detective Sergeant Charles Gratton on her charge of false arrest.

Mrs. Reeves asserted the officers, while seeking her husband, broke into her hotel apartment while she was in her bath and compelled her to dress in their presence. She sued for $75,000. The award was made by a jury.

MARRIED BLINDED SOLDIER.

Miss Chelma Weds Sergt.-Major McMahon of Princess Pat Regiment.

NEW YORK.—Miss Anna Chelma, of Little Neck, L. I., and Sergeant Major Leo C. McMahon, survivor of the Princess Pat regiment, who returned from overseas totally blinded, are figures in a war romance which culminated last week in their marriage.

The couple first met at a ball given recently in this city at which the Canadian was pointed out to Miss Chelma as one of the most severely wounded men present. On hearing of his wounds—he wears a silver plate on his head and bears the scars of a bayonet wound in the back and a shrapnel wound in the right knee, how he was blinded by gas, and how his parents both died while he was abroad, it is said Miss Chelma burst into tears.

The Sergeant Major was told of the young woman's sympathy by his friends, and an introduction followed. Last week they were married, and now the bride leads her blind soldier husband when they go for a walk in the village.

The husband is now earning his living by singing in an opera house and selling a book of the war. He was living in Toronto at the outbreak of the war, although born in this country, and enlisted in the Princess Pat regiment. He went to France in 1914 on H. M. S. Victoria, which was torpedoed during the voyage.

Are You Fat? Just Try This

Thousands of overfat people have become slim by following the advice of doctors who recommend Marmola Prescription Tablets, those harmless little fat reducers that simplify the dose of the famous Marmola Prescription.

If too fat, don't wait for the doctor's advice. Go now to your druggist or write to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., and for 75c. procure a large case of the tablets. They reduce two, three or four pounds a week without exercise, dieting or any unpleasant effect whatever. If too fat, try this to-day.

WHERE ARE CALENDARS.

Another Famine Due to Wartime Economy.

Did Mars tie the hands of the calendar manufacturers last year, or has the Canadian appetite for the hangers that mark the flying months weakened? Whatever the reason, scarcity of paper or lack of curiosity as to when the moon will be full, calendars are seen at this most seasonable time, about as often as periscopes in Saskatchewan.

Of course, we do not refer to the art confections that may be had in the stationery stores for the buying, but to the free calendar that once were looked upon by youth as the principal products of the first insurance companies. Thirty years ago the small boy of the city or village did not consider his Christmas holidays well spent unless he had made the rounds of the fire insurance offices, collecting calendars that were his for the mere asking, as blotters were also in those golden days.

Maybe the practice is still pursued somewhere in the Dominion and the boys have already figured out the exact Saturday upon which school will close and have wondered, observing that Victoria Day falls upon Saturday whether they will be "cheated" out of a holiday. The boys' fathers have [illegible] of three days after trout at the end of May.

Without his trusty calendar, how is the city man to know well in advance that Dominion Day is on a Tuesday, with no chance of stealing an extra day on either side of it? Fie upon a control of the pulp industry that has robbed us of our means of knowing the pleasures of anticipation! Hooray for the free and unlimited coinage of calendars!

What poor places the farmhouses must be if they have fared as badly in the matter of big, brilliant date pads as the cities. In olden times there was a calendar for every room, and the kitchen sometimes had two, not to mention the more intellectual almanacs that hung not far from the water dipper. There were the Old Farmers' Almanac and Whosthis' Bitters Almanac and Whatsisname's Sarsaparilla Almanac and you could get, among them, any sort of weather you wanted for any season. But the calendar was more important for every day use, particularly if the white space around each date was large enough to mark down the number of eggs the hens laid that day.

AUSTRALIA AIDS SOLDIERS

Will Spend $2,500,000 on Vocational Training for Young Veterans.

MELBOURNE. — The Australian Cabinet has approved a plan for the expenditure of $2,500,000 in the extension of vocational training to returning soldiers who were under 20 years of age at the time of enlistment. An earlier scheme for vocational training applied only to those who had no trade before the war.

It is estimated that the cost of training and sustenance will be about $750 a man. It is believed that only about half of the 17,000 Australians eligible will take advantage of the plan, which is to extend over three years.

"Sleeping Sickness" Erroneously Named Says Dr. Flexner

Declares Disease Prevalent Here is Not African Variety, But is "Lethargic Encephalitis"

Albany, N. Y., March 27.—The disease more or less prevalent throughout the country which has been termed "sleeping sickness" has been erroneously named, Dr. Mathias Nicoll, Jr., acting State Health Commissioner, announced here in a statement giving the views of Dr. Simon Flexner on the subject. The correct name is "Lethargic Encephalitis."

Dr. Flexner, who is director of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research and a member of the State Public Health Council, studied the disease abroad. Lethargic Encephalitis, Dr. Nicoll declared, should not be confused with the African "sleeping sickness," which is a deadly disease.

"For the present, the disease should be viewed as of unknown causation," according to the Flexner statement. "As relation to other diseases occurring in their respective paralysis is merely conjectural. None of the European (Austrian, British or French) observers ascribe the cases occurring in their respective countries to influenza or other well known diseases, although the resemblance of the pathological lesions in the nervous system to those occurring in infantile paralysis has led to a discussion of the points of correspondence and difference of those two affections.

"It is not even established that in Europe encephalitis lethargica showed any chronological relationship to the influenza epidemic, as has been the case in this country. It is highly important that suspected cases of lethargic encephalitis shall be studied, both clinically and pathologically with as much care as possible."

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in the ears, should give this recipe a trial.

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD, HE SAYS

Milwaukee Man Says Mother Suffered Eighteen Years—Tanlac Restores Her.

"If everybody in Milwaukee knew how much good Tanlac had done my mother, there isn't one who wouldn't think just as I do—that it's worth it's weight in gold, was the interesting statement made by Frank J. Passage, brakeman on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, living at 26 35th street, Milwaukee, recently. Mr. Passage's mother, Mrs. Minnie Passage, at the time she came to Milwaukee, four years ago, had been a resident of Shannon, Illinois, for fifty years and is beloved by all who know her.

"For eighteen or twenty years," continued Mr. Passage, "my mother has had trouble with her stomach and I can truthfully say that Tanlac is the only medicine I have been able to find in all that time to do her any good. Nothing she would eat agreed with her and she was subject to frequent attacks of acute indigestion. In a little while after eating, all her food would sour and bloat her up with gas and cause her to suffer for hours. At times this gas would press on her heart, almost cutting off her breath, and I actually thought she was going to die. She complained of awful pains through her stomach and left side and would belch up sour gas for hours. I have often had to get up in the middle of the night and doctor her on account of this gas, and I don't believe she ever got a night's rest on account of the pain she suffered. During the past year she lost twenty-five pounds in weight or more and all her strength seemed to leave her. During the past six months she has failed very much faster. All she was able to eat was a little soup or milk and soft boiled eggs, and even this would hurt her. Her condition became so serious that on December the seventh I quit work in order to stay home and take care of her.

"One day I noticed a Tanlac testimonial in the paper which was so straightforward and convincing that I told mother I wanted her to try the medicine. She agreed and at the time she started taking it she had been down in bed for five weeks and couldn't stand on her feet but a few minutes, if she tried. Well, she has taken two bottles now and you may believe it or not, she is up and doing all her cooking and housework and is just feeling fine. She is now sixty-nine years of age but I declare she gets around like one of many years younger. She sleeps like a child, eats anything she wants and that gas and indigestion has stopped bloating her almost entirely. I have never seen such a change in anyone as Tanlac has made in mother. I am very grateful for it and she is feeling mighty happy herself. We can't say too much in behalf of Tanlac, and have been telling everyone in the neighborhood about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by C. Pringle & Son.

Find Mrs. Wilkin's Pocketbook in Long Beach Home

Detectives Declare Purse Was Carried by Physician's Wife Night She Lost Life.

MINEOLA, L.I., March 27.—A small leather blood-stained pocketbook, said by detectives working on the Wilkins murder to have belonged to Mrs. Julia Wilkins, was found during the search this afternoon of Wilkin's home at Long Beach, and probably will be sent to Manhattan for finger print analysis.

According to the Nassau County authorities, this pocket book was always carried by Mrs. Wilkins in her handbag, and they are trying to ascertain how it came to be thrown where it was found. There was not a cent in it when picked up by the detectives. In the hope there may still be finger prints upon it, the authorities are to have it examined. There were blood stains not only on the outside of the pocketbook but on the inside as well.

The handbag owned by Mrs. Wilkins, was found lying alongside the spot where she was killed, authorities say, but whether the pocketbook was in it at the time they do not know.

What is regarded by the Nassau county officials as damaging evidence against Dr. Wilkins, now in the county jail, charged with the murder of his wife, is given by a Long Island railroad employee, who was on the Jamaica station on the night Mrs. Wilkins was killed.

The information which this man according to the officials, said the doctor and a young woman now believed to have been Mrs. Wilkins were quarreling on the station about money matters. From what the railroad man was able to gether from the talk Dr. Wilkins seemed to be in need of ready money and was urging the woman to sell some of her property. She did not think well of the proposition according to the information given the officials.

When acquainted with this so-called new development, Charles Wysong, one of counsel for Dr. Wilkins ridiculed the whole incident. He said the couple never quarrelled and were loving and peaceful and he felt that the railroad man had either not understood the conversation, or that he is mistaken in his identity of Dr. Wilkins.

Dr. Wilkins spent a very quiet day in the Nassau county jail reading newspapers and writing letters mostly. He had no visitors. He has asked sheriff Seaman to see that his pets are properly fed and otherwise looked after by the men on guard in his Long Beach home.

Even Candles Are Scarce in Siberia

Electric Power and Kerosene Equally Hard to Get.

OMSK, Siberia.— Finding the necessities of life for the people is one of the great problems of the All-Russian Government, having its headquarters here. Light is one of the most urgent needs. Electricity exists spasmodically in less than half the city. The burning of an electric power plant caused a big section to depend entirely on petroleum, or kerosene and candles. But the stock of petroleum is almost exhausted and candles are becoming rare.

The loss of Samara has proved a great blow in this respect for, through Samara from the rich petroleum districts of the Caucasus, came the Omsk supply of petroleum, oil and fats. The lack of grease for the wheels of the railway cars is a very serious matter in connection with the question of transport, already difficult on account of general disorganization. Candles cost eight rubles a piece and are difficult to find.

Light is essential in the dead of Winter here because night begins at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and continues until 8 o'clock in the morning. The absence of light in the streets at night leads to frequent robberies and occasionally to more serious incidents. It is unsafe to go out at night alone, especially in dark, unfrequented thoroughfares.

The only public attraction at Omsk is the theatre and a few moving picture auditoriums. There are one or two large restaurants where one may dine for fifty or sixty rubles. But, generally speaking, Omsk at night is deserted and mournful.

MEXICAN CATTLE "KING," WIFE AND SON DEAD NEAR POVERTY

EL PASO, Texas, March 27.—An insult is added to injury in the case of General Luis Terrazas, deposed land and cattle king of Chihuahua State.

An exile here, General Terraza, who is nearly seventy years old, recently suffered a paralytic stroke. A few days ago his wife died. His elder son and namesake died a few years ago after his health had been broken by forced privations by Pancho Villa in attempts to extort a ransom.

And to-day General Terrazas read the report of the bureau of confiscation of the State of Chihuahua on the extent of his holdings, all of which have ben confiscated by the Carranza authorities. General Terrazas, patriot of the War of Independence, builder of the vast cattle raising empire of Northern Mexico, is said to be almost penniless.

The report of the bureau of confiscation, so-called by the Mexican authorities themselves, states that General Terrazas owned about 70,000,000 acres, a majority of the state territory. The report specifies the location of the ranches. The value of this land in 1912, the year the Madero revolution was successful, is put at 5,000,000 pesos in Mexican gold, but the value of the land under normal conditions in Mexico would be many times that sum.

The larger part of the Terrazas estate was in cattle ranches, but much of it is in cultivated farms. In addition the report says General Terrazas owned 200 houses and buildings in Chihuahua City, where he once resided as Governor of the state and in reality director general of North Mexico.

General Terrazas used to say he could not even estimate the extent or value of his estates. Now the government authorities, which have confiscated them, have estimated the extent for him.

EYESTRAIN

Eyestrain is the most widely spread of all eye disorders. Its effects are farther reaching and more disastrous than all other forms of eye trouble combined. To neglect to wear proper glasses is to court sure, certain and probably terrible disaster in the future. By procuring glasses here which will at once relieve your eyestrain this danger will be removed.

We grind the glasses to fit your individual needs. You select the mountings to fit your individual tastes.

Sat Up In Bed To Get Her Breath

Palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, inability to lie on the left side, feelings as if smothering, oppressed feeling in the chest, dizzy and faint spells, tired weak, worn out feeling, involuntary twitching of the muscles, sleeplessness, restless, etc., all point to the fact that either the heart or nerves, or both, are not what they should be. Any of these conditions should be remedied immediately so as to avoid a complete breakdown of the whole system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will bring energy to the weakened constitution, strengthen and regulate the heart, and tone up the tired, overstrained nerves.

Mrs. William Steeves, Chemical Road, N.S., writes:— "I have been a great sufferer from nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart, which was so bad I had to sit up in bed to get my breath. I could not lie on my left side at all. I tried doctor after doctor, also several different remedies, but got no help from them. My mother insisted on me trying Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. By the time I had used one box, I was feeling very much better. I took in all three boxes, and now I am in perfect health and can enjoy a good night's sleep, and can lie on my left side without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Germany's First Windmill.

The first windmill in Germany was built at Windsheim. The Augustine monks at that place desired to build one such as they had seen in Italy, but the lord of the manor forbade them, declaring that the winds belonged to him. The monks applied to the bishop of Utrecht, who promptly laid down the fundamental principle that no one had any power over the winds of his diocese but himself. He gave permission to build the mill and it was erected in the closing years of the fourteenth century.

"[illegible] are you doing here?" asked a visitor.

"Passing time."

"Ah, what for?"

"Passing money." And the visitor passed on.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Better Part

By MURIEL LEE

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"There are the securities, Mr. Paine. I wish to sell them quickly and for cash."

"It will have to be at something of a sacrifice," submitted Gregory Paine, lawyer.

"I do not care for a trifling loss. I wish to dispose of all that I have. I am going to leave Wurelsum for good."

Benevolent old Gregory Paine viewed his client with mingled curiosity and regret. Man and boy, he and his father had been advisers and agents for the Tresham family for well nigh onto fifty years. More latterly the estate had dwindled and the income of Miss Gloria Tresham had been in a measure sparse, but he sentimentally cherished these old family connections.

"I can speak with you confidentially," went on Miss Tresham, her eyes lowered a slight flush on her face, clear and beautiful at thirty, and none of her girlish grace and stateliness gone. You remember Wallace Blair?"

"Surely," nodded Lawyer Paine, and memory went back speedily to trace a connection for the present unexpected allusion.

"He was the one romance in life," went on Miss Tresham sorrowfully. "We were never engaged, but we were close, very close friends. It may have been my aloofness, it may have been sense of duty, circumstances, what you will, but he married another. I have never ceased to respect him. And his wife, he devoted his life to her. An angel, dependent mother and the little children, his soul was bound in them. He invested all he had in Mexico. He took his wife there hoping to mend her health, but she soon died. And six months ago, in protecting his property from raiders, he was killed."

"A sad, sad story," murmured Mr. Paine. "And the little ones?"

"He left them at Northcote in charge of his mother. When his remittances ceased I understand they faced the direst poverty, even suffering. Four lives against my selfish, useless own—Mr. Paine, I am going to cast in my lot with those poor waifs and give to them the best that is in me."

"You are a noble woman!" was all Gregory Paine said, and tone and face evidenced how sincerely he spoke.

It was two weeks later that Gloria Tresham uprooted the calm, peaceful home life of twenty years to go forth to meet the duty she had voluntarily assumed. She had sent no word to her prospective pensioners. She visited Northcote quietly, made a few inquiries and realized that she was bringing aid to the forlorn and needy just in time. The weather was bleak. As Gloria approached the house where old Mrs. Blair and her little group of dependents lived she discovered that they were hived into one room. A girl of eight was gathering chips in the yard to keep alive the kitchen fire. Bending over the stove, preparing a meal of cereal only, was the aged mother of Wallace Blair. The shivering, ragged little tots stood timidly aside as the unexpected visitor entered.

"I know—I know," she faltered. "He told me of you often. He is gone and we are alone. You have come—"

"To stay. I have come," went on Gloria, "to be to you a daughter, if you will so have me, a mother to these little orphans. If, you know, as you say, have I not the right?"

"He was a true man," murmured the aged woman, softly. "He was loyal, tender, true to poor Marion, but his heart had never strayed from you. You mean you will share our poor lives?"

"They shall be poor no longer," said Gloria. "Only give me a welcome—and love. My soul is craving for it, and I will bless heaven for the privilege of taking up his duties where Wallace Blair laid them down."

It was a beautiful summer evening six months after an angel of mercy had come into the desolate home—desolate no longer. Thrift, comfort, prosperity seemed to shine from the prettily painted cottage. In the garden three well-dressed, happy-faced tots were crowning "grandma" with a wreath of daisies.

"Some one is coming," spoke Esther, the eldest of the children, and all eyes were directed towards the rustic gateway through which a man leaning on a crutch had just passed. A sharp, quick cry issued from the lips of Gloria Tresham. She felt her senses deserting her. In form and substance, no wraith, but flesh and blood, slowly, staring unsteadily, bewildered, this was the dead alive—Wallace Blair!

He sank to a seat, the semblance of a man just recovering from some severe illness. The picture framed seemed to drift his soul into elysium. He closed his eyes and swayed as with a wild, ringing cry, his mother tottered towards him.

She wept over him, fond, caressing, as he related a terrible experience of his Mexican solitude, of fighting to the last ditch to succeed in saving his little fortune, and then, as his mother told of Gloria, trembling, Wallace Blair moved towards her with outstretched arms and those two stood, hands clasped, knowing that there was to be no further parting.

ENTERTAINING ROYALTY.

Prince of Wales Will Given a Strenuous Time.

If, as has been semi-officially announced, the Prince of Wales is soon to visit Canada, he will undoubtedly make some sort of tour through the United States. Should he do so, it is to be hoped that he will have a more enjoyable time than did his grandfather (afterward Edward VII) when he spent four weeks as the guest of Uncle Sam.

Albert Edward, as he was then known, was then not far from the same age as his grandson to-day. A rather shy and unassuming young gentleman, he must have been appalled at finding himself made a show of and literally mobbed in our cities.

Crossing the border at Detroit, Sept. 20, he visited Chicago and St. Louis, and on the third day of October arrived in Washington, where President Buchanan "put him up" at the White House. The mansion at that period had only one bathroom and its bedrooms were too few to afford accommodation for the prince's suite. An extemporized "shakedown" was provided for them in the Red Parlor.

Luckily the President had a niece, Harriet Lane, a very attractive young woman, who kept house for him. She was a jolly girl, and after he had gone through the agonies of a formal banquet and a reception in the East Room—appearing on the latter occasion in a blue coat, gray trousers and a "garrote" collar—she took him to the Young Ladies' Institute in Georgetown, treated him at a game of tenpins in the "gym" and beat him.

The revenue cutter Harriet Lane took him to Mount Vernon, where he planted a horse chestnut tree on a grassy mound near the Washington tomb. On the return voyage up the Potomac the deck was cleared for dancing and the prince tripped it with Miss Lane, Miss Slidell, Miss Gwin, Miss Rigg and other young ladies. Evidently he enjoyed that, for he asked that the boat be slowed up. That evening he dined at the British legation, and, having slept at the White House, he started for Richmond the next morning.

Next he went to Philadelphia, where thirty rooms were engaged at the Continental Hotel for himself and suite. Women bribed the porters to allow them to stand near the door of his apartment, so that they could touch him when he went out. A special performance of opera ("Martha" and an act of "Traviata") was given in his honor, and Patti sang "The Last Rose of Summer." Seats sold for $40 a piece.

A special train took him to Perth Amboy, where he again embarked on the Harriet Lane, which took him to New York. He voyaged up the Hudson to West Point, took a look at Albany, attended a ball in Boston that was a frightful crush and finally reached Portland, Me., where he boarded a British warship.

While in the United States the prince was supposed to be incognito and traveled under the name of Baron Renfrew—one of his fifty or sixty minor titles. It was certainly a strenuous experience that he had, and in all likelihood he was glad when it was over. He never returned.

Ambitious.

"Why has your daughter dropped her hospital work so soon?"

"She found she'd have to nurse poor patients for two years before they intrusted her with any millionaires. So she's going on the stage in a musical comedy."—Kansas City Journal.

Canadian Candy and Chocolate

IN recent years, it has been demonstrated to the world that in most lines of manufacture the Canadian product is equal to, and in many, superior to foreign-made goods.

In the manufacture of candy and chocolate, Canada is at the top. The Pure Food Laws guarantee a wholesome product, while skill in manufacture has produced a quality and deliciousness unequalled in any country.

Within the last few months a tremendous demand for Canadian candy and chocolate has grown up in England and Europe. The large supplies sent to our men overseas during the war gave to many Europeans their first opportunity of appreciating the high qualities which the Canadian product possesses. European merchants and candy lovers are now clamoring for Canadian candies.

There may be some Canadians who do not realize that the most wholesome and delicious candy and chocolate are made here at home—but this is true.

You can eat Canadian-made candy and chocolate with assurance of the high quality and wholesomeness.

GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Removes all dandruff stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—it costs but a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, fineness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries it.

TOO MUCH FOR HIS HEART.

Composer Suffers Attack After Battle with a Shark.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—Sasha Votichenko, the Russian composer, was confined to his apartments here to-day following a heart attack while chasing a shark in the gulf stream off Palm Beach. He went deep-sea fishing with William H. D'Esterre, and when five miles off shore a shark took his bait and a lively battle followed in which the fish finally rushed the boat and was harpooned by the Russian.

The boat was a small open craft, and both men realized the danger of having the side hurt. The composer became excited, and as he hurled the harpoon, dropped unconscious. The shark, with the harpoon well embedded, dashed away with the boat, towing it a half mile before it was killed by rifle fire by attendants in the boat.

Hungarians Are Ready to Continue Peaceful Relations With Allies

Interview With Foreign Minister of Hungarian Soviet Government —Allied Missions Protected.

TORRENT OF ORDERS

(By Edward Bing, United Press Staff Correspondent. Copyright 1919 by the United Press.)

BUDAPEST, March 28. — "We are ready to continue peaceful and friendly relations with the Allies if possible, but we will fight to defend our just interests," Bela Kun, foreign Minister of the Hungarian Soviet government, declared in a statement to foreign correspondents to-day.

Count Karolyi, former Premier, who turned the country over to the Communists, reiterated in an interview his statement that the Entente's Imperialism was responsible for the change of government in Hungary.

"I will continue to work for the sacred cause of having my country with less responsibility, but with more energy," he said.

The Austrian Cabinet decided yesterday to recognize the Hungarian Soviet government, according to an official despatch received from Vienna to-day. M. Bolgart and F. E. Noyce have been accredited as representatives of the new Hungarian government in Vienna. Bolgart formerly was a lecturer on Sociology in Clarke University, Worcester, Mass.

Peace Prevails.

Budapest continued peaceful last night. Even street traffic was undisturbed. Reports from the provinces state that Communism was organized quietly throughout Hungarian territory unoccupied by the Allies, under the direction of local Soviets.

Some hotels hauled down the British and American flags when the revolution was first declared, but the Soviet government ordered that they be replaced immediately.

Col. Vix, head of the Allied Mission in Budapest, and his staff, have been courteously treated by the government, which guaranteed the safety of their lives and property, as well as those of all neutral and Allied citizens. The Soviet government continues to issue a veritable torrent of orders. Every citizen has the right to refuse permission for any military or civil official to enter his house. Every person is likewise entitled to dispose of his bank account by cheque not to exceed four hundred dollars a month, however.

Neutrals Will Continue.

All automobiles have been requisitioned by the government.

Neutrals will continue to receive the same food ration as formerly.

Other food distribution measures remain valid. The Government is preparing to communize houses and flats, but houses belonging to neutrals and Allied citizens will not be touched except under special orders from Foreign Minister Bela Kun.

Communized theatres, it is announced, will produce Socialist classic plays, chiefly Shakespeare.

The Russian Soviets are keeping in touch with Budapest by wireless. To-day they claimed the revolution is sweeping over Galicia and that the Red armies have won important victories in the Ukraine. They also reported a successful advance to the Bolsheviki forces toward Lemberg.

WANTS RECOGNITION FOR GOVERNMENT

Canadian Press:

PARIS, March 28.—A rumour was current last night that the United States had received a note from Premier Lenine and War Minister Trotsky, of the Russian Soviet Government, asking recognition for the Government, says Marcel Hutin in the "Echo de Paris" to-day. M. Hutin adds that he "cannot say that President Wilson is disinclined to give the request favourable consideration."

Situation is Improving

Russia Is Taking Prominent Place in Peace Discussions.

By Fred S. Ferguson.
(United Press.)

PARIS, March 28.— Russia is again taking a prominent place in the peace discussions, it developed to-day. Though the Russian situation has recurrently appeared, its present injection is believed to be more important and significant than any time heretofore. There seems to be a possibility that the near future will see the framing of a Russian policy—something the Peace Conference has not had since its inception, and lack of which has been a constant source of embarrassment in considering dealings with Germany.

William E. Bullitt, special investigator for the American delegation, is expected to have brought back from Russia the best picture of actual conditions that has come out of that country in months. He is said to have found a surprising state of organization in the interior, compared with reports that have been received. The more conservative wing of the Russian radicals is said to be gaining control and stabilising the general situation. As an instance of the order prevailing in the interior, trains are running on regular schedule, leaving and arriving on the minute between Petrograd and Moscow. Peasants having gained the land are understood to be joining the more conservative elements. Bullitt spent a week in Petrograd without being endangered travelling there from Moscow. He has made an informal report for presentation to the Conference. He had no authority to negotiate action, merely as an observance. His report, however, will have the greatest bearing on developments, and sentiment is rapidly swinging back to the idea expressed early in the conference—that world peace is possible without dealing with the Bolsheviki in some way.

Growing Business Demands More Room

It is always a pleasure to see a good business prosper, and the present condition of things at Harry Zacks' bright furniture store looks like appreciation of his service by the Peterborough public. To meet this demand, his stock has greatly outgrown the capacity of the store, and he has secured additional second story space, which will be remodelled into extra show rooms so soon as this forced output sale, advertised in this issue, has cleared the way sufficiently for the carpenters to commence work.

War prices of furniture have been very high and there is no indication of any reduction in the regular way for some time yet, so that this sale, with prices drastically reduced, represents to the Harry Zacks' patrons just the opportunity and at the right time, for hundreds of householders to secure a long wanted piece of furniture or house furnishing. Read the advertisement carefully. It lists only a few items, the rest of the stock is priced just as attractively.

LET'S GO

Commencing Monday, March 31st the management of the Grand Opera House will inaugurate the new policy of first class vaudeville and pictures for the first three days of each week. The vaudeville will consist of the best acts available, coming direct from Toronto. The price of admission will be slightly increased owing to the enormous cost of securing these big acts and pictures. Seats will be reserved in advance for the evening performances at the nominal price of 25 cents and 15 cents. Telephone reservations will be held until 7.30 the evening of performance. There will be a matinee every afternoon, and the management requests, owing to the number of reservations for the evening performance, that it would be advisable to attend the matinee performance whenever possible.

BOARD OF TRADE.
NOTICE OF ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade, for the election of the Officers and Council and the consideration of routine and special business, is called for Tuesday evening, April 1, 1919, at 8 o'clock sharp, in the Council Room of the Board, on the 2nd Floor of the Dominion Bank Building, at George and Simcoe Streets. The presence of all members of the Board and delegates of all affiliated associations is especially desired at this meeting, when subjects of extraordinary interest to Peterborough are to be submitted for consideration and action.

AID WANTED

MONTREAL, March 28.—By mail to Battle Harbour and wireless to this city comes intelligence of shocking conditions in Northern Labrador as a result of influenza, small-pox and measles which swept the coast during the winter. Earlier in the season reports of deaths on the southern section of the coast showed that over twenty-five per cent. of the natives succumbed.

The first reports from the northern section reached here on Tuesday.

From Grosswater Bay to Nain the epidemic raged for four months, carrying off approximately 50 per cent. of the inhabitants on that area of the coast. At Nain forty Newfoundlanders who wintered on the coast for purposes of trade succumbed and forty odd Esquimaux also died, which represents practically the whole population of that section.

Dogs Devour Bodies.

At Hebron 200 died, leaving only a remnant of the residents at that station to dispose of the bodies. On the island in the vicinity of Okak fifteen persons, who deserted there for sealing, died and the bodies were devoured by dogs.

It is estimated that only 400 inhabitants from Grosswater Bay to Nain are left alive. The full extent of the calamity will not be known until the opening of navigation in the coming summer, but well-grounded fears are expressed that the diseases which ravaged the south and central area of the Labrador coast extended north, and that the most appalling conditions will be disclosed when the ice barrier permits investigation.

Medical aid was unobtainable, and the unfortunate stricken persons perished as with a plague.

Iron Seconds to Go to Toronto

Eastern Ontario Unit, According to Present Plans, Will Be Demobilized in Queen City, Together With Other Units of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade—Little Chance for Peterboro.

Word received in Peterborough to-day from Bramshott Camp indicates that there is not much chance, unless the military authorities are persuaded, to change their plans of having the 2nd Battalion come to Peterborough for demobilization. According to the message, the 2nd Battalion is destined to come to Toronto, together with the other units of the 1st Brigade, the intention being to demobilize the whole brigade in the Queen City. The other units of the 1st Brigade consist of the 1st Battalion and 3rd Battalion, recruited in No. 2 Military District, and the 4th Battalion from Western Ontario. The four battalions are to sail for Canada at the one time, and the cable received to-day indicates that they are to be demobilized simultaneously in Toronto.

NO INTERFERENCE IN BALTIC PROVINCES

German War Minister Declares German Troops Will Not Interfere in Russia.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WEIMAR, March 28. —Replying in the National Assembly to-day to a question, Gustav Noske, the Minister of Defence, said that the Russian statement was untrue so far as it referred to German troops in the Baltic countries. The German authorities, he stated, had agreed that no offensive should be undertaken in Courland or the Ukraine by German forces.

HUNGARIANS ARE AFRAID OF BEING LEFT WITHOUT HELP

Food Commissioner Has Decreed a Meatless Week—All Stores Closed.

(By John de Gandt, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, March 28. — News received from Budapest to-day, via Switzerland, indicates that the Hungarians' Soviet government, fearful of being cut off from the Russians without help, is taking drastic measures to safeguard its position.

The Hungarian food commissioner is reported to have decreed a meatless week starting yesterday. Transgressors are said to have been threatened with the most severe penalties. The Socialization Commissioner is understood to have decreed the immediate closing of all shops except food, drug, tobacco and stationery stores. Any infractions of this decree, according to the despatches, will be punishable by death.

Are Disappointed.

Official circles in Hungary are said to be deeply disappointed over the failure of the Russian Soviets to send immediate military aid.

Several reports have been received that the Russian Bolsheviki forces are successfully invading Galicia for the purpose of establishing communications between Moscow and Budapest.

A traveller arriving in Pressburg, which is reported to have been occupied by Italian troops declared that before Col. Vix of the French army, was arrested in Budapest, his house was besieged and that all entente flags were torn to pieces. The Czech legation has been occupied, the traveller said, and official documents have been seized from allied couriers.

MOVEMENT SPREADING

Lenine Will Finance Bolshevik Uprising Against Vienna.

MOVED RUSSIANS

By Frank J. Taylor.
(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, March 28.—Premier Lenine has wirelessed the Hungarian Soviet government, urging that it send a Bolshevik army against Vienna, according to a despatch received from Budapest to-day. He is said to have promised to finance a Hungarian expedition against Austria to the extent of $20,000,000.

Discovering that the Spartacans planned to arm several thousand Russians in Rethleben prison to-day, Americans rushed the prisoners aboard trains last night and are scattering them in other prison camps throughout Germany in charge of Americans. This action is believed to have nipped a Bolshevist plot to follow Hungary in declaring a Soviet Republic.

General Strike.

Spartacans in Spandau (nine miles west of Berlin) who had been threatening to revolt, took no action following the removal of the Russians.

Radicals in other parts of Germany have begun to take matters into their own hands. In Wurtemburg they have declared a general strike to force the Government to accept socialization of industries. Leipzig is said to be under the dictatorship of five communists. The Bavarian government has ordered factories in that State to begin production on a communistic basis. Soviets in Saxony have ordered the factories there to begin communizing the same as in Bavaria.

The Coming Show At the Armouries

Peterboro 1919 Motor Show Will Be a Record Breaker—Will Be Held April 9th, 10th and 11th.

Everything promises that the 1919 Motor Show to be held at the Armouries, Peterborough, on Wednesday Thursday and Friday, April 9th, 10th and 11th will be an exceedingly popular affair. Mr. Reg. Turner who has charge of the space selling states that every inch has been taken and that the showing of cars will be an excellent one.

The Entertainment Committee is going to provide a fine programme for each evening and will be a feature of the show. The special attractions are being prepared and are receiving a great deal of attention.

The proceeds are in aid of the Health Association which are used for the purpose of making healthier and happier citizens.

Keep the dates in mind and have your car ready for the Grand Parade opening night.

Lord Reading Insisted On Being Conveyed to An American Port

ARGYLE HOUSE

TORONTO, March 28.—Charges of the gravest and most definite character against Canadian military administration in England were made in the Legislature yesterday by Lieut.-Col. Arthur Pratt, member for South Norfolk. Colonel Pratt, true to his announced intention of bringing to the attention of the House the grievances of Canadian soldiers in England which led to the rioting at Rhyl, Wales, rose in his place just before the orders of the day were called, and for an hour spoke of the conditions under which a large number of men who have done their part in Flanders and France have had to live. It was a statement that the House followed with the closest attention throughout and it was convincing enough to bring emphatic endoration from both sides of the House.

The Norfolk member set out to prove that the riots were due not to a lack of discipline in the Canadian forces, but to grievances for which they could find no remedy by ordinary means. He went farther, however, and practically accused subordinates in the Air Ministry, the High Commissioner's office and Argyle House of composing a vicious circle, which so discouraged men who wanted to get home that finally in despair they would "salve" waiting hands in order to get away. He referred to the Reading incident and rather bitterly blamed Sir Robert Borden and Sir Edward Kemp for remaining silent regarding the Ambassador's "heartless" conduct toward the wounded Canadians, who had been forced to endure an extra trip of hundreds of miles in order that Lord Reading's pride might not suffer.

Continuing, he gave a number of specific instances of unjust and arbitrary treatment of officers and men. He told of a Major McGregor who was wanted in Halifax to take a $10,000 post as City Engineer. He had gone to the camp, and because he had found conditions unbearable, had protested to the officer in command of the Nova Scotia section—Major E. V. Collier. For daring to complain he was abused and the next day was sent back to Witley Camp, where he might still be waiting to get home. Another case concerned a major whose name he could not mention, since he was still in the service. He had been notified that he was being returned by a certain boat, and was instructed to report at Argyle House for his papers, etc. He went there, and was told that they were to busy—he must come back next day. When the major said that this would mean he would miss the train and his boat, he was carelessly told to wait for another boat. He went out, but after thinking it over for a few minutes, he decided to go back and assert his right.

"Busy" Officers Having Tea.

"He pushed right through into the office," said Col. Pratt, "and when he opened the door, he found the two 'overworked' officers having tea with two stenographers sitting on the table smoking cigarettes."

The South Norfolk member told of women and children, dependents of returning Canadian soldiers who had had to wander the streets of London all night because some of the officials at Argyle House would not work after legal hours. He told of another case which happened some time ago of an officer from Argyle

Strike Has Been Called

Vienna Is Threatened With Famine —Want Higher Wages.

(Canadian Press.)

VIENNA, March 28. — A railroad strike has been called and threatens to spread to all parts of this country. The strike was called partly for higher wages and partly because of sympathy with the Hungarian revolution. It is feared it may lead to the establishment of a Soviet republic in German Austria. The trouble began last night when men employed by the Southern railroad walked out. All traffic over this road is at a complete standstill, even allied food trains for Trieste being stopped. As a result of this interruption of transportation of supplies, Vienna is threatened with famine. The situation is considered extremely grave.

Cities Will Adopt Daylight Saving

Action of Dominion Parliament Will Be Ratified.

(Canadian Press.)

TORONTO, March 28. — Judging from reports received from nearly all parts of Canada this morning, following the rejection last night by the Dominion Parliament of the summer daylight saving scheme, larger cities and principal industries of the country will be run this summer on time fixed one hour ahead of the rural districts, and the agricultural communities. Several cities in Ontario have already arranged to set their time ahead at 2 a.m. next Sunday morning and others will do so as soon as the necessary by-laws can be passed by the municipal councils. Montreal manufacturers and trade interests are meeting civic administration this afternoon to advocate local daylight saving in that city. The Toronto city council meets on Monday and is almost sure to pass the local by-law. The fact that railway, shipping and telegraph companies will run on new time has compelled many other concerns to announce their adoption of the same, notwithstanding action of legislative bodies. It is not thought here that the Dominion Government or the Parliament of Canada will exercise its control over the Railway War Board, to compel railways to keep to the old time. The sentiment in the cities is too strong for such interference, it is felt.

New Plans For Narrower Bridge Would Delay the Opening Work

Special Meeting Recently Instructed Mr. Barber to Submit to Contractors Revised Plans for Nine Foot Reduction in Width, But the Change Will Prevent Early Start.

If the plans of the Hunter street bridge are altered to provide for a reduction in its width, and should a tender be accepted on this basis, construction operations will be delayed for two months or more until the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board shall have approved of the new design and specifications. This delay of the general information [illegible] their quest for advice on various phases of the Council's problem in Toronto yesterday.

Mayor Duncan and Aldermen Phelan, Morrison, Geary and McIntyre comprised the deputation. They interviewed a number of prominent engineers, obtaining expert opinion, neutral and otherwise, that should be helpful to them in considering the tenders when they are opened next Tuesday night.

In the discussion of local employment this spring, members of the Council have pointed that the Hunter street bridge, would absorb a large number of labourers, carpenters and other workmen who have been idle all winter. Assurances have been given that the construction of the new bridge would be undertaken as soon as the weather permitted. It was assumed, of course, that a satisfactory tender would be received from those submitted, but if the hour of decision approaches the bridge problem has become complicated to such an extent that the special committee will have tenders based on Mr. Frank Barber's plans, and also alternative designs for both concrete and steel bridges, with accompanying tenders.

A member of the committee stated that from the interviews with the Toronto engineer he was satisfied that a 235 foot single span arch was thoroughly practicable, that there was nothing experimental about it as some citizens have implied, and that if any of the tenders for the original bridge approximate the estimated cost and the appropriation for the work, the Council need not hesitate in deciding upon same and ordering the work begun as soon as possible.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

"For the first time since Canada was a country clothing was for a time cheaper here than in Canada, and this would have been true to-day [illegible] intervened and increased duty to the weavers for [illegible] reduction at a 50% discount on the duty they charged weavers for exports," said Frank Jenne, of the Semi-ready Store on George Street.

"This was hardly a fair way to appreciate Canada's preferential, it was a surtax on Canada, and the other Colonies, and now that the war is over it will be [illegible] justice which must be exploded.

PLEASING THE FARMERS.

In a telegram from Ottawa to the Examiner, Capt. J. E. Burnham states that the rejection of the daylight saving scheme is an expression of the determination of Parliament to free [illegible] from dictation. We [illegible] to be inclined to place a different interpretation on the action of Parliament. "This business of forcing opinions down people's throats has gone too far," remarks Capt. Burnham, but yesterday's vote does not, as the federal member tries to establish, indicate that the matter be complained of has yet been removed. It will rather look to the citizens of urban centres that the farmers of the Dominion have succeeded "in forcing their opinions down the throats" of the members of Parliament. Fear of the farmers rather than appreciation of the merits of daylight saving are evident in the action taken yesterday. Of course the logic seen in arriving at a decision to reject daylight saving is easy to follow. Realizing that the adoption of daylight saving by the United States would force the Canadian railways to adopt the new time, and that the cities of Canada would automatically have to do likewise, the members of Parliament decided to please the farmers by rejecting the system. "If the towns and cities want it, there is nothing to prevent them having it," Captain Burnham points out. The net result will be, of course, that the railways, steamship lines and the cities and towns will use the new time, and the farmers will be situated about as they were last year. They will undoubtedly be able to read between the lines and form their own opinion as to the action of Parliament. The Government took the unusual course of giving no leadership in the matter, and throwing the responsibility upon the private members.

GOING INTO POLITICS.

The Great War Veterans' Association of Brantford, despite the objections of Capt. Jenkins, who is the Ontario Provincial President, and other officials, has decided in favour of the G.W.V.A. entering the political field. The aim of the Dominion officers of the Veterans has been to keep the organization on a non-political basis, it being realized that better work could be done on behalf of returned soldiers if the representative body was kept out of the political arena. This undoubtedly is a course that is dictated by wisdom and it is to be expected that the majority of the branch associations will follow the advice of the heads of the Association and refuse to follow the example of the Brantford branch. The time does not seem opportune for the entrance of a Veterans' party into the field of politics. There are already new parties in the United Farmers and the Independent Labour Party, and the Veterans could accomplish better work if they were not bothered by political entanglements, but were free to support the candidate or the policy they decided to help.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Board of Trade is announced for Tuesday evening next, in the Council Chamber of the Board, on the second floor of the Dominion Bank Building. It is stated that "Subjects of extraordinary interest to Peterboro are to be submitted for concerted discussion and action." Just what the subjects are has not been announced, but in any event the annual meeting of the Board of Trade is in itself an event that should be of the greatest interest to those who wish to see Peterboro progress. A live, active, hustling Board of Trade, an organization of enthusiastic citizens, whose only ambition is to further the interests of the community, on whose behalf they are working, is a necessary adjunct to every flourishing city. There is no reason in the world why the local Board cannot be developed into such a body if the citizens will swing into line and support the efforts of those who are at the head of the organization. The Board of Trade should be the forum in which all questions of public interest can be discussed, and so that all movements that have to do with the welfare of the city can be supported. The Board is not a union of manufacturers, as some people mistakingly imagine; it is not an organization to work for one section of the city's population, but for the whole community, and its usefulness will vary according to the measure of support that is given it, and confidence that is placed in it, by the citizens generally. That support and confidence can be indicated in a no uncertain manner by an enthusiastic attendance at Tuesday's annual meeting.

UP TO THE COUNCIL

Parliament by a big majority has rejected daylight saving and as far as it being put into force as a Dominion measure is concerned, the system has been dropped. On the other hand the Canadian Railway War Board has ordered all Canadian railways to operate by daylight saving time in conformance with the United States time and commencing on Sunday the trains throughout the Dominion will be running an hour earlier than the standard time. The confusion that will ensue is not hard to picture. The manufacturers and merchants, railway employees, postal employees and many other people will find it difficult to adjust themselves to the new conditions. With trains arriving and leaving an hour earlier than usual there will be confusion worse confounded unless the urban centres meet the situation themselves by adopting a local system of daylight saving.

A number of cities have already announced their intention of doing so. How about Peterboro? There does not seem any other course for the city council to follow than to decree that the daylight saving measure shall be put in force in Peterboro. Leaving to one side all the benefits to be gained from the scheme, the extra time for gardening and recreation, and all the other reasons that made city people endorse the system last year, the cold fact remains that unless the cities adjust their time to meet the railways there will be a most unpleasant series of complications. If the farmers found daylight saving an annoyance last year the people living in the cities will undoubtedly find themselves in a much worse position during the coming months if railway and city time are not synchronized.

U.S. FASHIONS FOR WOMEN HOLD THEIR OWN AFTER THE WAR

NEW YORK.—American fashions for women, designed by an American girl, still are holding their own in some of the shops, and this despite the fact that French creations again are available, according to a statement made by a leader in apparel making for women.

Miss Ethel Frankau, designer for Bergdorf & Goodman, of Fifth avenue, is in greater demand than ever since the hostilities ceased, and fashion experts overseas again turned their attention to the designing of dresses, suits and wraps for women here. Miss Frankau does not preach independence of the French experts, but acknowledges America's indebtedness to their cleverness. She recently designed the dresses worn by Miss Yvette Guilbert at the Neighborhood Playhouse.

TALKS PROVE OF GREAT INTEREST

A. W. Beall, M.A., will Continue Lecture in Schools till First of the Month.

CHATHAM, March 28. — Between 40 and 50 addresses have been delivered to the pupils in the local public schools, by Arthur W. Beall, M.A., lecturer for the department of education on Eugenics and Personal Hygiene, who will continue the series of lectures until about the first of April.

The series of talks, dealing with matters that are of the greatest importance to the children, and which, unfortunately, are to a very great extent neglected by the parents, is leaving a very deep impression in the minds of the youthful auditors, who have not been slow to express their appreciation to Mr. Beall.

In referring to the subject of his work, Mr. Beall quoted Herbert Spencer in the following words:

"All modern education has utterly failed in its greatest purpose, the training of children for parenthood."

Arrangements are being made by Mr. Baell to give a series of talks to the pupils at the Collegiate Institute.

Monaghan Declares Against Annexation

Adverse Vote of 39 to 30 Last Night When Council Chamber Was Crowded by Ratepayers of the District Th t Had Been Ou'-lined.

PROMOTERS WILL CARRY ON

By a vote of 39 to 30, the public meeting of North Monaghan ratepayers in the City Council Chamber last night decided against annexation and gave the project its first serious setback. Its promoters, however, refused to admit defeat, and at the close, convinced that the expression did not represent the sentiment and the wishes of the majority of the people in the adjoining suburbs, they arranged to circulate petitions among the residents and property holders of the proposed annexed area thereby obtaining a conclusive pronouncement.

Last night's decision was more or less a snap judgment, inasmuch as it was assumed that all those who voted were qualified representatives of the area, which with a slightly narrowed boundary, was designated for union.

Ald. Turner submitted an altered western limit in the extension of Western avenue, including the property on its west side, from what is virtually Lansdowne street north to the Smith boundary, and on the south end jogging east about 200 feet to Erskine avenue (excluding its west side properties) reaching south to the river road.

Mr. W. J. Byers was the chairman. From the opinions voiced, it was evident that the people of Byersville, embracing some of the residents in the outlying fields, are desirous of joining the city. The Claraday district, east of the Exhibition grounds, is less unanimous, but it lines up quite a number of men who desire to part company with Monaghan as soon as possible. From these two sections comes the group that took the initiative in negotiating with the city and also in trying to persuade the other residents that their best interests would be served by annexation. They apparently do not intend to quit with this rebuff, and further efforts under changed plans will be recommenced at once.

Enumerated the Advantages.

Mr. T. Glover opened the discussion by enumerating twenty-one advantages that would accrue, many of them immediately, from union with the city. The average resident in the proposed area would save from $2.50 to $3.00 a year by reduced light rates. The water rate would drop 33 1-3 per cent., the Collegiate Institute fee of $25 a year would be a considerable item in itself. Hospital fees would be less, for the township patient pays $1.25 for every $1 the city dwellers are charged. Even the doctors' fees would be less, for the doctor adds $1 when he crosses the boundary, according to Mr. Glover. Again there would be postal delivery, and public library privileges without the present isolation the companies do not deliver across the boundary.

There would be street lighting, fire protection and eventually sewers and waterworks. The land values would increase, and there would be ample provision for education.

Addressing Ald. Turner, Mr. H. B. Rye queried: "Did you ever consider the rest of Monaghan if you take in this section? You would be taking in two-thirds of the assessment of the township."

Ald. Turner: "Are you in favor of these residents remaining in the township to help keep it going just as these men say they have been doing?"

Many Vacant City Blocks.

Mr. Rye stated that there were a dozen large blocks in the city that were not built up. They were assessed at only three or four thousand dollars. There were streets in the city without sewers and water, "and yet," said Mr. Rye, "you try to offer us something you can't give yourselves."

"When I had my shop in Ashburnham," he continued, "I paid an insurance rate of 50c a hundred more than in Monaghan. I am a ratepayer in both the city and the township; and I believe that annexation would be detrimental to both. If would build up the vacant blocks city you would increase their assessed value from $3,000 or $4,000 each, to $25,000."

Township Taxes Increasing.

Mr. N. Mills is a pro-annexationist. He quoted township tax figures showing that lots he owned in Monaghan are taxed, two of them, at the rate of 35 mills and another at 26. He referred to other difficulties and stated that he could see no advantage for the man who works in Peterboro to live outside.

Mr. G. W. Hatton advised the speakers to avoid generalities. If a section of the township desired to join the city, its ratepayers should first sign a petition and represent it to the city council. If it was approved by the city it would have to be voted on by the township ratepayers who would be affected.

"Don't try to force in the farm lands. I am speaking for them tonight. The city has vacant land for 20,000 more people, and it is better that the city should be compact than scattered over the country like a western town.'

Desired Specific Assurances.

Mr. Peter McArthur favored annexation but he pointed out that definite assurances should be given the incomers as to the developments that would be completed in the annexed part within a certain period.

An opponent of the scheme derided the city's proposed offer as "stale bun" benefits.

Mr. W. G. Howden warmly advocated union with the city, particularly emphasizing the lack of school facilities for the children of the Claraday district. Rev. Mr. Price of St. Albans Church had recently told him that many of the children were not attending any school.

Mr. Tranter, Mr. Wallwork, Mr. Tooms and others favored annexation.

A real estate evil was exposed by Mr. Barnes, who declared that large sections south of the city had been cut up in pitifully small lots simply for monetary gain. The people appeared to have no voice whatever in this practice.

No School Available.

Mr. W. Moore, a Claraday representative, urged annexation. He had four children, and had to pay the Collegiate Institute fees for one of them; also a fee to send others to the King Edward School. It was too far to the township school at May's. The meeting, he said, was composed of three conflicting interests: retired farmers who lived near the city, but escaped its taxes by remaining in the township; men who live in the city, but who hold lots in the township; and working men who live in the outskirts.

Mr. Archibald questioned Mr. Rye's statement that there were city streets that could not get the water service. He understood that this benefit was supplied if it was applied for.

Mr. Saunders of Brownton, suggested that a committee should ask the city council what concessions they would offer for annexation, but a motion by Mr. Mills, seconded by Mr. Glover, to test the sentiment of the gathering, produced the adverse showing of 39 to 30 against annexation, and with that the meeting adjourned.

THE HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

THE PROPOSED NEW HUNTER STREET BRIDGE, PETERBOROUGH, ONT.

(By W. H. Pretty.)

11. Careful consideration would seem to indicate that the "alignment for the new bridge" should, preferably, be immediately south of the alignment of the existing bridge. Such a course, if adopted, would have the advantage of enabling the city to leave the existing spans in place until the new bridge is completed and opened for traffic; it would also save the "very seriously large cost" (much underestimated, in the writer's opinion), of building a temporary diversion for traffic, with all its attendant risks, and costs, for maintenance, inspection,, police regulation, etc., not forgetting the possibilities from climatic conditions in winter, in the event of delay in completing the new structure. Further, the traffic and business between Ashburnham and the city generally, would proceed "as usual during alterations," with the result of a large economic saving to the city and its business section by such non-interference with accustomed "routine," the city traffic between the east and west sides of the river, would be quite independent of delays caused by unforseen accidental interruptions during the progress of the work, climatic conditions, non-delivery of materials, etc., etc., always more or less incidental to such undertakings, and there would be no need to introduce into the contract, expensive gambling clauses in regard to "time limits" for construction, for which the citizens must pay in hard cash, neither would there be need for a "penalty" or bonus award to the contractor in connection with such time limits, and for which the citizens must again pay, in either case. Work done under such conditions often results in inferior workmanship, which "has to be accepted" to avoid expensive litigation, and here again the citizens, as usual, must pay the piper, with compound interest, often at an even higher rate. The question of asking for a term of five years, more or less, guarantee, is open to criticism; any unnecessary extension of the guarantee period must be paid for by the citizens. It is easy to make clauses, but not always easy to collect.

12. The suggested new alignment for the new bridge centre line, at a position south of its present position, should be as near the present structure as constructional requirements for the proposed new bridge will allow, but not necessarily parallel to the existing bridge centre line. A glance at the plan of the location, or a visit to the site, will show that this proposed change will straighten the line of communication somewhat from Sheridan street on the west side to Burnham street on the east side of the river. The property to be expropriated for such purposes is, by good fortune, of practically "only land value," there being no industries to interfere with, beyond that of the Peterborough Mattress Co'y, which could, in justice, be readily granted a new site and reasonable assistance in taking up such a new site. These existing conditions should be a great inducement for the city to consider the suggested new alignment, when coupled with the many advantages such a course of procedure indicates.

13. The change of alignment indicated above would give the Quaker Oats Company more daylight and a brighter frontage for their offices and works, and their offices could be conveniently reached from the new proposed high level bridge roadway by means of a footbridge. This company would also have more available space for outside loading; in fact, their present routine would be more than maintained; the impression would seem to be that it would be improved over present conditions and, apparently, at the expense of the citizens.

14. An important and far reaching result attendant on the adoption of the proposed new aligument, would be that the city, and public generally, would retain their right of way down to the river, on both sides of the river, for wharfage and general transportation purposes and passenger traffic on the River Otonabee and its canal system, an exceedingly valuable asset, which should not, on any consideration, be ignored or under-valued in our present day complacency, and which, if "given away" now, will have to be bought back again by the citizens in future years, when the canal construction follows the river bed through the city, and this "must be done" sooner or later.

15. It perhaps may not be out of place here to point out that the Quaker Oats Company will be virtually cut off from Hunter street by the retention of the present alignment when building the new high level bridge, and also after the new bridge is completed, and the local press has reported proposals for meeting this difficulty by further adding to the cost of the bridge; presumably also, the Quaker Oats Company must also be provided with an entrance and exit in the direction of Simcoe street, at the existing levels (approximately), in other words, our City Fathers would appear to be unconsciously "giving away" the birthright of the citizens of Peterborough to any claim they may have in connection with the land between the Quaker Oats Company's office frontage and Simcoe street, since it can only lead to and from the private interests of this company.

16. All things considered, there does not appear (from the city's and citizens' point of view) any rational reason why the through traffic between east and west city and vice versa, should be interrupted or even considered. The conditions are ideal and there is no excuse for isolating Ashburnham and reducing business possibilities with that district, for even one single minute.

Springtime SATURDAY SNAPS Breathe Forth Their Freshness

Anticipating The Coming Season

Cressman's Editorial

There is a belief that, in Spring, we approach very near to the great mysteries of life. Tender blades push through the ground. Trees burst forth into blooms. Birds, through no volation of their own are given gayer plumage.

There is a sense of imminence; a realization of unseen powers behind every living thing. Women, always closer to the invisible than men, sense it clearly, and manifest it in the clothes they wear.

It is not caprice, but the unfailing feminine instinct for the beauties for the infinite that creates the new Spring Styles.

Capt. Burnham Discusses Daylight Savings and Sir Charles Fitzpatrick

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: Yesterday we had the annual attack on Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, late Chief Justice, and member for Canada of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of the Empire. The resolution condemning him for not returning the money received by him from Parliament for the expenses of a journey he did not make, was talked out, but it is on the order paper for another day. If Sir Charles has much sensitiveness of character he will return the money. The debate was fast and furious, members on both sides being for and against.

How a man can take money appropriated for a certain purpose when he did nothing to carry out the purpose for which it was granted, is beyond me.

Daylight Saving is up to-day. Sir Thomas White hoped that the debate would be a free-for-all, and it will be. I am going to support the farmers this time. If the cities and towns want it there is nothing to prevent their having it. There is nothing to prevent the railways having it. But this business of forcing opinions down people's throats has gone too far, and I am on the side of my rural friends in the debate. I am paired with McLean of the Toronto World, a furious advocate of Daylight Saving. Large majority to express determination to free Canada from foreign domination.

J. H. Burnham.

LORD READING INSISTED ON BEING CONVEYED

House who had boarded a certain train and had collected £2 from every man on the train bound homeward, about £3,400 in all being collected.

Col. Pratt then turned the searchlight upon Lord Reading, telling of the Ambassador's action in insisting upon being taken right to the landing wharf in New York by the ship on which he crossed despite the fact that it meant a far longer voyage for 800 wounded Canadians.

"With all deference, I say that the King of England would not have done that. (Applause.) The Prince of Wales would not have done it, and General Haig would not. Lord Reading is Rufus Isaacs, late Attorney-General in the Liberal Government. He is a Jew, but that speaks nothing against him if he is a man. But I protest that no man has a right to cause 800 of our Canadian boys the suffering of such a trip in order that he might gratify his vanity."

He continued, "Sir Robert Borden ought to have known it. Certainly Sir Edward Kemp must know about it, and if Sir George Perley doesn't know about it he should never be in that position. My objection is that I have never heard a word of protest from anyone. If it had been Premier Hughes of Australia, he would have sacrificed the country and made it impossible for Lord Reading to go about among the people of Great Britain for the people there would not stand for such a thing. I repeat my objection lies in the fact that there has been no protest against this most unwarranted act of inhumanity towards our Canadian boys."

Buried in Pauper Graves

Toward the close of his address Col. Pratt spoke in strong terms of the burial in unmarked graves without military honors of the men killed in the rioting. Even if they had made a mistake, it should be remembered that they had suffered and bled for Canada, and that they had only revolted against injustice. Public opinion would, he was certain, demand that this be done for them for the sake of those at home who had suffered loss and had nothing but bitterness in memory. There was also the case of the men who were arrested and held for court-martial. He had been informed that there were 80 Canadian soldiers in English prisons and dungeons—10 of them in the dungeon in the Tower of London. "I protest that in view of the circumstances these boys have no right to lie in English dungeons," he declared.

Col. Pratt spoke briefly of his own war service, mentioning it, he said, because he had been accused of holding down a "cushy" job. In addition to other service he had for months been in command of 10,000 men at Dunkirk, in constant danger of death from bombs, a danger so present that his command had suffered very heavy casualties.

Important Results Achieved at the Peace Conference

Canadian Press:

PARIS, March 28.—To-day's Paris newspapers, in discussing [illegible] declare that extremely important problems directly connected with Germany's future boundaries were discussed by the Council in an excellent spirit of understanding. The "Petit Parisien" says it understands important results were achieved. According to the "Matin," the territorial questions involved and the problem of protecting France adequately have been satisfactorily solved, although by means not foreseen in the discussions of the problem outside the conference. As to financial problems, the solution reported to have been adopted provides for the payment by Germany of yearly instalments on the indemnity of which France would receive a portion sufficient to lighten the burden of her budget.

TORONTO CONTRACTOR SAYS CEMENT BRIDGE WILL BE CHEAPER

E. R. Clarke, B.A.Sc., representing the Sherwood Construction Company, was in Peterboro yesterday on business connected with the Hunter street bridge.

He told the Examiner that his company was submitting an alternative plan designed by the firm of James, Louden and Hertzberg, of Toronto, and also a tender estimated upon this independent design. Mr. Clarke stated that the design called for a concrete bridge, somewhat different from Mr. Frank Barber's, that would make a saving for the city in the total cost of the bridge. He also declared that the bridge could be built [illegible] more cheaply than of steel.

Driver Shook Home From Front

Among the Peterborough soldiers who have just returned from overseas is Driver Archie Shook, eldest son of the late J. C. Shook. Driver Shook went overseas with the 74th Battery, and has had long service at the front, being in the battle of Vimy Ridge and the other engagements since that time.

Funeral of the Late J. S. Fitzgerald

The funeral took place yesterday to the Lakefield Cemetery of Mr. John S. Fitzgerald, who deid Monday, March 24, 1919, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. W. Davidson, Antrim street. The service was conducted by the Rev. Robt. Pogue, of St. Paul's Church, assisted by the Rev. P. L. Jull, of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church.

The deceased had been ill for about a year and had been confined to his room for the last six months. He was born in Smith Township in the year 1840, where he lived all his life until a few years ago when he made his home with his daughter, his wife having predeceased him 23 years ago.

He leaves to mourn his loss three sons and one daughter, Mr. A. J. Fitzgerald, Toronto, Dr. J. W. Fitzgerald, Buffalo, N.Y.; Dr. R. R. B. Fitzgerald, Lockport, N.Y.; and Mrs. R. W. Davidson, Peterboro; also a brother and sister, Mr. Sam Fitzgerald, Chatham, and Mrs. E. J. Sanderson, Chicago.

He was an elder of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church for over 40 years and always took a keen interest in church affairs up to the time his illness began.

The pall bearers were Messrs. W. M. Graham, Thompson Braden, Webster Blewett and Sherman Garbutt, Lakefield; T. E. Finlay, Norwood; and H. B. Cowan, Peterboro.

Court Stanley A.O.F. Social

The regular meeting of the Ancient Order of Foresters was held in the S. O. E. Hall on Tuesday evening with a very large attendance of members. After the usual routine business was disposed of the evening developed into an informal social and welcome home to a number of brothers who have returned from overseas.

Court "White Lily" a very promising branch of juveniles was also invited to join in revels, a short musical programme was rendered mingled with a few pithy and to the point speeches, after which refreshments were served by the "good and welfare" committee which same committee intend providing a real up-to-the-minute welcome for our returned members when they are all back home.

The prospects for a large increase of membership for 1919 appear very bright and a very noticeable "get together" feeling prevailed among the brethren. It is intended to continue these sociable evenings at frequent intervals and all members should endeavour to attend every 2nd and 4th Tuesday in the month so that they do not miss any of the good times. It is well worth while.

Music & Drama

"THE BRIDE SHOP."

The best musical comedy that Peterboro playgoers have had a chance of seeing in many moons, was "The Bride Shop," which brought Eddie Vogt, a collection of tuneful melodies, a caste of clever principals, a coterie of lively girls, and a riot of gorgeous costumes, to the Grand Opera House last evening. A capacity audience enjoyed every moment of the sparkling performance, which was a surefire success from start to finish. In Eddie Vogt "The Bride Shop" provided one of the most amusing comedians seen here in a long time. Vogt, who is as long as a Peterboro tax bill, and as thin as the average musical comedy plot, was inefectiously funny in everything that he said and did. The author has provided him with a wealth of amusing lines and the dry manner in which he delivered them allowed none of their humour to escape. As Bill Cope in search of a girl, Vogt had his audience with him from his first appearance, and there wasn't even a flagatation on the laughter line when he was on the stage.

Assisting this most excellent comedian was a splendid caste. As his assistants in the fun making, Lew Naden, as the Earl of Warwickshire, and John Bully, as Jack Stokes, contributed much to the success of the programme. Miss Muriel Rastrick, in the principal feminine role, that of Angelina Stokes, had the four-fold charm of voice, of appearance, of personality and of histrionic ability. Her song numbers were delightful and her work throughout was uniformly pleasing. Miss Nan Hopestill sang delightfully, and Miss Edith Bengar gave an excellent performance as the French maid.

Walter L. Rosemont, who wrote the score for "The Bride Shop," has given it a series of captivating melodies. "There's Something about You," a haunting little air that is frequently heard throughout the performance, was perhaps the hit of the evening, although there were half a dozen others that were not far behind it in merit. "Saskatchewan," "Indiana," "Ring Tang," and several other numbers, were enthusiastically received, while the finale of the first act, which reached comic opera standard, deserved a special ward of praise, so excellent was the singing of principals and chorus.

The dancing specialties by Miss Sally Hunt, Miss Muriel Thomas and by John Sully and Lew Naden, were clever features of the programme.

The stage settings were in keeping with the general excellence of the production, while the costumes, especially in the second act, were lavish in their wealth of color and richness of material, if not always in their quantity. "The Bride Shop" will be a pleasant recollection in the memories of those who were fortunate enough to see last night's performance.

To-morrow brings an old friend to the Grand, in the person of John F. Cain, who will be seen in his favorite role of Jimmy Mahoney, in "Bringing Up Father"—this time "at home."

Old Truancy Act Has Disappeared

The New School Attendance Act Will Apply to Peterboro.

Hereafter the youngster who plays "hookey" will not find a policeman on his trail. Instead a "School Attendance Officer" will call on mother and father with suitable remonstrances. In this statement of fact will be found the change in principle embodied in the new School Attendance Act introduced in the Legislature by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson in the absence of Hon. Dr. Cody, now on the sick list. The measure is a revision of the old Truancy Act without the punitive character of the former law. Instead of the enforcement of the Act being in the hands of the local police authorities, it is entrusted to the school boards, who are given power to appoint and pay "School Attendance Officers." These officers may be women, if the board considers it advisable.

Another feature of the Act is the provision made for the appointment of a Provincial School Attendance Officer. It will not be his part to interfere with the local enforcement of the law, but where local officers meet with difficulty of any sort he will be able to give them advice and assistance. He will also have special duties in regard to the enforcement of the school attendance laws in unorganized districts. Where settlements neglect to provide schools or teachers or otherwise fail in their duty toward the children of the district the Provincial Officer is given power to step in and do all the things the local authorities have power to do but have neglected. The new measure leaves the compulsory school age as it was before—from 8 to 14 years of age.

Kinmel Park Inquest Opens

Drink was the Cause, says Major Collier in Evidence, Firing of Ball Cartridges.

(Canadian Press.)

RHYL, WALES, March 28. — Evidence that drink was the aggravating cause in the Kinmel Park rioting of March 5th, when five Canadian soldiers were killed, was submitted to-day at the coroner's inquest by Major Collier.

Another witness, Captain Scott, stated that the Russian element in the camp, was responsible for the rioting as well as drink.

Testimony from soldiers who saw the rioters firing ball cartridges and from officers who swore that no order was given the men opposing the rioters to use ball cartridges or their bayonets, was also taken.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—I have, along with others, read with keen interest the letters in your valuable paper on the Hunter street bridge question. It appears to me as an ordinary layman who understands very little or nothing about bridge building that, according to the letters, a saving of at least $100,000 can be made in the building of the bridge and that we will stall have a bridge that will suit the purposes of Peterborough for the next fifty years. There have been letters by such influential citizens as Messrs. R. R. Hall, J. W. FitzGerald, E. G. Patterson and W. H. Pretty. To the mind of a layman they have fully substantiated their claims and serious consideration of their views should be taken by the powers that be.

I now wish to voice a thought that is probably in the minds of a great many citizens. Why have these men not given us the assistance of their valuable knowledge before? They knew it was the intention to build the Hunter Street Bridge this year. They should have been candidates for the city council and then they would have been in a position to give the citizens the benefit of their valuable advice several months ago. As it is now there are several workingmen hanging around the street corners without a job and waiting for the solution of the bridge question to get something to do. The complaint of the newspapers around election is always that it is impossible to get the right kind of citizen to run for the city council. It appears though as if some of them are not against raising a big holler if the decisions of the aldermen are not the same as would have emanated from their own superior minds. While I am at one with them in this particular case I feel that the citizens would be more thankful to them if they would try to make it possible, in the future, to air their views from the aldermanic benches.

Yours truly,
J. W. WORTH.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,—Some days ago I asked a group of women if they had formed the habit of reading the "Voice of the People", as published in your valued paper. Most of them answered in the affirmative, while one added that if she saw Mr. Burnham's signature, she "didn't bother with that letter."

I have not lived long enough in Peterborough to know much of Mr. Burnham's record as a private citizen or a public man, but judging from his very "Solomon-esque" defense of Alcohol, in your Wednesday issue, I should say that women are coming into the political arena none too soon.

Canadian women dealt a bad blow to the Whisky Interests of our Western provinces, and when the rest of us are using the ballot, we should be able to attend to these politicians who are "on the still hunt for the liquor vote," to quote Mr. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. Burnham very wisely states that God created alcohol. Why, assuredly, God created everything, including opium, cocaine, etc., Why not then, give all who wish it, free access to these terrible drugs? Why not have a nice free and open traffic in them? There would be huge fortunes for those handling it, and the effects of such drugs are so very genializing (for the moment, at any rate).

In my opinion, any gentleman capable of penning the sacriligous nonsense of Mr. Burnham's letter, must have an enormously exaggerated ego, if he feels he is worth $4,000 per annum to his constituency. No vote of mine for Mr. Burnham, and, I'm inclined to add, "I'd rather be a dog, and bay the moon, than such a Roman."

"THE CAVELL CASE," AN AUTHENTIC PRODUCTION

Select Pictures' great special attraction, "The Cavell Case," is a true story of the life of Edith Cavell, the heroic Red Cross nurse, shot in Belgium by the Germans as a spy, for whom England has erected a monument in tender memory and recognition of her martyrdom, and for whom the civilized world grieves.

This stirring and impressive picture is presented by Joseph L. Plunkett and Frank J. Carroll, with Julia Arthur, the eminent American actress, in the role of Edith Cavell. The entire story is based on fact. The report of Brand Whitlock, the American Minister of Belgium, is the basis for the truth of the story. Many of the subtitles have been taken direct from the document.

The story is by Anthony Paul Kelly, author of the Broadway success, "Three Faces East." John G. Adolfi directed the picture. "The theme of this picture is so tremendous and so moving," said Mr. Adolfi, "that it was actually inspiring to work on it. There has not been during the entire war an incident so dramatic and humanly moving as the assassination of Edith Cavell, the British Red Cross nurse, who is admirably portrayed in this picture by Julia Arthur. For sheer brutality, this outrage has eclipsed anything not only done in this war but in all history.

"We have learned from the writings of those present in Brussels at the time, the undisputable facts. These have been followed with accuracy in the screen version. Miss Arthur, who makes her debut in this picture, has been blessed with the character she impersonated, and I feel confident that her success on the screen will more than duplicate her wonderful success on the speaking stage.

"The picture is not a war picture, if that term is taken to mean spectacular battle scenes. There are some trench scenes, to be sure, but they are only incidental to the story. The public is satiated with gigantic spectacles showing the troops fighting, and in making this picture our sole aim has been to bring out the splendid heroism of Edith Cavell, which exemplifies the part which women have played in this war."

Eminent critics assert that if there is any one incident to which the autocracy of the Central Powers can attribute more than another its defeat, it was the execution of Nurse Cavell.

The self-sacrificing Red Cross nurse was charged with aiding Englishmen in their efforts to quit Belgium after the German occupation. So far as the powerful neutral nations, including the United States, could discover, the evidence against the nurse was of the flimsiest sort, and Brand Whitlock interceded for the woman, and pleaded with the German "authorities" throughout the entire night preceding her murder, to no avail.

Edith Cavell was led out in the dawn of a gray morning and shot within fifteen minutes of her notification of the "findings" of the "court martial" that tried her. A new army rose up in England that same day. The bullet that slew Edith Cavell killed the Hohenzollern hope of victory.

The killing of Nurse Cavell is the weightiest message the women of America have yet received. While dealing with a murder, "The Cavell Case" is free from all negative tendency and downward trend. There is a manly fight and struggle and plenty of general power in the story.

The accuracy of all detail and locations is vouchsafed for by the great number of photographs, lithograph prints and paintings pertaining to the production which were secured by the producers.

SPORTING COMMENT

Lt. Leon Cadore, of the Dodgers, who recently returned from France, has an interesting collection of war relics. Among them are hand grenades, bayonets, helmets, rifles and a heavy leather belt which was once owned by a German officer.

Manager Jack Beatty, of the Kitchener Michigan-Ontario baseball team, who is en route to his home in Toronto from Duluth, notified the Kitchener club owners yesterday that he has already signed seven "real good ball players," and has lines out for others who will report during the first week of May.

Sixteen members of the Chicago Nationals left here last night in charge of President Fred L. Mitchell for Pasadena Cal., where they will begin training Sunday for the pennant race.

Jack Vermily, infielder, whose 1918 baseball activities were cut short by his being called in the U. S. army draft, has accepted terms to play for London this season. Manager Keenan secured him through Arthur Devlin, the Fordham College coach.

Player Forest Caddy has been awarded to the Philadelphia National League Club by the National Baseball Commission. The commission ruled that Cady's terms had been accepted by the Philadelphia Club previous to the acceptance of his terms by the San Francisco Club.

Matthews-Blackwell Won Two Games

Last night in the Five-Pin League at the Water Street Alleys, Matthews-Blackwell won all the three games from the Shamrocks. For Matthews-Blackwell, Everett was high man with 807 and high single of 250. Moncrief also passed the 600 mark for the Shamrocks. Morrison was high with 461.

Next week's games in 5 pins:
Monday — Shamrocks vs. Lawn Bowlers.
Wednesday—Bankers vs. Matthews-Blackwell.
Friday—Turnbulls vs. De Laval.

RUSH JACK JOHNSTON AWAY FROM CUBA.

New York, March 27.—Word comes from Havana that Jack Johnson was ordered to leave Cuban soil by the police authorities after he had announced that his battle with Willard was not on the level. Johnson was compelled to make a hurried getaway for Mexico the other day or go to jail for "defrauding" the Cuban sporting public.

The discredited ex-champion evidently made a bad break in Havana, where the natives will not stand for sharp practice by foreigners. Johnson while in Cuba engaged a manager, who is blamed for the negro's statements concerning the Willard bout. But when the Havana police got busy, Johnson's manager deserted him.

CONSPIRACY DISCUSSED

(Canadian Press.)

STOCKHOLM, March 28. —An alleged Royalist conspiracy has been discovered at Penza, north-west of Saratov, in Eastern European Russia, and twenty-one persons have been shot by the Bolsheviki in connection with the plot. The alleged leader was Sukoline, a former Marshal of Russian nobility and local commissary under the Bolsheviki. Sukoline was executed. Conspirators planned to palm off the nephew of the Bishop of Ufa as the Grand Duke Dmitri Pavlovitch, carry him to Moscow and make a dramatic appeal to the people from the Kremlin.

The real former Duke Dmitri Pavlovitch has been in England, and is an honorary captain in the British army. He is next in succession to the Russian throne to Alexis, only son of the former Emperor.

Six Thousand Belgian Civilians Died during War

(Canadian Press.)

BRUSSELS, March 28. —Six thousand Belgian civilians died during the war as the result of German ill-treatment, according to an official report made in the Chamber of Deputies on Thursday.

Seven thousand children were made orphans. Indemnity which can be claimed from Germany by Belgians on this account is estimated at nine hundred million francs. The Minister of Economic Affairs declared that all damages will be fully indemnified by the Germans.

Guilty Parties To Be Tried

Former Emperor William Will Be Among the Number.

Canadian Press

PARIS, March ... —Former Emperor William and ... Crown Prince Frederick William will be among those who will be tried by high court which the German National Assembly will create, Paris newspapers say. ... Foreign Minister Zimmerman also will be brought before the court.

A Berlin despatch on Thursday reported that the German Government would create a court of investigation for Germans accused of crimes during the war who had requested investigation into their cases.

OBITUARY

JOHN LANCASTER

Mr. John Lancaster, a much respected and well known resident of the Westwood neighborhood, died on Thursday last at the age of 76 years. The late Mr. Lancaster had been in failing health for some time. He was a prominent and successful farmer and some years ago contested East Peterboro in the Conservative interest for Legislative honors, but failed to carry the constituency. TWO DESERTERS FINED IN POLICE COURT YESTERDAY.

James Roy McGlynn, 201 Rutherford Avenue, was fined $250 and $14.10 costs in Police Court yesterday afternoon, charged with being a defaulter under the M.S.A. McGlynn claimed that he did not receive a notice to report, but the military police gave evidence showing that McGlynn refused to sign for the registered notice to report for duty.

Andrew Crawford of Kirkfield, Ont., also a defaulter, was fined $300, with $14.10 costs.

Chaperon at Trinity To-night

A Tableau of Unusual Beauty Will Be Presented.

With the splendid training the girls have received the Gilmore Irish whist ... they have worked to have the affair a real success, and the really interesting and cleverly worked out plot, the "Chaperon" which will be presented to-night by the "Whatsoever" Class of Trinity Methodist Church in the Reid Street Hall promises to be a stirring success. The play deals with the pranks of the pupils of a school, and has all the interesting characters to be found in an Old Country town, and is delightfully humorous and catchy. At the conclusion of the play a tableau of unusual beauty will be presented.

THE WIND BLEW BILLBOARD DOWN.

Last night's cold snap was followed by a cold wind which lasted for the greater part of the day. A billboard on Simcoe street between Bethune and Aylmer streets, on the north side was levelled to the ground and a couple of pedestrians who were passing at the time, had a narrow escape. Finer and more moderate weather is promised for to-morrow.

GRAIN MARKET

Cash markets for all the coarse grains continue to make sharp declines. Cash corn at St. Louis was 8c. lower, and 3c. to 4c. lower at Chicago. Oats and barley followed suit, each making substantial declines. "Modern Miller" is tearish, and reports wheat plants in fine condition. Transport difficulties stand in the way of an active export movement for corn and oats. The option markets closed weak and lower.

PETTY POLITICS ARE REACHING BOILING POINT IN THE ARMY

General Staff Accused of Playing Favorites in Promotions and Reductions—Startling Cases Exposed.

BROAD INQUIRY

NEW YORK, March 29.—The United States Army to-day is a seething mass of petty politics. Officers of high rank, particularly in Washington, are figuratively cutting one another's throats in an effort to retain their present position and come out on top when the peace time reorganization becomes effective.

Officers who stood in the way of a certain limited group now in power are being thrown into the discard without regard to their records, relegated to unimportant assignments with reduced rank wherever it is possible to find an excuse for such action. These professional soldiers are doing everything in their power to get competitors out of the way, hoping to dispose of them definitely for a considerable time to come.

These are the cold, hard facts of a situation which has been developing almost from the time of the signing of the armistice.

Members of Congress are fully aware of what is going on and it is evident to-day that one of the first steps taken when Congress reconvenes will be a sweeping investigation of the entire army system.

Bread Inquiry Promised

Up to the present Congressional interest has been limited to the Ansell case, the Allen charges, the question of extravagant expenditures and matters regarded as important incidents in a general condition. Not however, according to word which reached the Herald to-day; Congress intends to conduct the investigation along the broadest possible lines, looking into every nook and corner of the War Department.

Frankly, the General Staff is to be the prime target of the investigation. The charge is being made openly that the General Staff within the last few months has assumed an authority of the most unheard of character, conducting itself along lines which are fully as autocratic as those of the great German General Staff.

To get to the bottom of situation, it is necessary to understand the army organization as it existed before the war, with its General Staff and its various staff corps, each organized to perform special duties, such as the Ordnance Department to provide arms and ammunition; the Signal Corps, to provide means of communication for the army; the Q.-Master Corps, to provide foodstuffs and clothing, and the Engineers, to build roads, bridges and fortifications. Congress appropriated funds to be expended for specific purposes for each of the staff corps.

Then, when the United States entered the war it became necessary, in some instances, to affect new organizations, such as the Motor Transport Corps, the Chemical Warfare Service and the Purchase, Storage and Traffic branch of the General Staff. In each of these instances the new corps was made a part of the General Staff, accountable directly to that organization. The addition of each of these new services built up the power of the General Staff.

The creation of the Purchase, Storage and Traffic Service resulted in the transfer from the permanent staff corps of some of its authority to make purchases. Each step has been in the direction of concentrating power under one head, and consequently in the hands of the General Staff. The reason assigned was increased efficiency.

Startling Cases Exposed

More recently, however, the attitude of the General Staff with regard to some efficient officers in high positions has attracted criticism. It is true that it has been necessary, as a matter of policy in demobilization, to return some of the officers who held high temporary rank to their permanent grade, and it also is true that before many months elapse a great many more officers will return to their previous rank.

Nevertheless, it is significant that there are some startling cases where officers were set back in the face of excellent records, apparently for no other reason than that they had incurred the disfavor of the General Staff, while other officers who had done nothing much to speak of are permitted to remain brigadier generals and major generals.

One of the striking instances of this is the retrieval of William L. Kenly, who as Director of Military Aeronautics held the rank of major general, and upon reduction to his peace time rank of colonel of artillery, General Kenly incurred the enmity of the General Staff and he paid the price although he had directed the American Air Fighting Service during the critical period of the war and had been one of the prime factors in the development of military aviators.

Another notable instance is the removal of Samuel T. Ansell as Acting Judge Advocate General, where he held the rank of brigadier general and his return to the grade of lieutenant colonel. He, too, incurred the enmity of the General Staff by revealing the system of courts martial.

Minimizing the Opposition.

In peace time officers of the regular establishment struggled along for years as second lieutenants, first lieutenants and captains and then up; Congressional influences sometimes helped officers along, at other times it simply was a case of team work by individual cliques.

When the war came the entire regular officer establishment received temporary promotion. There was no general system in the elevation. Some lieutenants found themselves colonels majors became brigadier generals. Now comes the job of getting the officers back to their old stations. In order to retain as high rank as possible in the hope of faring better in the permanent reorganization some of the higher officers are scheming and plotting and pulling wires.

How the Scrap Started.

CATTLE MARKET

The opening for this week's market was slow, with a tendency to lower levels. There was a moderately heavy run of cattle offering, with a large proportion of poor stuff. High prices were asked, but buyers were not at all keen to pay the price. There was practically no demand for heavy steers, the export buyers being out of the market for the first couple of days. Bidding was from 50c. to 75c. lower all round. By mid-week conditions had changed. There was a strong and active demand for all offerings. Besides a good market for heavy export steers and other choice export stuff a strong active market for stockers and feeders for country points sprang up. At the close of the market on Thursday prices were fully up to the previous week's levels in practically all grades of cattle.

Calves were steady.

Sheep and lambs strong and firm.

Hogs were firm in an unsettled market but the feeling was that packers would have to make some advance on their former bids.

PRINCE ALBERT IS GIVEN FORTY-FIVE YEARS TO PAY.

REGINA, Sask., March 24.—Settlement has been arrived at between the representatives of the city of Prince Albert and the delegation representing the holders of the city's bonds and the terms are being drafted in the form of an agreement for presentation and signatures of the two parties. The terms were agreed upon after a conference lasting all day.

Under the terms of the new agreement all the bonds of the city are being consolidated and spread over a period of 45 years. Interest at the rate of one per cent. will be charged for the first [illegible] years; two per cent. for [illegible] years, and three per cent. for the next [illegible] years, and so on. A provision is also made that should the city find itself in a position where it cannot pay the increased rate of interest after the first five-year term, an appeal may be made to the Local Government Board which will adjust the rate of interest according to the city's ability to pay.

GRAY DORT

The Ultimate in Value

Motorists who come to the Gray Dort after having driven other cars, find in the Gray Dort—whether they previously paid more or less—that the Gray Dort offers the highest value.

This is the direct result of the basic policy of our business—to build a fine light car, completely satisfying, sturdy, economical. That we are able to sell such a car at a low price is due entirely to the unequalled efficiency of our factory.

Undoubtedly, you too will come some day to the Gray Dort as the ultimate in value. You will demand the speed, power, quietness of the Gray Dort motor; the roominess and comfort of the Gray Dort body; the standard equipment. You will not find these things at a lower price. You need not pay a higher.

The touring car is $1245; the Gray Dort Special—the car with added refinements and extra equipment, is $1[illegible] extra; there are also coupe, and a sedan. All prices f.o.b. Chatham and are subject to change without notice.

The Temperamental Kaiser.

Herr Ballin was noted for the extravagant dinners which he gave on great occasions, says the Edinburgh Scotsman. Probably the most magnificent of all was that which he arranged to grace the wedding of the Kaiser's daughter to the Duke of Brunswick. The floral decorations alone cost $10,000, the dinner worked out at about $85 a plate, and the wines at about $30. But the dinner from Herr Ballin's point of view was a failure, for the Kaiser and Kaiserin, who were to have been present, sent word in the afternoon that they could not come; and it was in their honor, of course, that Herr Ballin had spent his thousands on the banquet. One of his servants has said that when Herr Ballin received the message that the Emperor could not come, he flew into a tremendous rage. He sent for his butler, and ere the man had reach Herr Ballin's study, his master shouted out to him: "The Emperor cannot come to dinner—put the whole show off!" and then slammed the door. The butler did not know exactly what to do. To put off so important guests as were to be present was, of course, an impossibility; but no one in the household dared to approach the master of it to suggest this. However, at about five o'clock Herr Ballin had sufficiently recovered his temper to come downstairs and give some necessary directions about the banquet.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

The End of the Old and the Beginning of the New Life.

CHAPTER CLVI.

That all things come to them who faithfully work and have patience to wait, seemed about to be the case for Brian. Through Mr. Mandel's influence, clients came to him as the days passed— paying clients who helped him have confidence in himself and in his earning power. A feeling he had almost lost when his country called him.

Major Williams was a constant visitor. So, very often, was Mollie King, who had not given up her war work with the coming of peace, but who, the Major declared, "worked harder than she did overseas."

Mollie was working in one of the large base hospitals which had been established in New York. She had taken a room in a private family, and whatever time she could spare from her work she gave to her fiance, who grumbled that the most uninteresting private, if he had been gassed or wounded, had first place in Mollie's affections, and first claim on her time. But Mollie only laughed and went quietly on her way, knowing the man she had promised to marry not only understood, but approved.

Only once did Ruth and Mollie refer in any way to what had happened in the days when Brian used to go to the little Greenwich Village studio. They were alone, one evening, waiting for Brian and the Major when something concerning an escapade of some one they knew, caused Mollie to say:

"If married women only knew that half the time they were jealous without reason, there would be fewer divorces, less scandal. Why, half the time when a married man goes to another woman, gives her his time, buys her dinners, it is either because he is piqued or bored at home. In your case, Ruth—Oh, don't look like that, and don't blush, there is no need. In your case, Brian was piqued. Not knowing you well, I, of course thought him bored. I thought you did not care for him, that your work absorbed you. But I am going to confess right now that many times I wished Brian would stay at home. But I felt sorry for him; I thought he needed sympathy from some one, and although often I gave up doing things which I wanted to do for him, I knew he was safe with me. I had known him so long, Ruth, I wanted him to keep straight."

"And to think I thought you the only person who would lead him astray!" Ruth responded, a rueful look on her face.

"Well it's all over and past now, and we are both happy as can be. I am very grateful, Ruth. Grateful for your friendship, for Brian's. He has improved wonderfully —he will be a big man in his profession some day. And I am so grateful for the Major's love. To think that such a man should care for me, makes me feel very humble."

"When are you going to marry him?"

"That's what I want to know!" The Major and Brian had entered very quietly. The two women had been so interested, they had not heard them.

Mollie blushed delightfully, and looked so pretty that Ruth exclaimed enthusiastically:

"I don't blame you, Major! If I were in your place I should carry her off in spite of herself."

"Perhaps I shall some day, if"—

"Please listen to me," Ruth broke in. "I want you to be married here. Rachel will get up a wedding supper. Please do not refuse me, Mollie. My heart is set on giving you your wedding."

Tears came into Mollie's eyes.

"I had not hoped to have a wedding," she said unsteadily. "I have no one to give me one—no relatives, I mean. It is a wonderful thing for you to make such an offer, Ruth"—

"Then you will let me?"

"May a mere man ask just when you can persuade this stubborn little creature to let you do this for her?"

"Come Mollie, be game! fix the date right now and put us out of misery." Brian had kept still as long as possible.

"In April," she finally said, her face covered with blushes, her eyes shining like twin stars. "By that time I can be better spared. My 'boys' in the hospital will, many of them, be gone by that time. I couldn't desert them sooner."

"You see how it is," the Major interrupted, "I shall always be a jealous husband, jealous of Uncle Sam's sons."

"And I, I never shall be jealous again. I shall only be thankful that I have been spared to 'make good' at home as well as 'over there'," said Brian.

"We will trust each other, so must you and Mollie," Ruth said quietly. "Only in that way can a husband and wife know true happiness together."

"There is Rachel calling us to dinner. Now that we have settled all the future, let's get busy with the present and eat," Brian said brightly, and his arm closed tightly about Ruth's waist as they walked into the dining room.

THE END.

A new story by Jane Phelps, entitled "The Promoter's Wife," will be given next. This is a story of a small-town girl, who marries a city-bred young man upon slight acquaintance. The young wife's discovery that her husband's business methods are not always honourable, and her struggle to save their love, unmarred, from the ruins of a bad start, make a story which every man and woman should read.

BEAUTIFUL DALMATIA

TWO CLAIMANTS FOR THIS SPLENDID COUNTRY.

People Have Not Developed Strong National Feeling That Is Found Among Their Balkan Neighbors —Two Famous Dalmatians Established Their Names Among the Great Scientists of Their Own Generation.

SMALL wonder that Dalmatia should form one of the most sharply contested regions in the rival Italian and Jugo-Slav claims for this strip of seacoast land, for eight centuries, has been swept by continuous racial tempests. With an area about equal to a half dozen Ontario counties, Dalmatia is so elongated that nowhere is it more than 35 miles wide, and it tapers down to but a mile at Cattero. With a climate of extreme temperatures, hot and dry when the sirocco (hot southeast wind) sweeps over it, cold and wet when the dread bora, or "wind of the dead," comes from the sea, and terrorizes mariners along its shores, peasants find life a struggle. The land is not fertile, much of it is not arable at all, and a common rural picture is that of men and women cultivating grapes and figs and olives on terraces on the sides of the frequent hills.

Perhaps that is why these women, so far as their work is concerned, are sturdy and docile, and willingly lend themselves as burden-bearers and tillers. They are primitive enough to find relaxation in festivals, weddings, funerals, and fetes, and at such times they form the picturesque groups Dalmatian travelers tell about, with bright colored costumes, headpieces decorated with coins and dresses bedecked with jewels.

The Croats and Serbians constitute the Slavic element in Dalmatia. They speak the same language but employ two alphabets. The Serbs use the Russian and the Croats the Latin letters and alphabet. In the cities the Latin influence is more prevalent. The reason therefor is the story of Dalmatia.

In the middle ages the Dalmatians were a people without the consciousness of a country. During the Slax influx into Illyria the invaders encountered little opposition, even in Dalmatia, except in the seaport towns. The Latin element in the cities resisted the migration and thus engendered the strife for supremacy which persists to this day. Much of the early rivalry was economic. Tradesmen and farmers naturally wished to exchange their goods with the Hungarians. The maritime cities preferred to do business with Venice, which controlled the Adriatic.

Though Dalmatia did not develop the strong national feeling of her Balkan neighbors, because of her mixed population, she made rapid strides in science and literature. But the story of her culture is one of personal achievement, rather than public advancement. Thus it came about that the early seat of Balkan culture had no printing press in its largest city, Zara, until 1736; and, in the eighteenth century, Venetian Dalmatia had only one public school.

One famous son of Dalmatia was Roger Joseph Boscovich, esteemed by scientists for his work setting forth a new atomic theory, but more popularly known because of the adoption of his plan for assuring the uprightness of the dome of St. Peter's at Rome, when a crack was discovered in it. He taught, experimented, wrote numerous treatises, went on a diplomatic mission to England when the neutrality of his native city, Ragusa, was questioned, and wrote verse as voluminously, but not so successfully, as he wrote scientific works. Upon one occasion he penned 5,000 Latin lines to set forth the fundamentals of astronomy with copious footnotes, which scientists asserted were not helpful to them, and which the public apparently did not find readable.

Marco Antonio de Dominis mingled theology and natural philosophy with serious consequences to himself. He set forth the first correct explanation of the rainbow. But his theological career was less fruitful. As Archbishop of Spalato, he attacked his ecclesiastical superiors in his writings, fled to England, returned to Rome and did penance with a rope about his neck in St. Peter's, and wrote a book refuting his heretical works. He was tried by the Inquisition. He died before the trial was ended, but the trial went on. He was sentenced, two months after his death, to be dragged through the streets of Rome and to be burned publicly. His body was removed from its coffin and the sentence executed.

Dalmatia's beauties have been recounted by many travelers. Among the scores of islands off its coast are many rich in history, such as Brazza and Lesina. Where Roman and Greek relics are to be found: Busi, with its ten caverns, the most beautiful of which is the Blue Grotto, entered by boat; and Lacroma, off Ragusa, where Richard Coeur de Lion is said to have found a haven during a storm on his return from the Crusades, and to have built a church there in compliance with a vow so to honor the place of refuge.

When she came to the paragraph providing that she should have transportation for herself, maid, dog and Sir. Gazibeani, her husband, she drew a line through the signor's name.

"Just put that husband," she ordered.

"Yes, madam," assented the manager. "But why, if I may ask?"

The diva blushed and coyly fingered her hair. "I may wish to make a change," she answered.

Clemenceau Seeks Rest From Affairs of State On Stormy Ocean's Shore

HOW does Premier Clemenceau spend his spare moments? How does he gain rest and relaxation from work? The question is answered in characteristic fashion in a recent number of L'Illustration, from which the following is taken:

To rest upon one's laurels is an essentially conventional expression. Yet fame and rest never have effected a lasting combination. The more famous a man becomes the poorer his chance of enjoying even a moment's relief.

The Premier has just passed through such an experience. He could impose an armistice upon Germany, but he could not sign it without having the reporters and photographers turned loose upon him. Thinking that after so mighty an effort and so exciting a game he had earned a few days' vacation for solitude and recuperation, the conquering "Tiger," at one bound, put 600 kilometres between the sympathetic inquisitiveness of Paris and his quiet retreat. Foolish precaution! His trail was at once picked up, and as soon as he reached the quiet home of his friend, M. Michel Philipon, at Tranche-sur-Mer, he was promptly surrounded by a crowd of bold companions armed with fountain pens, camera plates, and flashlights, who forced him, for the first time in his life, to cry "kamerad" and beg for mercy.

Such is the price of fame. History must be served. It will not permit a famous man to conceal the slightest detail of his life. It is interested in the recreation of M. Clemenceau quite as much as in his work. How does the man who made war contrive to have "peace in his own home"? How does he occupy his leisure time? Does he play golf, like Mr. Balfour? Does he get his fun out of setting traps for the wily inhabitants of the deep, like M. Aristide Briand? Tell me how you spend your free moments. The psychologists have never been very successful in drawing wise conclusions from that.

But in the case of M. Clemenceau they would not be wasting their time. Our ferocious fighter maintains, even in his moments of relaxation, a perfectly consistent attitude. The peace-loving statesman soothes his nerves by hitting the golf ball with the little iron-headed "club"; M. Briand, when weary with oratorical victories, seeks in his favorite sport the joys of a silent strategy. Both find rest in laying aside their natural habits of intellectual activity.

Georges Clemenceau, on the contrary, seeks in his leisure the very thing that lures him to work — the strife, the struggle, the victory over opposition. It is his great delight to walk upon the beach at Vendee exposed to the stinging lash of wind and surf. Having no more men to conquer, it amuses him to rise triumphant over the elements. The sight of the tossing waves, the waves that beat and break, that curl and crash—does it not remind him of the great waves of men which hurled themselves in vain upon our land? That mighty beating comes from the everlasting war which the floods wage upon crag and cliff. That never-ceasing roar—it is the roar of the multitude which the great popular leader has so often dominated by the authority of a mere word or by some distinguished achievement. Thus in bending his body to the gale and the spray he supplies us with the symbol of his career, of his whole life.

A grateful nation has taken this venerable image and set it up as the very figurehead of the great French ship of state. It was that strong face, eyes aflame and brows bristling, that braved the waves whenever our ship was buffeted by contrary winds, upon a sea of blood. It is that figure which fixes itself in our thoughts as we gaze upon the aged man braving the blasts with a strength that knows no breaking.

Is there not in this silent pastime of the old fighter a most powerful and eloquent appeal?

With a population estimated at 600,000 and an area approximately equal to that of Pennsylvania, Honduras has abundant room for development. It has a tropical climate with few of the usual disadvantages. The interior is mountainous and salubrious, with considerable rich land suitable for diversified farming and fruit growing, while all of the remainder, even the deep mountain slopes, is used for pasturage.

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons From Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at Once if Bilious or Constipated

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless 'fruit laxative;' they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

CAN SUPPLY FISH.

Newfoundland Desires Markets In Old Country.

Dr. Lloyd, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, presided at a luncheon which was given at the Russell Hotel, London, England, by the North Atlantic Fisheries Co., to inaugurate the first shipment of chilled fish from Newfoundland. The menu included salmon, caplin, turbot, haddock and cod, which had recently been brought over from Newfoundland.

The chairman said that, owing to the war, Newfoundland had been badly handicapped in regard to her fish and oil products. The Harmsworths had had two steamers carrying paper and pulp products to Great Britain, but these had been taken away for other purposes, which meant that their company had been running at a loss, which was not particularly good for the company or for Newfoundland. For four years, therefore, Newfoundland had practically been excluded from the British markets, while Norway and Iceland had received preferential treatment. They asked, for instance, that Britain would regard their products—their fishstuffs—as worthy of acceptance. At present there was a period of transition and difficulty all over the world with regard to foodstuffs and shipping. And if aid could be given by the Government to Newfoundland it was only what was due to them for the little bit they had done in the war.

Lord Morris, former Prime Minister of Newfoundland, said that the fisheries of the island were more valuable than the gold mines of Peru. It was the first time in the history of the colony that they had sent any chilled fish out of the country. If they did away with the old method of cold storage, the fisherman would be able to deal with three times the quantity without the cost of curing and salting. For years he had been advocating this method, but he had found it very difficult to get people to take up these new ideas. The fish that had been brought over for that luncheon had been brought largely owing to the efforts of Major Green, who during the war had been in charge of the department for bringing over Canadian fish for the Canadian army. Mr. Harmsworth and others present had been most sympathetic and interested in the matter.

Sir Edgar Bowring congratulated Lord Morris on what he had done to extend the fishery trade of Newfoundland. There was, he said, a very large outlook for that trade especially now that it had been proved that fresh fish could be brought over. Newfoundland had attained a wonderful state of prosperity, and that position was likely to be maintained, judging from the tremendous quantity of fish of all sorts that abounded in her waters.

Mr. Moreton Frewen said he believed that the food problem of Great Britain could be solved by the ocean. Unless they ate much more fish and much less meat they would arrive at a perilous predicament. The Resources Commission were negotiating for the development of their fisheries, but they had come across a very strong prejudice in the case of Ireland and Scotland, who did not wish to centralize their fisheries. Never was there a greater mistake. If they only cultivated these waters and spent money with intelligence, the food supply would no longer present any problem. He believed that the consumption of fish could be increased from 1½ ounces per head per day to seven ounces, whereas the present average consumption of meat was 7½ ounces per days. If they thus brought down the quantity of meat consumed to four ounces daily, and gave the state a penny a pound for cold storage, they would get sufficient money to pay the navy estimates.

Sir William Goode promised to bring to the notice of the authorities the question of supplying chilled fish.

Largest Aircraft Owner.

The entire aircraft equipment provided by Great Britain at a cost of more than $10,000,000 for training Canadian aviators in the Dominion during the war, has been bought from the British Government by Roy U. Conger, a New York business man. One use to which the equipment would be put, it was said, was immediate development of commercial airplane routes in Canada.

The deal was closed in Toronto when Mr. Conger, a nephew of E. H. Conger, U. S. Minister to China a.

The time of the Boxer rebellion, handed a certified cheque to Sir Joseph Flavelle, representing the British Ministry of Munitions, and Director Morrow, of the Imperial Aircraft Board. Through the transaction Mr. Conger becomes the greatest individual owner of airplanes and airplane equipment in the world, while it is said that only Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States own more machines.

National Flower Wanted.

Selection of a national flower for Canada will be urged upon Government and people during the coming year with great insistence, if plans approved at the convention of the Ontario Horticultural Association are carried out with anything like the enthusiasm which greeted the motions looking to plans for action in this regard.

Horticulturists do not consider that the animal emblem, the beaver, and the more recent tree emblem, the maple leaf, provide sufficient or the right sort of emblem for a country which boasts such an array of beautiful flowers. A floral emblem for Ontario is also to be sought, having regard for the pre-eminence of this province in wild flowers.

The basic requirement of each emblem to be chosen is that it must be a native wild flower. This leaves a wide field, and a lively controversy is expected.

How To Send Your Solutions.

Use only one side of the paper that contains names of the great men represented by the pictures, and put your name and address (stating Mr., Mrs. or Miss) in the upper right-hand corner. If you wish to write anything but your answers, use a separate sheet of paper. Attach this to your completed pictures clipped from this paper.

Three independent judges, having no connection whatever with this firm, will award the prizes, and the answers gaining 500 points will take the First Prize. You will get 25 points for every picture completed correctly and 25 points for every name solved correctly. 15 points will be awarded for general neatness, style, spelling, punctuation, etc., 10 points for handwriting, and 75 points for fulfilling the conditions of the contest. Contestants must agree to abide by the decision of the judges.

The contest will close at 12 o'clock noon, August 30th, 1919, immediately after which the prizes will be awarded and the prizes announced. Address your answers to Contest Department, Continental Publishing Co., Limited, Continental Building, Toronto, Ont.

THE SPRING TONIC FOR PALE, THIN PEOPLE

IF YOU WANT TO GAIN IN WEIGHT AND RECOVER YOUR APPETITE, ENERGY AND AMBITION, TRY THIS WELL KNOWN REMEDY

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. The body lacks that vital force and energy which pure blood alone can give. In a word, while not exactly sick, the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon them, and a blood-building, nerve-restoring tonic is needed to give renewed health and energy. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an all-year-round builder and nerve tonic, but they are especially useful in the spring. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood, and with this new blood returning strength, cheerfulness and good health quickly follows.

If you are pale and sallow, easily tired, or breathless at the least exertion; if your complexion is poor, or if you are troubled with pimples or eruptions; Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just what you need to put you right. If you have twinges of rheumatism, are subject to headaches or backaches, if you are irritable or nervous, if your sleep does not refresh you, or your appetite is poor, you need the treatment which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone can give—you need the new blood, new health and new energy this medicine always brings.

A COMPLETE WRECK.

Mrs. C. Forsythe, R. R. No. 9, Fisherville, Ont., says: "At the age of fourteen my daughter Viola was feeling very much run down in the spring. Then she was attacked with whooping cough which left her a complete wreck. She had no appeite, could not sleep well nights and was subject to chills which sometimes kept her in bed for the day. She was doctoring steadily, but not apparently getting the least benefit, and I naturally grew very anxious. One of my neighbors suggested giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a box. When she began using the pills she weighed only 87 pounds. Before the box was all gone I sent and got six more boxes, and under their use she constantly grew stronger. Her appetite improved, the color came back to her cheeks, she could sleep well, and feels and looks like a different person, and with all this while using the pills she gained 20 pounds in weight."

A SALLOW COMPLEXION.

Miss Gladys Marshall, Chatham, Ont., says: "I suffered from nervousness and my blood was in a very poor condition. My face broke out in pimples and my complexion was very sallow. I took doctors' medicine but without beneficial results. I was feeling much discouraged when a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I used in all six boxes, and was overjoyed to find that my complexion had become quite clear, pimples had disappeared, my nerves were strengthened and my old-time health and ambition returned. I shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

GAINED IN WEIGHT.

Mrs. M. B. Rickert, Kitchener, Ont., says: "I was weak, run down, and losing weight when I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I took the pills steadily for a month, and the difference they made in my condition was most gratifying. I gained both in strength and weight, and feel since I used the pills like a new person. I also recommend the use of the pills to my daughter-in-law, who was pale, thin and weak. When she began using the pills she weighed only 103 pounds and when she discontinued their use she weighed 137 pounds. For all weak people I think there is no medicine an equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

A SPRING COLD.

Mrs. Chas. Winegarden, Delhi, Ont., says: "Last spring my daughter Ruby was taken with a bad cold. She seemed weak, had a constant pain in her side, grew pale, and as the remedies usually used in cases of this kind did not help her we feared she was going into a decline. I decided to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got six boxes. Before she had used them all, she was again well and strong. The cough had left her, she had a good appetite, the pain in her side disappeared, and a nice rosy colour had returned to her cheeks. I have therefore much reason to speak warmly in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Notwithstanding the increased cost of all drugs, there has been no change in the price of our Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They can be had through any medicine dealer at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, or will be sent on receipt of price by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Six Suitors on Way to Holland Hope to Marry One of Three Losers Will Act as Best Men at Triple Wedding

SAN FRANCISCO, —Three sisters in Holland will have a serious question to decide, or rather six serious questions, in a couple of weeks when six wealthy young Dutch planters from Java who arrived here on the Siberia Maru reach the Netherlands:

Each one of the six expects to marry one of the three, and each one is certain that one of his rivals will be nothing better than best man.

Five years ago the six planters laid siege to the hearts of the three Misses Van Fesnigen. Unable to choose the three girls finally told their suitors to go back to Batavia and make their fortunes. The men were told that the first three to accumulate riches would be the winners.

Now it seems that all six of them have been successful in the pursuit of wealth, so much so, according to Pruser C. N. Ludvigsen, of the Siberia Maru, that the poorest of them has something more than $1,000,000. Through it all the three sets of rivals have remained good friends. They are going back as a party to pop the question again before the Dutch maidens. Each is sure that he will win. Nevertheless, they have entered into a compact that each of the three losers will act as best man for his winning rival.

The six planters who have made their money in rubber and tobacco, are L. A. den Bergen, C. S. N. Van Gennep, J. Horsting and H. J. Pepoings.

There are some foolish, trusting men who can read over the recipe for mince pie, and then imagine they know what it is made of.

DEPTHS OF IGNORANCE

BRIEF STUDY OF HOW LITTLE ONE KNOWS.

Writer In "The New Statesman" Investigates His Own Lack of Knowledge and Points a Moral That Ought to Be Studied With Benefit by Every Person Who Thinks That He "Knows It All."

IGNORANCE is at times an amusing quality. One got a certain pleasure the other day from finding in one of the afternoon papers a paragraph headed: "Was at the Black Hole of Calcutta," which announced that a Sergt. Roberts, who died recently at Addlestown, "assisted to fetch but the victims from the Black Hole of Calcutta." One positively rejoiced the following morning when a leading daily paper added a pinch of corroborative detail to the story and declared that the gallant soldier was "in his seventeenth year" at the time of his famous rescue exploit. It is not that the blunder is an unusual one. At least three Englishmen out of four, we fancy, have a hazy notion that the tragedy of the Black Hole was one of the incidents of the Indian mutiny. When the jubilee (as the Daily Telegraph called it) of the Indian mutiny was celebrated recently, an English peer made a speech in which he took it for granted that the incident of the Black Hole was only fifty years old instead of happening, as it did, in 1756. This, we think, gives a fair enough measure of the general ignorance of the facts of history. "Every schoolboy knows," said Macaulay in his most famous sentence, "who imprisoned Montezuma, and who strangled Atahualpa." Every schoolboy, as any examiner can tell you, knows nothing of the sort. The schoolboy who had even heard of Atahualpa would be regarded with awe by his friends and relatives as one predestined to a great career. The ordinary schoolboy thinks himself lucky if he can remember something about Alfred and the buns, and Harold and the arrow, and whether it was Henry VIII who had six wives or Henry VI who had eight. His taste in historical events is simple. All he asks is to be quite sure of such things as that the battle of Hastings and Warren Hastings did not occur in the same century.

As to Atahualpa, you might as well ask him who was Gegnaesius the Armenian, or Baanes, nicknamed the Dirty. These things like the question what song the sirens sang, and what name Achilles assumed when he hid himself among women, though puzzling questions, are not, as Sir Thomas Browne says, beyond all conjecture. But they are far beyond the limits of the average English schoolboy's curiosity. History is already sufficiently crowded with bald and unconvincing names to destroy his appetite for more of the same kind. What he learns he learns mechanically, and not with his imagination. And, as soon as it ceases to be compulsory to remember it he casts it from his mind like a burden. Hence the comprehensive and never-to-be-sufficiently-admired ignorance of men and women. There are hundreds of thousands of men and women who do not know whether Homer was a Greek or a Latin poet, and a friend of ours once met a man in a theatre who believed that Shakespeare wrote the Pickwick Papers. But these are blunders of the comparatively learned. The ignorance of ignorant people goes far deeper than this. One finds astonishing examples of ignorance not only of the facts of history, but of the commonest facts of the world about us. It would be an interesting amusement in any company for each person present to relate the most surprising example of adult ignorance that had come within his personal experience. We once met a woman in London who was ignorant of the fact that wood comes from trees. We found an old woman in County Donegal who had never heard of the city of Dublin. Joseph Hocking, describing his recruiting experiences in Cornwall in the early months of the war, affirmed that some people had asked him whether Lord Kitchener was the head of the British or the German army. So incredible is ignorance of this kind that one can hardly help suspecting that somebody has been successfully pulling a leg. But the ignorance of the average man is genuine enough. He has no use to affect ignorance for a sport. If one were bold enough to turn catechist in a crowded bus and demand of every one present the dates of the murder of Julius Caesar, Magna Charta, and the French Revolution, we doubt if more than two persons would be able to name even the century in which each event had happened. We are for the most part inclined to take the world's past as read, and to proceed to the amusements of the present. What does it matter if we think that Milton's Christian name was Thomas, seeing that our evening will be spent not in reading "Paradise Lost," but in seeing "The Beast of Berlin" in the moving pictures?

Having arrived at this point, the present writer resolved to put his own ignorance to the test, and for this purpose took down a volume of the Encyclopedia Britannica and opened it at random. The first article that met his eye was on the subject of the Bogomils. How many honest men can say they know anything about the Bogomils? Are they a range of mountains, a breed of ducks, or a tribe of gypsies of the desert? Even an average bishop might hesitate before consenting to write an essay on them. That they were a community of heretics, a sort of Bulgarian Albegenses, he might be vaguely aware; but we doubt if even the Archbishop of Canterbury could have told you that "under Turkish rule the Bogomils lived unmolested as Pavlikeni in their ancient stronghold near Philippopolis." We confess frankly we know no more of this than of the date of the flood. The next subject dealt with in the encyclopedia was Bogorodsk. The ending of the word might have told one that this was somewhere in Russia; but as to its population, its place on the map, and its chief manufacturers, Adam and Eve were not more ignorant than the present writer. And yet the encyclopedia declares that it is "famous" for its gold brocade. Then came a short article on the Bogos, or the Bilens, as they are unenlighteningly described in parentheses. We had passed at least half a lifetime without even having heard of them. Here was a pastoral race of mixed Hamitic descent, living somewhere in Abyssinia, that might have disappeared from the map without our being a penny the wiser. And yet the Bogos are an interesting people. "The eldest son of a Shumagilleh"—a Bogo "elder"—"inherits his father's two-edged sword, white cows, lands, and slaves, but the house goes to the youngest son. The Bogo husband never sees the face or pronounces the name of his mother-in-law, while it is a crime for a wife to utter her husband's or father-in-law's name." As we read this for the first time, we instinctively echoed Lloyd George's great cry, "Why did nobody tell me about it?"

Bogota, the next subject on the list, brought us back within our depth again. We had at least heard of Bogota. We once had a friend who used to write leaderettes on the politics of Bogota when he was short of a topic. But though we had read scores of these leaderettes, we had remained ignorant of the fact that Bogota has been called "the Athens of South America." We did not even know that the plain on which the city is built "was the centre of Chibcha civilization before the Spanish conquest." Chibcha civilization has never, as the vulgar say, been one of our strong suits. After Bogota, Bogra, Bogra, it appears, is an Indian town situated on a river we had never heard of, the Karatova. From Bogra we pass hopefully to the next subject, "Bogue, David (1750-1825), British Nonconformist divine," who, we are informed, "was born in the parish of Coldingham, Berwickshire." We feel that we ought to have heard of David Bogue. Along with James Bennet, he wrote a History of Dissenters, which, according to the encyclopedia, is "well known." As we advance from one evidence of our ignorance to another, we begin, like Socrates, to think that the only thing we know is that we know nothing. Even the encyclopedia confesses its ignorance when it comes to the next word, "Bogus," which, it declares, "is of uncertain origin, possibly connected with the French bagasse, sugar-cane refuse." Our own ignorance on the subject is so dense that we could not have guessed even at this strange possibility. Then comes Bohea, which we knew was a kind of tea, but which we learned for the first time was "a word derived from the Wu-i Hills in the Fukkien Province of China, 'b' being substituted for 'w' or 'v'." Until you read the sentence a second time, it sounds as mad as abracadabra. But it does a great deal of this or any other encyclopedia in the ear of a man ignorant of facts. The greater part of knowledge is a foreign language to the majority of us. We can no more assimilate it than we can chew the cans or the woodblocks of the street pavement.

Man is born ignorant, and he goes ignorant to his grave. That is at once his tragedy and his comedy. It is at once his tragedy and his comedy. It is tragic because with knowledge he could do so much. It is comic because he attempts to make up for his ignorance by dogmatic pretentiousness. For the ignorant man lays down the law as dogmatically as the man who has tried to learn—more dogmatically, indeed, as a rule. There are no people who will tell you how to settle the affairs of Russia or India or Ireland with the same confidence as some perfect ignoramus who would hardly know of the existence of the countries were it not that they were occasionally mentioned in the papers. Nothing is so immodest as ignorance. Were ignorance self-conscious and able to blush, a new hope would dawn for the human race. We are now in the brass age, when everyone bellows and no one blushes. The entire future of this magnificent planet depends on the chance that, amid the millions of cheerful cinematograph-haunting, revue-going, picture-paper-reading, careless human beings there are a few thousand discontented creatures somewhere esurient after knowledge, greedy to know the name of things (if it is only of germs or Greek figures of speech, or the bones of an owl's leg, or the races of man), and eager to relate one fact to another till these become, in an adaptation of Browning's phrase, not a third fact but a star.

For You and Your Friends

"I beg you to publish my letter."

It is only natural that people write us enthusiastic letters about Gin Pills. Wouldn't you do the same, if, after suffering from backache for years, you found relief? Wouldn't you wish your friends and others to know what Gin Pills had done for you, and what they will do for them? Of course, you would, and that is the only reason that prompts people to write us praising this great remedy.

Read what Isidore Thomas says in part:

"My case was very serious, and I was so sick everybody expected my death any day. No suffering could be worse than what I had to endure. Eight boxes of Gin Pills were sufficient to cure me entirely. I beg you to publish my letter and tell all sufferers of Kidney Trouble not to despair nor wait, as Gin Pills will cure them. I have to be very thankful to you, and I recommend Gin Pills to all my friends suffering from kidney trouble."

Take the advice of those who have tried most remedies and found that Gin Pills cure.

Gin Pills are not a cure-all—but a scientific remedy for Kidney or Bladder Troubles. They contain the beneficial ingredient of gin, without the alcohol, and gin has been recognized for years as the most perfect agent for toning up the kidneys and restoring these organs to perform their natural functions.

"Phonola"

Declared by experts to be the most wonderful improvement in Talking Machines since the beginning of the industry.

Records played on this "Organola" Model are a really wonderful reproduction. In the "sextette" on the "Organola" Model, and you have a real idea of the value of the tone control pipes. There is none of the confused blurring as when played on ordinary makes of phonograph, the tone control pipes of the "Organola" Model separating the different voices and notes, giving pure, clear, lifelike rendition.

We take pleasure in announcing to the public that in the future the Phonola will be equipped with a new Universal Tone Arm and Tone Leg which does away with all attachments. The entire form is beautifully designed and finished, and is a most perfect to the deep dye cast arms so often on other makes of Phonographs.

It is the only Universal tone arm that is scientifically designed and the only one that will play all sizes of records perfectly.

The Phonola will also be equipped with a new Aluminum Reproducer fitted with a special... rubber connection which eliminates metallic sound from being transmitted to the Amplifier.

Equipped with these two new devices the Phonola takes another step in advance of all competitors as furnishing the truest, clearest and sweetest tone it is possible to reproduce.

CORNER OF BROCK ST.

J. O. FIFE. P. J. SCOLLARD

Rev. Dr. Herridge.

Rev. Dr. Herridge, for nearly thirty-six years minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, is a national figure. He certainly would be included among the five greatest Canadian preachers, and there are many who will consider him pre-eminent. It is impossible to measure the extent of the influence that Dr. Herridge, preaching Sabbath after Sabbath at the capital, has exerted on Canadian thought in the course of thirty-six years. He has undoubtedly proved an inspiration to many Canadian leaders — statesmen, professional men, business men and "workers." Dr. Herridge has held firm to a strong belief in the power of the pulpit and the spoken word. Into his sermons he has largely rested the interpretation of his duty as a minister of the gospel. His studied reading of the scriptures, his appreciation of the religious value of good music, his sense of "atmosphere" in relation to congregational worship have attracted a host of lovers of the beautiful. Dr. Herridge is not what is colloquially known as a "mixer," and he has ever upheld the dignity of the pulpit, the solemnity of the church, and the profound sacredness of "the message"; yet there are hundreds who have learned to love him as a man. From time to time efforts have been made to entice Dr. Herridge away from Ottawa by the offer of a much larger income than he has received there, but he has measured his work, as all all great artists do, by other than financial standards and has remained in the pastorate to which he was inducted as a young man in 1883. With two sons and one daughter at the front, and a wife a leader in Red Cross activities at home, Dr. Herridge has been a real inspiration to Canadians during the war. Never in his whole life has he preached sermons that had as much moving vitality or such patriotic and spiritual effect.

It is a matter for general congratulation in Ottawa, therefore, that the elders and managers of St. Andrew's Church are determined to leave no stone unturned to persuade and assist Dr. Herridge to withdraw his suggestion, due to temporary indisposition, it is thought, that he should resign. The members and adherents of St. Andrew's are not alone in their desire that Dr. Herridge shall be retained in the position of influence that he has earned through the years in Ottawa and Canada.

Automobiles.

In 1914 the number of automobiles in Canada was 67,415, increasing to 189,320 in 1917. It is estimated that the number of cars in use at the close of the present year will be approximately 250,000. With an estimated population of 8,000,000 this gives a proportion of one car for every thirty-two inhabitants, as against one for every 118 inhabitants four years ago. Statistics have been compiled showing the occupations of car owners throughout the country, and from this it is apparent that about 90 per cent. of all the cars in use are owned by persons whose occupations are such that the automobile in their hands is a utility enabling them to do more and better work.

GREEK AND LATIN FALL AT PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N.J.—As a result of demands made by Princeton alumni, undergraduates and trustees the university faculty decided to abolish Greek both as an entrance requirement and as a required course in the undergraduate curriculum leading to the degree of bachelor of arts.

The reforms adopted are radical. Besides the abolition of the Greek requirements they call for the dropping of the degree of bachelor of letters, which has been granted at Princeton since 1906, and the addition of Latin as a required subject in all courses except those leading to the degree of bachelor of arts.

The change puts the requirements of classical subjects on practically the same basis as Yale and Harvard.

The undergraduates through their organ, the Undergraduate Council made a vigorous protest against present requirements, saying, "We believe that the failure of Princeton in recent years to keep pace with the growth and progress of rival educational institutions of equal standing is largely attributable to her archaic entrance requirements and undergraduate course of study; that radical and immediate revision in these respects is Princeton's most pressing need, and that the first and most fundamental step in the post war construction and transformation of Princeton into a national university is the reduction of Princeton's classical requirements to conformity with the requirements of all other great American universities."

New York City to Have First Squadron of Aviators in "Cops."

NEW YORK, March 28.—Aviators of New York's police aero squadron, the first to be organized in America, will be sworn in as members of the New York Police Department this afternoon at three o'clock.

The squadron was organized yesterday with twenty-eight charter members. It will serve voluntarily.

Landing places will be located at various parts of the city and complete sets of maps will be made for the airmen.

HAD SEVERE COLD

AND TICKLING SENSATION IN THE THROAT.

This trouble is most distressing, and is caused from a cold that has settled in the throat.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks, combined with the lung healing virtues of the world famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. G. C. Routley, Bright, Ont., writes: — "I take great pleasure in writing you of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

For several weeks I was troubled with a severe cold and a tickling in the throat. I tried numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I had heard so much about, and on taking one bottle got instant relief. I highly recommend it to those who need a quick cure."

So great has been the success of "Dr. Wood's" in curing coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc., it is only natural that many imitations have been placed on the market. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Strong baking powder is needed

GOVERNMENT Standard flours are coarser and heavier than the flours you have been using for years, and they require a strong, reliable leavening agent.

Egg-O is a pure, strong, double-acting baking powder.

Its first action occurs in the mixing bowl when cold water or milk is added. Allowing the dough to stand for 15 or 20 minutes will give better results, and when you put your baking in the oven Egg-O will continue to rise, and you will have no trouble getting light bakings.

EGG-O Baking Powder

You can use sour milk, sweet milk, buttermilk or water with Egg-O—a different and better baking powder.

BODIES OF SOLDIERS DYING IN SIBERIA TO BE RETURNED.

OTTAWA, March 27.—Provision is made in an Order-in-Council to return to Canada, when possible, the bodies of those members of the Canadian force serving in Siberia who have died on duty. When it is not possible to send the remains back, provision has been made, on the recommendation of the Minister of Militia, for the establishment of a Canadian burial ground in Siberia. In all cases expenses will be borne by the Dominion Government.

SPRING WEATHER HARD ON BABY

The Canadian spring weather—one day mild and bright; the next raw and blustery is extremely hard on the baby. Conditions are such that the mother cannot take the little one out for the fresh air so much to be desired. She is confined to the house which is often over-heated and badly ventilated. He catches cold; his little stomach and bowels become disordered and the mother soon has a sick baby to look after. To prevent this an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets should be given. They regulate the stomach and bowels, thus preventing or curing colds, simple fevers, colic or any other of the many minor ailments of childhood. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EASTER LILIES TO BE DAISIES

Shades of all the saints! Milady's Easter lily will be a daisy!

Because Holland and Belgium haven't been able to ship Easter lily bulbs since the beginning of the war, the white chalice emblem of the resurrection will be very scarce this year, florists declare. The price will be about three times that of former years.

Instead, there is a new cultivated daisy. It is a great big white blossomed posy, and is practically a new creation for Easter trade, the florists announce.

Likewise, there will be few azalias, because Belgium has not been able to ship any plants.

A HASTY TEMPER.

The Harm It Does Even Though the Ugly Fit Be Soon Over.

It is a remarkable thing that there exists in people's minds a distinct social precedence among the vices.

To own one's self on intimate terms with such a one as deceit or slander, for instance, would be almost undreamt of, but how often have we heard people say, almost with pride, at any rate with no trace of shame, "I have a very hasty temper?" And then as if to transfigure it into a very virtue they triumphantly add, "But it is soon over." So it may be, but how about its consequences? Are they soon over?

There are few more dangerous enemies to the peace and comfort of everyday life than the people who speak hastily in the squalls of passing ill temper, and then, when they are restored to good humor, expect everything to be just as it was before. There is no such position possible as "just as it was before" in this up and down hill human nature of ours. Every act or word is a step by which we mount upward or sink lower in the unhindered journeyings onward of all the conditions of life, and the people who give utterance to the recriminations of passionate tempers unfailingly drop down in the estimation of others, from which it is a hard climb up again.

Moreover, words once uttered, whether true or false, are equally undying and live on in hearts and memories long after the careless bow that shot such poisoned arrows forth is unstrung. And though the utterer may plead that to feed his passion he said not what he really believed, but what he thought at the time would hurt most, it is almost impossible for the hearer to understand that the expression was not that of a living though latent opinion and to feel it accordingly.

The code of fashion in the moral realms has decreed how much better a passionate temper is than a sulky one, but there is something to be said in favor of the latter in that it only hurts itself. Like the little girl who when annoyed always ate her apple tart without sugar, the guilty person may suffer most individually, but that is surely better than the suffering to the innocent caused by the random shots of the fierce though short onslaughts of a hasty temper. And silence is much less generally disturbing than violence, though perhaps quite as unbecoming.—Edith H. Fowler in London Mail.

The Chameleon: Science

PRIF. G. T. W. PATRICK, in the Scientific Monthly, declares science has vindicated itself in its practical applications. Considering science in its relationship to the Great War and to the Great Peace, the writer says:

"In this connection we are reminded that there is one field in which science has distinguished itself beyond all others, and that is in the art of war. To the exquisite perfecting of this art every science has been called upon to contribute its very best and latest results—mathematics, engineering, physics, chemistry, metallurgy, mechanics, optics, radio-activity, electro-dynamics, aeronautics, economics, zoology, psychology and many others. An immeasurable weight of the best and keenest thought of the world has been expended in the application of science to the paraphernalia of war, resulting in an amazing progress in the development of this art to the highest conceivable degree of perfection.

"If in defence of this kind of application of science one should say that by this art civilization has been saved, it would only be because by this art it was threatened. Given an unscrupulous nation dreaming of world dominion and harassed by the need of commercial and industrial expansion, that nation would never have dared to venture on this ambitious project had it not been for the fact that she found herself in possession of such an arsenal of cunning devices as to make success apparently certain; submarines and superdreadnoughts, mines and torpedoes, airplanes and monster dirigibles, titanic cannon and marvellous machine guns, secret formulae for super-explosives, poison gases and liquid fires—these are some of the implements of war which applied science had put into her hands.

"The results, whether one choose to regard them in terms of sorrowing homes, of outraged and degraded morals, of the loss of the best young blood of all the nations, of enslaving national debts, of the disorganization and ruin of world commerce and industries, or of the destruction of art treasures, are equally appalling.

"If, as many believe, one of the prominent causes of the war was the urgent need which Germany felt for commercial and industrial expansion, we seem in this very fact to have an indictment of the mechanic and industrial arts, when viewed in the light of the leading motive in the social order. Nowhere else in the world had science been applied so extensively and successfully to the satisfaction of human wants as in that country. Yet these wants were not satisfied and Germany had to fall back on the age-old method of the exploitation of other nations. But we are evidently coming to the time when this method will not work. Perhaps it may be a long time before it will again be tried. Each nation must satisfy its own wants by peaceful means, and thus the question faces us whether any possible development of the mechanical and industrial arts, upon which we rely so fondly, will satisfy the desires of man.

"In former times wars acted to purify racial stocks by eliminating weak races. Modern wars have precisely the opposite effect, owing to the fact that a modern war kills or disables the best young men of all the warring nations, and so, by destroying the most valuable germplasm of the race, causes irreparable damage to society. Applied science has devised every conceivable means to make the destruction complete. Would it not be well, therefore, in the years to come for science to apply itself directly to the problem of preventing wars? It is idle to say that they cannot be prevented or that science has nothing to do with this problem. It lies distinctly within the field of such sciences as biology, psychology, sociology and education. For applied psychology it offers a most alluring field. It may be an immense problem, but the possibilities of science are immense."

THIS great engine, which now has a record of many million miles behind it, has created a new movement in the automobile industry.

It has swung the attention from multi-cylinders, extra valves and the like to the subject of getting-the-very-last-bit-of-power-out-of-every-drop-of-gas.

For gas has gone down and down in grade; the price has gone up and up; and cars have not performed as once they did, while the public began to say "they weren't making cars as well as they used to."

The public was wrong. It was not the car. It was the low grade gas. The food for an engine had changed; a new digestive organ was needed.

Among the first to observe this condition were the Chalmers engineers. They were the first to supply the answer.

They designed a Hot Spot device and attached a new type of intake manifold now known as the famous Ram's-horn.

By means of the Hot Spot they cracked up, fine as powder, and heated the gas after it left the carbureter. This put the gas in perfect shape for combustion.

Now the task was to get this "fine as powder," or as the engineers say 'dry gas" into the cylinders without letting it condense on the short 18-inch but hazardous journey. Gas is tricky.

They succeeded in designing a brand new type of canal or manifold—minus angles, corners, sharp corners and the like—and this they call the Ram's-horn.

Any man who drives a Hot Spot Chalmers can tell you how wonderful these two devices work.

They have made the Chalmers now a great automobile. This is what they accomplish:

Almost immediate starting on a cold day.
Perfect engine running in 30 seconds on a cold day.
More power out of gas than has ever been extracted before.
Prevent raw gas from going past the pistons into the crank case and subsequent lubrication trouble.
Develop a smoother, softer kind of power.
A lower upkeep cost through less vibration.
Spin more mileage out of every gallon.
Cause the engine to run cooler on a hot day.

There are many more.

THE FINAL EFFORT.

Sir Douglas Haig Tells of War's Concluding Months.

An historic document written by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British armies on the western front, has been published. It deals with the operations of the British armies from the end of April, 1918, when the situation was most critical, up to the conclusion of the armistice.

The document opens with a recital of the situation when the British armies had been forced to give ground before the tremendous German onslaught in the spring offensive, and when the German forces on the western front greatly outnumbered those of the Allies. The only course open for the Allies was to preserve their front unbroken until summer could bring additional American forces and enable them to face the Germans on something like a footing of equality.

By an exhibition of wonderful tenacity says the document, the Allied troops preserved their line intact until July 18—when they did more. Field Marshal Haig says the complete success of the Allied counter-attack on that date marked the turning point in the year's campaign. There followed, he adds, a complete change in the whole military situation.

"The German army," Gen. Haig continues, "had made its effort and had failed. The period of its maximum strength had been passed, and the bulk of the reserves accumulated during the winter had been used up. On the other hand, the position of the Allied reserves in troops had greatly improved.

"Fresh troops, made available during the late spring and the early summer, had been incorporated and trained. The British army was ready to take the offensive, while the American army was growing rapidly, and had already given convincing proof of the high fighting qualities of its soldiers."

From that time, Field Marshal Haig says, until the victorious conclusion of the armistice, the Allies never looked back. First came the onslaughts which drove the Germans from their carefully prepared positions, each in itself a tactical event, fitting into the superb strategy conceived by the Allied high command. Regarding the preparations for the attack at Amiens, the field marshal says:

"Instructions of a detailed character were issued to the formations concerned calculated to make it appear that a British attack in Flanders was imminent. Canadian battalions were put into line on the Kemmel front, where they were identified by the enemy. Corps headquarters was prepared and casualty clearing stations were erected in places in this area. Great activity was maintained by our wireless stations on the First Army front and arrangements were made to give the impression that a great concentration of tanks was taking place in the St. Pol area. Training operations, in which infantry and tanks co-operated, were carried out in the region on a day on which the enemy's long-distance reconnaissance and photographic machines were likely to be at work behind our lines.

"Rumors that the British were about to undertake a large and important operation on the northern front quickly spread. In the course of our subsequent advances convincing evidence was obtained that these different measures had had the desired effect, and that the enemy was momentarily expecting to be attacked in strength in Flanders."

The Germans were completely fooled, Field Marshal Haig says, and in the early morning mist of August 8 British troops caught the surprised Germans and captured 12,000 prisoners, nearly 400 guns and vast quantities of ammunition and stores of all kinds.

Following the storming of the German lines on all parts of the battlefront came a period when the fighting was entirely in the open, except for such use as could be made of villages and natural cover. Here, according to the field marshal, British cavalry took a wonderful share in the operations, and the only aim of the enemy was temporarily to hold up the advancing Allies in order to unravel the tangle of their [illegible] retreat.

Canadian Wonder Tales

WE are usually inclined to say that Canada has no folk lore. A recent volume of stories collected by Cyrus Macmillan and entitled "Canadian Wonder Tales" furnishes ample proof that such is not the case. You can find folk stories if you know where to seek for them.

Variety is given to the volume by the fact that its contents are drawn from not one source but two—Indian and French. At the very opening we are transported back to the days when Canada was ruled over by seigneurs, who came out as representatives of the French King, and who lived in stately houses, surrounded by a hard-working, simple peasantry. It is an atmosphere something like that of Perrault's fairy-tales. "The Baker's Magic Wand" was doubtless born in France, for it relates the story of a stern and avaricious seigneur, a poor baker befriended by a fairy, and—very French and very unlike a children's story—a wife intent upon deceiving her husband carrying on an intrigue with the village lawyer. "The Shrove Tuesday Visitor" is another tale that we may believe French in origin rather than French-Canadian; it pictures "a village on the banks of a great river," in the seventeenth century, a marriage feast and dance attended by a happy rural population, a stranger of bold and pleasing mien, who makes a deep impression upon the assemblage, and is finally on the point of eloping with the bride while the spiritless bridegroom sits rejected in the corner, and a rescuing priest, who rushes into the room, and by his holy Latin forces the Evil One—for no less a personage is the stranger—to disappear to the accompaniment of a clap of thunder. It is a quaintly religious tale. "Jack and His Wonderful Hen" is another story caught from French-Canadian lips, and a soundly moral one, Jack, spoiled by his early success in obtaining from a fairy benefactor a hen which lays two dozen eggs a day, and which he sells to the seigneur for a great price, is seized with the idea of selling the family goat and then stealing it back. His parents warn him against this evil deed, but in vain; he successfully commits the theft, but is met on his return by a robber, who coveting the goat, slays Jack to obtain it.

But most of the thirty and more stories are of Indian origin, and very pretty some of them are. The author has made a larger, more soberly garbed collection of Indian tales for scientific purposes, and these are a selection of the ones most attractive to children. The blend of the natural and the supernatural is often delightful. Where did the Northern Lights come from; why does the bluejay stay in the north and the woodpecker fly away south in wintertime, though they are intimate and are dressed alike in summer; under what circumstances did the Sun-God promise the Blackfeet that if they held an annual dance in his honor their sick would be healed; when did the partridge learn to drum; why does the bear eat ants; why does the moose travel alone, and why do the caribou travel in herds?—such are the questions these stories answer. The writer assures us that many of them were first told to him in smoky Indian lodges or around forest campfires. Some of them have a finely poetic quality, as, for example, the tale called "How Summer Came to Canada." It is slighter than the story of Persephone, but of almost as fine stuff. So with the account of the origin of the Northern Lights — a story of the reunion of a man and his wife after long separation and much tribulation:

"They were happy again. It was a cold autumn night and the moon was full, and his wife said: "We must not stay here. This is a wicked place where men forget. If you stay here, you will forget me again." Then she shuddered when she thought that her husband might forget her again, and he shuddered when he thought that he might lose her again. And they continued to tremble in fear. Then she said, "We must go to another land. It is a more beautiful land than this. It is the Land of Eternal Memory, where men and women never forget those they love'."

The trembling of these reunited lovers as they were transformed into and made immortal in the Northern Lights is a beautiful sight for Canadian children.

A Patriotic Indian.

Chief Joseph Davies of the Brunswick House Band of Ojibway Indians, and several of his tribe, who enlisted in 1916 with the 227th (Men of the North) Battalion, were among the returned soldiers who arrived home from France by the Olympic.

Chief Davies was granted by the military authorities the unique privilege of wearing upon his uniform throughout active service his official Indian chief's insignia.

On his arrival at Chapleau a welcome was extended by Indian Agent T. J. Godfrey and a large deputation of members of the tribe. A pathetic feature of the chief's homecoming is that two of his children have recently died of the "flu."

The chief's wife, traveling more than thirty miles by canoe, having to break the ice in many places to get through, bringing with her one dead child and one seriously ill with the epidemic, arrived in Chapleau too late to save the life of the second child, who died shortly after admission to the hospital.

Liquor Case Excites B.C.

THE prohibition commissioner for British Columbia, W. C. Findlay, technically charged in the police court with stealing 74 cases of liquor from the Government, was dismissed by the court recently, the magistrate holding that not enough evidence was presented to justify committal for trial.

On Dec. 11, a brief announcement appeared in the coast evening papers to the effect that W. C. Findlay, prohibition commissioner, had been retired and that the duties of his office would be undertaken by a Deputy Attorney-General, Mr. Johnson, until further notice. At about the time of this announcement, Findlay, who had journeyed to Vancouver from Victoria, took a motor car and headed for the international boundary. His disappearance was noted at once and when he reached Blaine, on the Washington-British Columbia boundary, police officers were waiting to return him to Vancouver. Next morning it was learned that Findlay, the man who had been sworn to guard the province against the criminal importation and consumption of strong drink, was himself charged with bringing in a carload of whiskey illegally.

Events moved swiftly thereafter. Findlay was given bail and allowed to go to Victoria to see his family. Later he appeared in police court, charged with illegally importing a carload of liquor, pleaded guilty, was fined the maximum amount of $1,000 and promptly left again for the United States.

Justice had been swift and had gone the limit, but people at once began to ask what had happened to the whisky after it was imported? Who assisted Findlay to get rid of it? One man could not dispose of 700 cases of whiskey without employing some commercial machinery and why was that machinery not exposed to public view? Such a protest arose that the Government decided to appoint a royal commission and Mr. Justice Clement was instructed to open an inquiry. It being clear that an inquiry would not get very far with Findlay out of jurisdiction, a shortage of 74 cases of whiskey in the Government stock, which had been in his charge, furnished prima facie grounds for a charge of theft—an extraditable offence.

Findlay had proceeded no farther than Portland, Oregon, and was induced to come up to Seattle, Washington. There he was promised immunity regarding any charge that might be laid against him except the charge of theft if he waived extradition and appeared before the royal commissioner. Thus it came about that just as the commissioner opened the inquiry, two days after Christmas, Findlay again appeared in Vancouver in custody.

The first morning of the inquiry, Dec. 27, was taken up with the evidence of the Government auditor, Mr. A. B. McNeill, who testified that Findlay had had a private whiskey warehouse to which had been taken other whiskey besides the carload lot and from which distribution had been effected, all contrary to law. In the afternoon Findlay was called. He flatly refused to testify. Acting on counsel's advice, he said, he would not give his evidence until the charge of theft laid by the Attorney-General was disposed of. Findlay was sent to Okalla jail for contempt of court, incidentally appearing later in the police court, to be arraigned for theft and obtaining bail on that charge.

The commission went on. Other witnesses, unwilling enough most of them, gave evidence which pointed to a fairly large illicit business in liquor as having gone on apparently unchecked for months in that city. Whole freight wagon loads had been moved from place to place. The Western Canada Liquor Company and the Hudson Bay Company, according to the evidence, had sent consignments of whiskey to private parties. One lot of 25 or 30 cases had gone from the latter company to a residence in the most exclusive district. Another had been moved from a residence in the West End to the Hotel Vancouver Annex.

Things were getting more and more interesting every day when suddenly A. L. Gartshore stopped the investigation by legal proceedings. Gartshore is a liquor man and was connected with a retail business in Vancouver. He moved for a writ of prohibition, and Mr. Justice Clement suspended the inquiry while the matter was argued out before Chief Justice Hunter of the Supreme Court. Meanwhile some of Findlay's old friends had arranged for him to obtain the advice of Mr. S. S. Taylor K.C., Mr. Henderson, his counsel, consenting.

On Jan. 8, the Chief Justice, who had heard the argument on the Gartshore application for a writ of prohibition, announced that owing to the importance of the constitutional questions involved he would take time to consider his decision. This tied the investigation up pretty completely, but soon afterwards application was made to the commissioner to hold a special sitting so as to give Findlay an opportunity of purging his contempt by telling his story. The commissioner consented. There was a delay, however, and when the commission was ready to hear the former commissioner, Findlay was still in Okalla jail.

There the matter stands, Mr. Taylor having given up the case. The next step will be the Chief Justice's determination of whether the royal commission is legal or not. In the former event proceedings will be resumed for a day or two, until Mr. Gartshore's legal representative can make his appeal and obtain a restraining order; in the latter a new commission will probably issue.

AUTHORS HANDICAPPED.

Writers In This Country Have Cause for Complaint.

At the present time Canadian authors are under a distinct handicap as compared with the authors of other nations. It is a well-known fact that to-day moving pictures and phonographs bring the writer's thought to millions who formerly depended on the printed page, yet the Copyright Act of Canada gives no protection against the reproduction of an author's work by means of moving pictures, phonograph records, or music rolls. No matter how popular a song by a Canadian may be, it can be reproduced on phonograph records, without the payment of any royalty to the author, and no Canadian author can prevent the moving picture companies from reproducing his ideas on film without any payment of royalty.

To remedy this state of affairs, the Authors' and Composers' Association of Canada, whose headquarters are in Toronto, have submitted a memorandum to the Canadian Government asking them to adopt the British Copyright Act of 1911, the provisions of which include, among other things, the payment to the owner of the copyright of 5 per cent. of the retail price of each record or roll sold. The memorandum says:

"The United States publishers are now refusing to consider a song by a Canadian writer on account of the fact that they cannot collect any mechanical royalties under their copyright act, because Canada has no such provision in her act.

"Lieut. Gitz Rice (now said to be the most popular song-writer on the continent) is a Canadian and a member of the Authors' and Composers' Association. Mr. Robert Service is also a Canadian whose lyrics are being set to music, and he, too, is being very greatly handicapped by our present Copyright Act. Mr. A. E. McNutt, of St. John, N.B., who wrote "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," is a Canadian. Mr. Morris Manley, of Toronto, wrote 'Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies,' etc. Mr. Gordon V. Thompson, of Toronto, wrote 'When Your Boy Comes Back to You,' 'When You Wind Up the Watch on the Rhine,' and over a dozen other patriotic songs. Miss Irene Hamble wrote 'We're From Canada.' Miss Murriel Bruce wrote 'Knitting.' Mr. Will J. White wrote 'Home Again.' All these songs have been reproduced by phonographs and player-roll companies in Canada and the United States without the payment of royalties."

Surely the authors only have to state their case to get this injustice removed. Canadian authors have enough to contend with without being subjected to such a heavy handicap as is now imposed through the fact that our present Copyright Act is out of date.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

OLD BEN BOLT

The Prize He Won and What He Thought He Would Lose.

By MYRA NORTHCLIFF.

His name wasn't "Old Ben Bolt," but everybody called him that, and strangers accepted it on the spot as singularly appropriate, for Captain Jim Staybolt's honest, kind blue eyes, his brown face and closely curling hair, and his masterful yet good natured mouth made him indeed seem the embodiment of the famous "Ben Bolt of the salt sea gale."

He wasn't old at all, though he thought himself aged and beyond all the dreams of youth because he had just turned thirty-five. But then he had always had an abnormal modesty about his own masculine charms.

His head, all bit of pepper and salt, was filled with practical good sense that had brought him up from fisherman to superintendent and part owner of the Grunt & Co. company's big fleet of smacks.

He had his office in the cubby of a water sittin' shanty at the end of the pier, and his window looked directly across at a certain young woman named Kate, dealing out candy, oranges and cheap cigars to the rolling crews of the boats.

There was a standing joke among the boys how the smoking habit took hold of everybody after he saw Kate.

It never got to her ears, though, for, notwithstanding the candy and cigars, there was a fine little line of reticence about the girl over which no one ever stepped, not even Hank Raynor, the rainest and most impudent fellow that ever trod a schooner's deck. But her pretty blushes and shining eyes gave the clew to her preference, and Raynor, who frequently consumed his entire watt buying a cigar, could not have been said to discourage the impression.

It is true the boys joked, but the majority of them swore as well, for the handsome Raynor bore no immaculate reputation among them.

"Cuss it!" said Dick Pearsall, mate of the Osprey schooner, savagely one night. "Why is it a woman can never see an inch from her nose when she's daffy on a man?"

"Marryin' takes that out of 'em though," laughed old Captain Brown who was on honorable drydock after fifty years of cod and halibut.

"Marryin'!" sneered the mate of the dandy, well built smack Lucinda V. "Marryin'! Raynor looks like a marryin' man, don't he? I ain't no masher myself, but I tell you that smarty is just tryin' to show off before us fellows. Marry her! Even if he wanted to he ain't fit to wipe her old shoes on!"

Nobody dissented. There were too many in the fishing port that did not hesitate to declare that Raynor's skill as a fisherman was far inferior to the art with which he could wreck coasters for a living when the owners got tired of paying insurance and decided that it was time to collect some instead.

"All the same, he told me it was fixed up between 'em," insisted Captain Brown. "That's tellin', I s'pose, but he didn't say as there was anything private about it."

Unnoticed by the men, Captain Jim Staybolt had come up in time to catch the last words. He stopped a moment in the shadow of a column. When he moved on his face looked gray and drawn in the uncertain light.

"Get ready to take the Osprey and the Lucinda out next tide," he said evenly. "We'll have 'em unloaded in three hours more and ready for sea again."

He went back, and the group broke up. Pearsall as he turned caught a glimpse of his superior's face and wondered vaguely if "the boss" were ill.

With a fine sense of honor, Captain Jim himself had refrained from a look or word that might compromise Kate, but the memory of a chance touch of her fingers once when she passed back his change still sent a thrill over him. Since that day she had grown under his eyes to be the one desirable thing of his life.

He knew enough of Raynor to despise the man. Time and again he had all but prayed he might get actual cause for interference. Now the shattering of the dream seemed less his blunder than a crime.

A week afterward Kate's old father was struck by a falling block and laid on his bed, helpless for life. Her mother fell ill of typhoid. The superintendent saw the bloom fade from the girl's cheeks, to return only when Raynor appeared, and that in a nervous flush. He grew hot and cold alternately at the air of careless proprietorship the latter had lately assumed. Then suddenly the man announced that he was going away.

"Hank has got a ship," Captain Jim heard Kate confide to another girl. "It's a schooner running out of South Amboy for Norfolk, and the owners have promised him a raise in a few months, and then, if father and mother are able to be moved—"

Captain Jim lost the rest, but a sharp thrust went through him, whether of anguish or relief he could not have told. A month later came news of a shipwreck on the New Jersey coast.

The dispatches said openly that there were suspicious circumstances about the wreck, but as the captain, Hank Raynor, was announced as among those drowned it was impossible to do much investigating.

On that very day Kate failed to appear at the pier.

Day by day for a blank, wretched week Captain Jim faced the empty stand opposite his window. Then he went down to the waterside street and found there desolation, at once pitiful and reassuring.

"It isn't your love I am asking for, dear," he said to her gently, as at the end of a half hour he found himself holding her trembling fingers and smoothing her hair. "I couldn't expect that. But if you will give me what is left, the right to take care of you and yours, God knows it will be a precious trust."

Captain Jim had no fine phrases, but months of effort had made him a marvel of self control. He stood quite still, though every nerve was tense with longing to clasp the slim little figure to his breast. In fact, he hardly dared breathe when at last Kate dropped her head against his arm for acquiescence and broke into soft sobbing. A guess at what was in his heart, he told himself, would have frightened her out of his reach forever.

The six weeks that followed were a mixture of paradise and purgatory to him. It was hard, indeed, to play the decorous, fatherly lover when his whole soul cried out for the touch of her lips on his and every wish of her dress against him set his pulses throbbing. But he did it, and well.

His paradise proved a fool's, however. Walking along the main street one evening, with Kate on his arm, Hank Raynor's unmistakable self passed the two almost at elbow touch. There was a livid scar along the apparition's cheek. Kate did not see him, but a pang like death went through "Old Ben Bolt." The sight of that handsome, devil-may-care face seemed to sound his doom.

During the next four and twenty hours Captain Jim worked out his bitter problem. Cost what it might to his own self respect, he would tell Kate the truth as he knew it concerning Hank Raynor. He could do that if she had been his young sister, but in honor he must free her from her promise to him.

He had thought of a way out of her financial difficulties, but it was not necessary she should know that yet or, indeed, the cost to his own heart of these last few months.

"I have come to give you back what I asked that first night, Kate, but I must tell you something. It will be hard for you to bear," he said to her hoarsely as he stood in the little parlor, whose very plainness had grown dear to him.

A flush ran into Kate's cheek, but it died there, leaving a white line around her lips. "Old Ben Bolt" gripped the back of the chair in front of him.

"I suppose you have seen Raynor?" he went on.

Kate's color rushed back in a rosy flood. Her eyes drooped for an instant; then, shy, but brave, they looked straight into Captain Jim's own.

"Yes, I have seen him and—his wife," she answered with a little laugh. "He brought her from Philadelphia. It—it was a good thing I had found out before that—that I didn't care most for him, after all, wasn't it, you dear 'Old Ben Bolt?'"

The room reeled round Captain Jim. Out of its chaos Kate's face grew flushed and smiling still, but with suspiciously luminous eyes. Then did this "Ben Bolt" give a great gasp as the truth burst upon him. He took two long strides with outstretched arms, and a second later Kate was quite lost in the big, warm embrace her dark hour had taught her was her heart's true haven.

Doctors Star mazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong---According to Dr. Lewis

Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." Another who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced severe headaches. I have worn glasses for several years both for distance and work, and without them could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. It stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—at costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Why They Are Buying WAR-SAVINGS STAMPS

The housewife is economizing in comfortable ways and investing in War-Savings Stamps at $4.02 each this month. In 1924, when these stamps are redeemed at $5.00 each, every dollar will have greater purchasing power.

The business man is cutting off small and unnecessary expenditures and buying War-Savings Stamps. He knows his money is available any time he really needs it, with added interest. $5 for $4 in five years is an excellent return on money otherwise idle.

School children are buying Thrift Stamps at 25 cents each and are filling their Thrift Cards in order to acquire a War-Savings Stamp. They are helping their country and acquiring the habit of Thrift.

Men on the farms are buying W-S.S. because the Government uses the money to finance export orders for the food raised on Canadian farms. This makes their market sure.

Men, women and children of all ages and conditions of life, are investing in W.S.S. because it is a convenient way to "build a bond". The security is absolute and the interest is unusually high. Some day they will look back with great satisfaction to the day when they bought their first War Savings Stamps.

Artois, Flanders, Picardy, Champagne, the Argonne—these were the battlegrounds of the recent war, but also they are mentioned in Caesar's Commentaries — which are nothing but communiques writ large. Chateau-Thierry, which the Americans took in July, was taken sundry centuries ago by the great Roman proconsul himself, Elizabeth Fraser tells us in the Saturday Evening Post. Argonne, the Chemin des Dames, those mighty natural barriers whose rocky heights and wooded steeps have received the effusion of America's best young blood, have been paid for again and again in the past by peasants' lives. Against that stern granite rampart neither Caesar nor Napoleon nor Joffre dared lead his army in direct frontal assault; the Germans won it by treachery, and in October, 1918, the Americans in conjunction with the French, not by head-on frontal attack, but by working round on each side, like a pair of pincers, finally pinched out that almost impregnable salient which has been drenched with blood since the days of the Roman Empire.

FRIENDS THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Conquered Dyspepsia and Restored His Health.

MR. ROBERT NEWTON.

Little Bras d'Or, C. B. "I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years. I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches, and did not sleep well at night. I lost so much weight—going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous". ROBERT NEWTON.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat, which clogs Kidneys, then Back hurts and Bladder bothers you.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

REEL CALL WIFE'S CUE FOR EXIT; CHILDREN AND DOG WITH HER

Charles H. Sterns Comes From Boston in Search of Half His Family—The Mother Said to Have Heard the Appeal of the Films.

NEW YORK, March 28.—If in the course of five reel events a photo-play is written in which the unquestioned, plus ultra and delux heroine is the mother of seven overweight children, there is a chance that Chas. H. Sterns may learn the address of his wife and family. So far he has had no luck, although he has appealed to the police of the East 126th street station and told a story rich in detail.

Mr. Sterns, who is probation officer in Boston, has lived in that city for many years and had hoped to raise his family there. He told the police yesterday that his wife, three children and a collie had disappeared from his home six days ago and that the remainder of his family, four children, had been told they would be sent for by Mrs. Stern just as soon as she could obtain a good part in a motion picture production. For more than two years, Mr. Sterns said, his wife had felt that she was called by natural vocation to the movies.

When Mr. Sterns arrived in New York he obtained a clew at the 125th street station, where the stationmaster recalled seeing a woman with three small children and a collie alight on the day after Mrs. Sterns answered the celluloid lure. Mr. Sterns said that he had never objected to his wife discussing her theatrical future, but what, with seven children, the housework and the collie, he had an idea that she would not burst the Boston shackles so unexpectedly and, in a manner of speaking, prematurely.

With Mrs. Sterns in her flight are Charles H., Jr., twelve years old; Antoinette, three, and Priscilla, two, to say nothing of Rex, the pet of the Boston household. The only means of support which the group has, to Mr. Sterns' knowledge, is $200, which disappeared with half the family.

Mrs. Sterns is thirty-five years old, pretty and of slender build.

HANDSOME MARQUIS LED HER TO JAIL

Mrs. Jeanette Orr, in Detroit Jail, Says Belgian Promised Estate Overseas.

DETROIT, Mich. — A handsome Belgian marquis with brown eyes, a moustache and promises of marriage and estate in England, led Mrs. Jeanette Orr, 21, wife of Walter Orr, of Toronto, behind the county jail bars. "He tricked me," she said, from her cell. "He promised to marry me, gave me false cheques to cash, and when he realized that he might get in trouble, he laid the blame on me."

"He gave me a cheque for $5,000 written on Dominion Bank of Canada, and asked me to deposit in the Dime Savings Bank here. The cheques were returned 'no funds,' and he skipped to Chicago. I pawned my diamonds for $300 and followed him. He stole the ticket and I was stranded. I went on the stage as Cita Morle and also did some modelling. I have a cheque forged by him for $500, made out to my stage name," Mrs. Orr said, producing the cheque from a small patent leather travelling bag.

Mrs. Orr created a stir of envy among the other prisoners when she arrived at the county jail in a luxurious seal fur coat.

Inherited Property.

Last September she inherited property in the city, left by her mother. On the sale she realized about $10,000 and immediately took up residence at Hotel Statler with her children and two maids. With taxis and general hotel expenses her bills were never less than $100 a week. After four months at this pace, Mrs. Orr found her bank account was growing slim, and she decided to withdraw divorce papers she had filed, and return to her husband who was in the Canadian Air Service in Toronto.

"One day this Belgian officer saw me at a hotel in Toronto," Mrs. Orr said. "He was so handsome and had such love'r manners that I couldn't help falling in love with him. He promised to marry me and take me to England. One day he announced that he had received a commission, and must leave at once. I followed him to Detroit, where he passed the bad cheque."

Mrs. Orr is held in the county jail on $1,000 bail. Her husband wired that he would arrive soon. "I want to go back to Walter and the babies. No more Belgians for me," Mrs. Orr said.

Much Increase in Tuberculosis If Girls Persist in It

NEW YORK.—Speaking of the present-day girl, Dr. Mary Merritt Crawford, who was one of the pioneer women physicians of America to take up a task on the battlefields of France, told 400 women and girls of the Melrose District, Girl's Division, War Camp Community Service, that they had much to correct if they were to get the whole number of years out of their span of life. She condemned the "slouch" walk and posture which are being promoted by present day styles for women.

"It's ruinous to health," said Dr. Crawford. "We were made to stand upright. The present day slouch has caused a great many women to cast into the discard the 'first corsets,' those of nature—the abdominal muscles. It does not permit the proper exercising of the lungs, and if not corrected will result in a great increase in tuberculosis."

THREE PRISONERS ESCAPE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 28. — George Stone, alias "Scotty," charged with burglary on seven charges; Alex. Ignace, a Kamloops Indian, waiting trial for murder, and Walter Martin, an Austrian youth, charged with highway robbery, sawed their way out of Okalla Prison in full view of thirteen fellow prisoners Wednesday afternoon and escaped. Provincial Police are scouring the country and a patrol has been sent to the American border in an effort to capture the men.

Letter From Ex-Kaiser to Crown Prince Published in Berlin.

BERLIN, March 27.—The Deutsche Zeitung publishes a letter the former Kaiser wrote to the Crown Prince on November 9. It read:

Dear boy, after the Court Chamberlain informed me he could no longer gaurantee my safety, that my headquarters and troops were no longer trustworthy, I resolved after a severe mental struggle to leave the command of my army and go to Holland.

"I advise you to stick to your post until the conclusion of the armistice. I hope to see you again in happier times. Your faithful and deeply afflicted father. Wilhelm."

The Crown Prince wrote to Ebert (then Chancellor), asking permission to remain in command of his army, promising not to oppose the new Government. Ebert refused to accede to his request

We couldn't make the Maxwell any better; so we made it better looking

They do not make it run any better. They make it look better.

Mr. Whistler, the famous artist, were he here today and saw a new Maxwell pass on the street, would probably himself give it a second look.

A little touch here, the straightening of a line there, the bringing of a fender a little closer to the wheel, a circassian walnut dash before you as you sit at the wheel, the strength lent by putting the gas tank in the rear, the multiplication of bonnet vents, the adding of three more painting coats, the increased thickness of the seat cushions—these, though but a few of the many changes made,—show the tendency of the new beauty.

It is in the sum of many little things that the full story is told.

The car was first checked off in squares, as a doctor sometimes marks off a man's chest and back to test every square inch of the lungs.

And there was an improvement made in nearly every square.

When the task was done it looked like a different Maxwell.

But it wasn't.

It was the same, sound, go-get-there chassis built to stand the gaff of rough and ready driving, built to endure, to "stay put," to stand all the erratic moods of the careless driver.

It was a five year drive to reach this present peak of Maxwell efficiency. But the engineers, and the manufacturing men knew that building a chassis without fundamental change in design year after year would ultimately tell in results. For every one knows that doing one thing results in doing it well.

So in five years 300,000 Maxwells have come forth, all built on the original chassis plan—each new one better than the last.

There is no self-starting automobile in the world that has such a manufacturing record.

Think what it means to a man who owns one.

He has not paid for a false overhead.

He has not paid for manufacturing mistakes.

He has not paid for experimental work.

He has not paid for the changes of mind of another man.

Today you get a better Maxwell than any of the 300,000, and a better looking Maxwell. It is a finished work, a completed task, a thing well done.

You run no risk—and when you cast your eyes on it you are tempted to feel that the price might easily be $200 more.

300 Deaths Daily Was Influenza's Toll in Tokio

TOKIO.—Since the great cholera plague in the Ansei period of the Tokugawa regime, sixty years ago, no epidemic has been experienced in Tokio approaching the present influenza scourge. This disease, which re-appeared in more deadly form in January, is killing more than three hundred a day, principally women and children, in Tokio alone. Since November there have been 900,000 cases and 6,000 deaths.

At present the epidemic appears to be at its height. Hearses are available for only about one funeral out of five. Roads to the six crematories in the city are blocked with bodies carrying coffins on their shoulders. The police have suspended the regulation that permits cremation only at night, and the six crematories are working twenty-fours a day and are not able to handle the bodies that are offered. At times arrangements have to be made a week in advance. Often bodies have been returned to the families because the crematories had no place to care for them.

This condition has happened in many instances the great respect formerly shown by the Japanese to the dead. Labourers at the crematories became so indifferent that police supervision was put into effect.

Hospitals are jammed, all doctors are overworked and the supply of trained nurses long ago was exhausted.

Throughout the country the epidemic is raging, but is less deadly in some sections than in others. Yokohama, for instance, is suffering much less than the capital, the records showing 253 deaths from influenza and pneumonia in November, 124 in December and 345 in January, not much above Tokio's daily average. In other sections whole villages are reported wiped out, and the misery among the poorer classes in the remote sections, where there are few doctors and no hospital facilities, is extreme.

Invatigation of the effect of the epidemic on the public schools is being made. Of the first one hundred schools checked up it was shown that there are 20,000 cases. In some schools one-half of the pupils are ill, and the average is thirty per cent. throughout the schools examined.

Stringent measures are taken to keep the disease from appearing in epidemic form among troops in the various garrisons, so far with success, although there has been an increase in cases reported this month.

Insurance companies are in somewhat of a panic. They are reported to have lost in the aggregate 4,000,000 yen last year, due wholly to influenza of the last two months of the year, while they are facing this year very heavy losses.

This has been the coldest winter for seventeen years in Japan, with unprecedented snowfalls, and as a consequence the number of cases of influenza that develop into pneumonia are more than the world average, especially in the poorer sections of the city and country, where the people are not in a position to keep their houses warm.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — Ireland's plea for self determination is to be presented to the Paris peace conference, if the pleas of her friends in this country do not miscarry. Passports are to be issued to Edward F. Dunn, former governor of Illinois, Michael Kryan, former Public Service Commissioner and Frank P. Walsh, former joint chairman of the War Labour Board, to take Erin's case to Paris, according to an announcement by them here. They go as representatives of the Irish convention of Philadelphia and plan to sail Wednesday.

They plan first to ask the peace conference that Ireland's delegates be heard. If refused, then the American Irish mission intends to present Ireland's plea. The State Department comment on the issuance of the passports was withheld.

"The Cavell Case"

Sydop 1.4.

"The Cavell Case." Select's great special, is a story of the great heroism of the Red Cross nurse and the wild barbarism, lust and lust of the Prussian commanders. Julia Arthur as Edith Cavell, the British Red Cross nurse, is the star of this stirring and dramatic picture, which has been produced by Joseph L. Plunkett and Frank J. Carroll. "The Cavell Case" will be presented at the Grand Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily.

Edith Cavell refused to marry George Brooks because she intends to devote her life to the care and nursing of the sick and miserable. She becomes a recognized authority in the humane field of nursing, directress of three Belgium hospitals and Instructress to the Belgium School for Certified Nurses.

The war comes and Edith Cavell is stationed in the Brussels hospital. She has received word from her former sweetheart, who has since married, that he has a son in the English army who has been reported as missing and he asks her to try and locate him. During her daily trips to the cellars of the hospitals where the wounded soldiers of the Allied nations have been placed, since Germany has captured the hospital, she comes upon Frank Brooks. She aids him in his escape to the Holland border. She is discovered and imprisoned. She confesses that she has aided many more English boys to escape so that they might get away from the cellar of filth and pestilence in which they are being kept. She is taken before the German Military Court and ordered to be shot. On October 12th the order was carried out.

LADIES' HAIR DRESSING

The ladies will be interested in learning that Mrs. Harry Mann, of 569 George Street, is now prepared to attend to orders for hair dressing, shampooing, and hair treatment, in her residence at the above address. Mrs. Mann is well equipped to fill engagements in the latest lines, and to prescribe safe and successful hair tonics whenever needed. She invites the patronage of the ladies. 2d-72

Germany is Trying to Mislead the Allies With Fears of Bolshevism

The Master Hand of Count Bernstorff is Apparent—Situation Not as Bad as Reported.

IN THE RHINELAND

(By Frank J. Taylor).

BERLIN, March 29.—Radical leaders declared to-day that the bugaboo of Bolshevism in Germany is a trick by which Foreign Minister Brockdorff Rantzau and Court Bernstorff hope to score a diplomatic victory, in spite of military defeat.

According to Radicals, the threat to refuse the peace terms, and throw Germany into Bolshevism—which is being talked broadcast in Berlin, especially within hearing of the members of the Allied mission — is an effort to impress the Peace Conference with the seriousness of the situation here. It is charged that the German Foreign Office hopes this may lead to a split between the Allied nations regarding the procedure if the Germans refuse to sign the pact. Certain Entente nations, it is claimed, will oppose continuing the blockade of Germany, fearing the spread of Bolshevism, while others probably will insist on enforcing conditions demanded of the Germans. The most sincere opponents of Bolshevism as well as the Independent Socialists, demand that a group of real Pacifists be sent to Paris in place of the commission already announced, to deal openly with the Allies in an effort to establish Germany's future relations with the world honestly and without tricks.

Huns Sending Fresh Troops

Germans Are Bitterly Opposed to the Allied Plan

(United Press.)

LONDON, March 29.—The Paris correspondent of the Mail reported today that the French Foreign Office had received information from the Allied Mission and Polish officers in Danzig that the Germans are sending fresh troops to that city and are mounting guns along the coast.

The Germans are bitterly opposed to the Allied plan for awarding Danzig to Poland. If the above despatch is true they apparently are preparing to hold Danzig by force, or at least prevent Polish troops from landing there.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

The Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With your permission, I wish to add to the articles that have been published on the Hunter Street Bridge.

I am sure the citizens will endorse and approve of the City Council keeping faith with the Quaker Oats Company in building an overhead bridge across the river on Hunter Street.

I am persuaded that the proposed bridge, as designed, is out of all proportion to the needs of the city now or for a great many years to come; that when the city, and especially East City, increase in population, surely they will not all want to cross on the one bridge. Rather that when the proper time comes, another bridge across the river at another place be necessary, further, the street way would be more likely to be sustaining by being able to use crossing on the river—thereby ing a larger number of people properly.

I understand that the bridge, as at present designed, calls for double street car tracks; right and left hand vehicle space; right and left hand space for pedestrians, which provides the bridge with a floor space fifty-four feet wide. Imagine the City of Peterborough putting up this big monument—far in excess of any requirements now or for many years, or for all time possibly.

Sketch No. 2 shows a floor plan of a bridge forty-three feet wide, which is of ample size to meet the needs of the city; provides for a single street car track, with right and left hand space for vehicles, one foot wider than that provided for on the original design.

I understand that the tenders received for the bridge, as designed, run from three hundred to three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. If the bridge was narrowed, as per Sketch No. 2, I venture to say it would cost from fifty to sixty thousand dollars less than as per Sketch No. 1—the original design.

Why will not a steel bridge with concrete floor, and rail of narrower width not answer our needs, and which probably could be built for less than two hundred thousand dollars?

During the war structural steel sold up as high as $8.00 per hundred pound basis. To-day it is now $2.45 per hundred pound basis.

I would suggest that the city should engage an engineer to prepare plans and specifications, and call for tenders on a bridge as suggested; then the City Council would have full knowledge, and could decide on this important matter. The general impression amongst the people is that the bridge, as designed, is going to waste a lot of the citizens' money.

On Monday evening the City Council will meet and officially put Peterboro in the Daylight Saving area.

DAYLIGHT SAVING ADOPTED IN TORONTO

Mayor Church Issued a Proclamation This Morning.

TORONTO, March 29th.—This morning Mayor Church issued a proclamation, officially placing the city on the daylight saving basis, from 2 a.m. Sunday. From that hour daylight saving time will be Toronto city time, according to proclamation. The city solicitor is not quite sure of the Mayor's powers in the matter, or as to legality of his action, but public sentiment in this city is generally behind the daylight saving proposal, and it is expected that the majority of citizens will put their clocks and watches forward accordingly.

Design For a 810 Foot Steel Bridge Will Be Submitted to City's Special Committee

Toronto Company Have Prepared a Sketch as An Alternative, But Haven't Had Time to Get Plans and Specifications Ready—Would Not Estimate the Probable Cost of the Bridge They Propose—Arguments in Favour of a Steel Bridge.

EXAMINER'S INTERVIEW WITH ENGINEER

An alternative design for a steel bridge will be submitted by a Toronto engineering and construction company to the City Council's special committee when it meets on Tuesday night next to open contractors' tenders for the constructoin of the Hunter Street Bridge, based on Mr. Frank Barber's plans and specifications. It has been an open secret to interested persons both in Peterboro and Toronto, that this competitive design, probably with a rough estimate of cost, would be forthcoming, and an Examiner reporter was not surprised when the sketch was shown to him several days ago in the course of an interview with two of the company's engineers in their office.

This design which, as shown, must be differentiated from a complete set of plans and specifications, provides for a bridge 810 feet as compared with 1,065 feet in Mr. Barber's design. It shows a filling of approximately 100 feet at each end, presumably making a saving in the two approaches. According to the engineers this bridge would be just as strong as a concrete one. It is designed on the original dimensions and to carry the required traffic loads. The bridge proper consists of two truss spans over the river supported by concrete piers. The rest of the bridge would be made up of plate girder spans on steel columns. The floor would be of reinforced concrete with a wood block pavement.

THE PLANS ARE INCOMPLETE

The engineers stated that they had been working on the design a comparatively short time, and consequently they were unable to prepare complete plans and specifications for the Committee's consideration on Tuesday night. The sketch, however, was suggestive of what could be done with a steel bridge, and it may be implied that if the Committee intends to investigate the possibilities in his direction, all the details of specifications and costs will be available in the near future. This, however, is a departure that will doubtless depend upon the prices set out in the tenders for the concrete bridge. The question also arises as to whether the Committee proposes to override its consulting engineer by receiving competitive designs and plans that have not been officially and formally sought.

HAD NO ESTIMATE OF COST

To The Examiner's questions as to the probable cost of this steel bridge, the engineers replied that they could not fix an estimate until they had completed the plans and computed the cost of materials, labour and various contingencies. Moreover, it is stated that the company would be unable to quote an estimate when the sketch is forwarded next Tuesday. In this connection, the competitive steel design possibly offers some hope to those citizens who have, by some esoteric information, convinced themselves and persuaded others that the City can save indinately sums of money up to $100,000 by tearing up the [illegible]rber plans and calling in the steel men to take charge. On this point, the engineers interviewed by The Examiner were disappointingly reticent, although their calculations, if pursued with, may substantiate the seemingly sweeping statements made locally that the cost of the concrete bridge planned by Mr. Barber is much too expensive compared with the possibilities in steel.

Just here, it may be observed that Mr. Barber was engaged by the City to design a concrete bridge for a double track street car service, and the Ontario Municipal and Railway Board, upon the advice from the Hydro-Electric Commission that the bridge should provide for two-track interurban street cars, required a certain strength in the bridge that is not contemplated in the committee's latest instructions to Mr. Barber to ask for collaterial tends for a single track bridge. While this phase of what threatens to develop into a hopeless imbroglio, opens up too broad a subject, it seems only fair to point out that Mr. Barber has followed the instructions of the Bridge Committee, that his design is not elaborate or unduly ornamented and that there surely is no occasion for the acerbity that has crept into some of the written and spoken opinions on this problem.

COMING OF PEACE AFFECTS SITUATION

The question of comparative cost, for instance, is an immediate resultant of the change from war to peace conditions. One of the factors that influenced the Council when it decided upon a concrete bridge was the fact that steel was almost unobtainable, and the City was pledged to the early construction of the bridge. The Toronto engineers referred to above pointed out to The Examiner that the City would be well advised to call for competitive designs in steel and concrete, thereby introducing the element of competition with the likelihood of securing a lower price.

STEEL CONSTRUCTION EXACT SCIENCE

Steel, they emphasized, was a finished product that could be tested at the mills and known to a high degree of accuracy. Concrete is mixed "in the field." It must be constantly watched to insure the proper mixture of cement, sand and gravel. The honest contractor is in the mercy of the foreman and the mixers, some of whom may be careless or unaware of their responsibility. It is true that cement can be tested, but there is no testing of concrete in the forms, and a wrong mixture may cause a weakness that might prove fatal to the structure. Compared with concrete, steel construction is by far the more exact science.

Interviews were obtained from several other prominent members of the profession who are unquestionably neutral in their sentiments toward the Peterboro bridge problem. Their opinions will be presented later, but on one phase of the situation they were unanimous, namely, that there has developed around the Hunter Street Bridge "job" certain unethical and unprofessional evidences that are not exactly edifying to the profession. Moreover, they are curiously interested in the next moves of the Peterboro Council.

Chaperon Was a Big Success

Trinity Church Sunday School Was Filled to Capacity.

Full of bright breezy humour and ridiculous situations, "The Chaperon," a charming little three act comedy, presented last evening in the Reid street hall by the forty pupils of the "Whatsoever Class" of Trinity Methodist Sunday School, was a big success. The cast was cleverly chosen, and all the girls acquitted their part with the assurance of professionals, so much so that the audience never for a moment felt the usual uneasiness incidental to an amateur performance. The attendance was such that additional chairs were brought in several times to accommodate the large audience.

THE POLISH SITUATION

A New Crisis for the "Big Five" to Consider—Germany's Reply.

HUN DEFIANCE

(United Press.)

PARIS, March 29.—Polish situation, which has become highly important through Germany's apparent defiance regarding Danzig, was to be discussed by the Allied leaders to-day.

Information has been received by the French government that, following Germany's refusal to allow Polish divisions from France to land at Danzig, the Germans have begun to move new troops and heavy guns into that region. The "Big Five" was expected to arrive at some definite decision as to how this new crisis will be met. It was believed that the delegates feel that the situation demands immediate and firm pressure be brought to bear on the Germans.

Germany's Reply.

COPENHAGEN, March 29. — The German government's reply to the Allies demand that Polish troops be allowed to land at Dansig, declared the armistice requires only that the Allies be permitted freedom in crossing the Vistula river, according to advices from Berlin to-day.

New Time Will Come Into Effect On Sunday

At two o'clock to-morrow morning the railways will advance their clocks one hour, and for the summer months will operate under the daylight saving system. Those in Peterborough who contemplate travelling will have to be at the G.T.R. and C.P.R. Stations one hour ahead of the usual time in order to catch their trains.

Silver Tenor At the Royal

Frank Bessenger, Direct From the Regent, Toronto, Here All Week.

Frank Bessenger, the silver tenor who is to be engaged to appear at the Royal theatre all next week, is the possessor of a rich, high tenor voice that is sweetness of tone and purity is difficult to improve upon. There is this added quality even in his singing, that one can hear the words distinctly. His articulation is such that every person in the audience knows what he is singing about. Mr. Bessenger has appeared some of the largest and best theatres in America and comes here with a reputation already won. His engagement is limited and those fond of good singing should not miss this treat.

"There was a merchant in Regina who said he could possibly make expenses and sell at the label price on $ mi-ready clothes—I must fix up some other line that will allow me to make bigger profits.'

"That's not our view—we believe in small profits and a big business—and we can get rich with peace and prosperity in Canada," concluded Mr. Jenne.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, March 29TH, 1919.

A HOLLOW VICTORY

The farmer who is rejoicing over the defeat of the daylight saving measure in the House should not fail to notice that while he has been successful in depriving the city dweller of that much prized extra hour of sunlight at the end of the day's toil, that he himself will still have to get up an hour earlier than usual if he wants to catch a train. And if he visits a city he may have to adjust his watch to the daylight saving time as he had to last year. If the adoption of the new time by the Dominion Government would have caused a spread of Bolshevism as Mr. Sexsmith, the member for East Peterboro, gravely told the House, then the authorities had better be on their guard, for as far as the farmer is concerned, the action of the Railways in adopting the United States Daylight Saving has produced exactly the same conditions as the rural sections complained of under the system last year.

All the farmers have gained by the rejection of National Daylight Saving is the somewhat hollow satisfaction of stampeding the members of Parliament into an action that at heart they knew was unwise and in the fact that there will be no chance for the hired man to quit an hour earlier.

ACTION NEEDED NOW

There are so many imperative reasons why Peterborough should adopt Daylight Saving as a local measure that Mayor Duncan has been well advised in calling a special meeting of the City Council in order that the matter may be discussed as soon as possible by the aldermen and an official announcement can be made. As far as the railways are concerned the change to the Daylight Saving system commences to-morrow morning and there will be intolerable confusion unless the clocks here are set on an hour to conform with the railway time.

Reasons that make the local adoption of Daylight Saving necessary include, among many others, the following:—

1 The mix-up that would otherwise exist with the railways running an hour ahead of the general time will be removed.

2 Employees of the railways, telegraph companies and postal employees will not have to choose between losing an hour's sleep or of sacrificing an hour's pleasure at night as they would necessarily have to do if Daylight Saving were not adopted locally.

3 The employees of factories and stores will gain an extra hour of sunlight after the day's work for healthful recreation.

4 Business men who want to catch an evening train for Lakefield in the summer, would have to leave their business shortly after 4 o'clock if the city time is not changed to conform with the railways schedule.

6 It is being adopted by other cities and towns and if their example is not followed here there will be complications.

A study of the debate in the House of Commons shows that the opponents of the system could not produce any arguments against the measure except that it was a hardship to the farmers. City representatives unanimously supported the re-enactment of the Daylight Saving [illegible] is clear [illegible] that its [illegible] ence with the measure last year would be sufficient justification in itself for the Council to adopt this system locally, but when on top of that the railways are forced to use the new time, its adoption by them practically forces the cities in self-defence to pursue a like course. There should be no time lost in making an official announcement on the subject—at the present moment the people are all at sea and are looking for enlightenment.

THE MILITARY SERVICE ACT

The report of the operations of the Military Service Council tabled in the House of Commons on Thursday, although the figures only cover the period up to April 18, 1918, shows that the Military Service Act failed to produce the results in the Provinces of Quebec that were promised. Every one remembers how it was intimated to the people of Ontario that the Act would compel Quebec to do its duty. The young men of the Lower Province had failed to recognize their duty to the Empire, but the Military Service Act would compel them to get into uniform. That was the promise, but the actual figures failed to show that the act accomplished what its supporters had proclaimed it would. Up to the middle of April of last year the number of men from Quebec who were actually placed on duty as a result of the Military Service Act was only 4,401, while Ontario already nearly drained by voluntary enlistment, contributed three times as many, a total of 13,498 Ontario men being placed on duty in the period covered by the report. Far from making Quebec contribute its fair share of the quota, the situation had grown so serious that the calling out of more classes was being considered. "There could be no doubt," says the report, that the men available in Class 1 were, except in the Province of Quebec at the point of exhaustion, and if the stream of reinforcements for troops overseas were to be retained, there was no alternative but to call out other classes."

The figures comparing Ontario and Quebec form interesting food for thought. Here are a few of them: Total registration, Ontario 121,946, Quebec 118,229; reported for service, Ontario 7,843, Quebec 2,305; Claimed exemption, Ontario 114,103, Quebec 115,924; exemption granted on account of medical unfitness for combatant service, Ontario 49,308, Quebec 30,660; temporary and permanent exemption granted for other reasons, Ontario 43,898, Quebec 75,149; exemption refused, Ontario 19,153, Quebec 3,864; total appeals, Ontario 21, 562, Quebec 40,348;; total made available for service, from Ontario, 20,779, Quebec, 8,625, defaulters registered and not then apprehended, Ontario 1,719, Quebec 2,130; actually placed on duty, Ontario 15,498, Quebec 4,401; unregistered defaulters apprehended, Ontario 1,441, Quebec 579; registered defaulters apprehended, Ontario 263, Quebec, 362; men ordered by Registrar to report for duty, Ontario 43,971, Quebec, 3,439; men who obeyed the Registrar's orders to report, Ontario 9,284, Quebec 2,069; men who enlisted voluntarily before being ordered to report since the date of the proclamation on August 29, 1917, Ontario 4,510, Quebec 1,581.

THE SMART-PRATT CHARGES

The sensation attack made by Lieut.-Col. Pratt in the Ontario Legislature on Thursday against Argyle House and the administration of Canadian military affairs in England, following so closely upon the sweeping indictment along the same lines in the Quebec Legislature by Brigadier—General Charles A. Smart cannot be ignored by the Dominion Government. Such statements made by two well known officers who it should be remembered are Conservative members of their respective legislatures, are too serious to be answered by a few words on behalf of Sir George Perley and those who have been in charge of the administration of the affairs of the Canadian army in the old land. Col. Pratt has gone even further than General Smart in his condemnation of the conditions existent among the Canadian forces in England, and it is notable that his speech was applauded by members of both sides of the Legislature. His indictment of the management of Canadian affairs is so detailed and so serious in its accusations that it is hard to imagine how the Dominion Government can allow it to go unchallenged.

New light on the administration of Argyle House is given by Toronto Saturday Night which in the course of a long leader based on the Smart charges remarks that "The truth is known to most Canadians in touch with the situation at Argyll House, and to staff officers of the various branches of the overseas army, was that during Sir George Perley's regime and probably thereafter, petticoat influence was supreme. The real Governess Minister was Lady Drummond (formerly of Montreal, and it is supposed that the Countess of Minto was her Adjutant-General. Now, without depreciating in any way the patriotic zeal and unselfish intentions of these or any other ladies, it may be said that they were more deeply interested in the social side of war than in the efficient organization of the service. With them the social graces counted for a great deal more than the welfare of the common soldier, if it happened to involve the future of any pleasant ass, who did not permit mere considerations of public duty to interfere with his usefulness in filling a vacant chair at a dinner party. Officers with projects of reform and re-organization, who put duty only first, were regarded as undesirables and treated as such. It was an open secret that Sir George Perley behaved like an "old dear," and his complacence was to have been rewarded with a coronet, had not Lloyd George, or somebody in authority grown very stingy with their old coronets.

These ladies were also the sponsors of the policy of promoting the cause of Imperialism by shipping wounded Canadian soldiers all over the British Isles, instead of placing them in Canadian hospitals where they could be attended by doctors and nurses from their own land. It was a peculiarly feminine suggestion that a mystic spell of Imperialistic sentiment would be evoked by leaving suffering soldiers scattered about God knew where, that would compensate for any lack of proper surgical attention.

The situation undoubtedly has its humorous aspects, but the facts are far too serious and tragic to be laughed away, or even waved aside in the top-lofty manner the Acting Prime Minister adopted the other day. Brigadier-General Smart's demand for the investigation of the treatment accorded the officers and men of the Overseas forces has been backed by the unanimous vote of the Quebec Legislature, despite the fact that he is an opponent of the Gouin administration. The Federal administration cannot resist such a demand with a few compliments to Sir George Perley which might pass current were it merely a reference to his abilities as a rector's church warden, but are no answer to the indictment against himself and Sir Edward Kemp as Ministers of Canadian Forces Overseas."

Independents Attack German Government

(Special to The Examiner.)

Weimar, March 29.—In the National Assembly to-day Hugo Haase, the Independent Socialist leader, made a violent attack upon Gustave Noske, the Minister of Defence, for his methods in suppressing recent strikes, shooting of Spartacans and other alleged abuses of power, claiming that the Defence Minister's course suggested returning Imperialism.

Herr Haase also attacked Chancellor Scheidemann for under-estimating Sunday's demonstration in Berlin in favour of General Ludendorff, declaring this showed that the present military leaders of the nation were standing solidly behind Ludendorff, supported by the Conservatives and other parties of the Right as well as a portion of the Bourgeoisie. Herr Haase, who was frequently interrupted during his attack, declared in favour of entering into immediate relations with Russia, saying that the Ukraine would soon be able to supply Germany with raw material and later with food. He said, however, that the Independent Socialists would not consider a treaty with Russia as one militating against England or the Entente in general.

Germany Is To Mislead

officers and soldiers of the old regime is being watched apprehensively by the Radical elements, who claim it is the beginning of the reactionary movement.

The participation of General Ludendorff in recent street demonstrations during which he was loudly cheered by the crowds, worries the Pacifists who also are concerned in the enlistments in the new military forces under old leaders. Officers assure correspondent these are merely efforts to prepare for the struggle with Bolshevism. The militarists claim the new organization is not political though they admit they will depend that the Government swing to the right in reaction in case there is any other uprising of the Radicals.

Labourites in the Rhineland are threatening to demand a 25 per cent wage increase and a six-hour day. Spartacans are seizing the opportunity to prepare for a general political strike, which they declare will result in the socialization of Essen, Dusseldorf and other industrial centres.

A NEW CHANCEL IS BEING ADDED TO ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

Great War Veterans of Peterboro' Present Three Memorial Windows.

VOLUNTARY LABOUR

One of the sequels to the [illegible] of the Armistice has been [illegible] tion of permanent memorials [illegible] memory of those who went [illegible] St. and those who will not return [illegible] the George's Anglican Church [illegible]gable South end, where [illegible] nummember of the congregation [illegible] such a bering thirty-eight [illegible] erected memorial is at present [illegible] the work in the form of a [illegible] the men being undertaken [illegible] the direction of Mr. George [illegible] Lancaster, who originated the idea [illegible]ding the work are engaged in [illegible]tices as all are means no measure [illegible]stead of returning working men [illegible] when their daily ing to their homes voluntarily spend the work is over [illegible] of completing the time in the [illegible]ours. In commemoration [illegible] building a [illegible] comrades who have fallen, the [illegible] War Veterans presented to the Church three valuable [illegible] windows taken from the [illegible] and be [illegible] quarters and these have been placed in the west end of the new chancel.

History of the Church

The history of the church dates back [illegible] years ago when the present rector, J. Price, started out of [illegible] services in the garden loaned for the purpose by Mr. Manley. In [illegible] Sundays the congregation grew to such an extent that the services were transferred to the old shed in the Exhibition Grounds. Feeling that the congregation was fairly well established the rector urged the purchase of a permanent building and secured the present one which had formerly been used to hold union church services at Crawford's Grove, and it is to this modest building the new chancel is being added. Mr. Price hopes that with a few years the present building may be made into a parish hall and a splendid new church be erected.

Formal Opening

The formal opening of the chancel will be held on Easter Day when the Rev. Archdeacon Warren will conduct the services. On the following Wednesday evening Bishop Roper of Ottawa, who has been making a tour through the West on behalf of the Returned Soldiers Commission will conduct the service. The Sunday after Easter Bishop Sweeny will take the morning service.

To Complete Church

While the chancel is being erected new pews which were bought from the old Murray Street Baptist Church are being installed to take the place of chairs which have been used up to the present time. The rector confidently expects that the next improvement to the church will be made in the form of the presentation of a Bishop's Chair and a brass lecturn. He also looks forward to having a surpliced choir in a short time, but at present the finances of the church will not permit the buying of the necessary surplices.

A NEW PLAY, "THE PRODIGAL LIAR"

William Desmond Appearing as Star at Empire Theatre To-night.

William Desmond displays a brand of humour in "The Prodigal Liar," his latest Hampton production for Exhibitors Mutual, that will extract a laugh from "Old Man Gloom" himself.

The picture is well titled, for Desmond as "Monte," who poses as a bedman of the west, is called upon to lie hard and lie often to the girl for whose deception he pretends to be a desperado. He tells the girl he has "aphasia" which is the reason for his lawless actions. Being told that a blow on the head will cure his affliction, the innocent maid crowns him with a lofty rock, and almost ends his career as an Ananias.

"Monte" saves the girl from the real bandit, however, and all is well. But for real, honest-to-goodness, downright, cussed lying, "Monte" is there and qualifies as life member of the Ancient Order of Ananias.

Specks Floating Before His Eyes

When specks start to float before the eyes, when everything turns black for a few seconds and you feel as if you were going to faint, you may rest assured that your liver is not working properly.

The essential thing to do in all cases where the liver is slow, lazy or torpid, is to put it right by the use of a medicine that will clear away all the waste matter from the system, prevent as well as cure all the troubles arising from this accumulation which has collected in the [illegible]

Keep [illegible] by using Milburn's [illegible] Liver Pills and you will have [illegible] trouble of any kind. They will clear away all the waste and effette matter which has collected and make the liver active and working properly.

Mr. [illegible] R. Morrison, Grand River Falls, N.S., writes:—"Several months ago I was troubled with a sour stomach, and had specks floating before my eyes. I took five vials of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which cured me and cleared my blood before any length of time. I told my friends about it and they got some, and they, [illegible] themselves different ones. They took them. I recommend your pills very highly."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FRECKLES

March Worst Month for This Trouble —How to Remove Easily.

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in March and happily there is also a remedy for these ugly blemishes, and no one need stay freckled.

Simply get an ounce of Othine, double strength, from your druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and in a few days you should see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the light ones have vanished entirely. Now is the time to rid yourself of freckles, for if not removed now they may stay all summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Your money back if Othine fails.

List of Long Concrete Arches That Refutes Local Objection To the River Span of 235 Feet

In discussing the Hunter Street Bridge problem the average citizen, while admitting his ignorance of engineering problems, has entertained certain preconceived ideas, often erroneous, which he has expressed in good faith and defended by affirming their appeal to reason. Even prominent but unprofessional men have objected to the 235 foot concrete arch span as a dangerous experiment. Had it been proposed to span with familiar iron plates and girders they would probably have accepted almost anything as a possibility, even a Quebec bridge, but they naturally believed there should be at least one pier in the river to support a superstructure of concrete.

It should be interesting and reassuring to these apprehensive citizens to know that there are quite a number of concrete single arch spans exceeding in length that which Peterboro has dreamed of building, and the fact that most of the bridges mentioned herewith have been doing duty for years, some of them old in service, should be convincing that a long concrete arch is no experiment.

LONG SINGLE ARCH SPANS

The Risorgimento bridge in Rome, one of the most famous in the world, has a single arch of 328 feet.

There is a bridge in Auckland, New Zealand, with a 400 foot arch.

The Rocky River bridge in Cleveland has a 280 foot arch.

In Spokane, Washington, there is another single arch of 250 feet.

On the California highways there is a bridge with a 240 feet arch.

The Walnut Lane bridge in Philadelphia has a single arch of 233 feet.

The Gruenwald bridge in Munich, Bavaria takes second place to Peterboro's project. It has a single arch of only 230 feet.

AN UNFINISHED ARCH OF 700 FEET

In addition to these completed bridges, there is the Henry Hudson Memorial Bridge at Spuyten Dyvil, N. Y., as yet unfinished, which was designed with a single arch of 700 feet.

An arch exceeding 600 feet to cross the Niagara Gorge has been designed by T. Kennard Thompson, a Canadian engineer residing in New York. It is not known whether this bridge will be built, but it is understood that there has never been any adverse criticism of the plans.

Several other bridges might be mentioned, but the above list should afford sufficient evidence to dissipate any doubts that a 235 foot concrete arch is practicable in this city.

The Examiner obtained this information from a Toronto authority who disclaimed any interest in the proposed Peterboro bridge other than professional observation of the plans which have been the subject of illustrated articles in Canadian engineering journals. His attention was drawn to the climatic differences obtaining in the countries and states in which these bridges are located as compared with Ontario, but this engineer replied that the Cleveland, New York, Pittsburg and Philadelphia bridges were subjected to variations of climate practically the same as in Peterboro.

Cross of War For Local Man

James V. O'Shea rewarded for conspicious bravery.

Mrs. James H. O'Shea of our town is the proud possessor of the Belgian Croix de Guerre which rare decoration was recently bestowed upon her son James V. O'Shea, for conspicious bravery at the front. In a letter from the Militia Department, congratulating Mrs. O'Shea she is informed that details will follow in due time recounting the event which resulted in the much coveted honor.

Mrs. O'Shea has every reason to be proud of the war record of her family, another of her sons, Pte. Ewart O'Shea having a few weeks ago returned from England to which he had been invalided, when after two years of service in the trenches he was wounded by a bursting shell. Her son-in-law, Lieut. S. Murphy (Reverted to Captain) who also answered his Country's call, was awarded the Military Cross for conspicious bravery; and just two weeks before the close of the war lost his life while assisting one of his wounded men to safety, after a successful raid on the enemy.

Increases Your Weight, Restores Lost Strength, Prevents Illness

Every day come new converts to that great army of men and women who rejoice in new-found health that came to them through the use of that wonderful blood-renewing preparation called "FERROZONE." Very simple how it acts. All you have to do is take two small chocolate-coated tablets with a sip of water at the close of each meal.

Ferrozone is a marvel. It contains just what thin blood lacks—lots of iron, but mark you, the kind of iron your blood is able to absorb. Ferrozone puts life and vim into the blood. Makes it rich, red and nourishing. Naturally the body is better fed and grows stronger day by day.

Of course digestion must be improved and probably the stomach will require aid as well. Ferrozone serves the purpose admirably. Those who use it, enjoy appetite and digestive powers far beyond the ordinary.

That tired feeling is replaced by the buoyant, joyous sensation of health and vigor. Day by day as your strength increases, you feel new energy surging through your veins, and know that a great tonic of great merit is at work.

No remedy more nourishing or uplifting, no treatment so sure to bring lasting health, good spirits and contentment. Ferrozone contains just what run-down folks need; it cures because it supplies more nutriment than you can get in any other way. 50c per box or six for $2.50 at all dealers, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Clergyman's Wife Wants Women to Know Advantages of Internal Bathing

If women could only see the thousands of letters Dr. Tyrrell has received from grateful women in all parts of the world thanking him for his wonderful invention for Internal Bathing, they would soon discard the medicine bottle and look to the cause of their trouble. 95 per cent. of all human ills are due to accumulated waste in the Colon or Large Intestine. Warm water properly used with the 'J. B. L. Cascade' will relieve the cause of your troubles and perfect health will follow.

A Winnipeg clergyman writes:

"My wife is naturally sensitive about having her name appear in public print, yet anxious that others should know what the 'J.B.L. Cascade' has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. For years she has been doctoring for Constipation which became worse each year. Since using the 'J.B.L. Cascade,' first about four years ago, she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong again. Should any person wish this letter confirmed you are at liberty to give my name in full."

The "J.B.L. Cascade" is an invention perfected by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York and has done much during the past four years to restore health and overcome disease than all other means combined.

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is shown and explained at the Warne Drug Store. Ask for booklet explaining all about Internal Bathing and what it has done for others. It is free.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE PETERBORO Y.M.C.A.

Character of Prospect Members Was Examined and Inquired Into by a Special Committee—Association Was Established in Peterboro Over Half a Century Ago.

A short notice given in the different pulpits of Peterboro on Sunday, December 13th, 1868 notified the people of the town that a public meeting would be held the "Good Foresters' Hall" on Monday evening for the purpose of organizing a Young Men's Christian Association in Peterborough.

At this first meeting Mr. A. H. Campbell presided, and Mr. W. J. Mason was the secretary. Some of the men at this meeting were Rev. J. M. Roger, Rev. Mr. McBeth, Mr. Jas. Edwards, Mr. R. Ridout, Rev. Mr. Johnston, Mr. D. W. Dumble (now the police magistrate), Mr. William Cameron, Mr. Dalland, Mr. J. W. Gilmour, Mr. Hamills, Mr. J. A. (Sheriff) Hall, Mr. James Stratton.

After several more meetings a constitution was drafted, the following gentlemen elected to the first directorate: Mr. T. Fairbairn, Mr. D. W. Dumble, Mr. Pentland, Mr. J. Robinson, Mr. Stratton, Mr. J. W. Gilmour, Mr. William Cameron, Mr. J. W. Dunsford, Mr W. J. Mason, Mr. F. Donnelly, Mr J. A. Hall (the Sheriff), and Mr. D. S. Eastwood. From this year the following officers were elected for the year 1869:

President—Mr. William Cameron.
Vice-President—Mr. D. W. Dumble.
Corresponding Secretary—Mr. J. A. Hall.
Recording Secretary — Mr. W. J. Mason.
Treasurer—Mr. D. S. Eastwood.

First Meetings.

This first executive, at subsequent meetings, approved of a hymn-book for the Association and rented the rooms of the Good Templars at a yearly rental of $25. At that time prospective members had to gain a majority vote of the officers of the Association, who met every Monday, either at the Y.M.C.A. rooms or at the home of one of the officers, where a social time was spent, and usually a lecture given by one of the members.

Following is the report of the committee on membership brought in at a meeting held on February 23, 1869:

"We, the committee on membership, beg to report that we have examined and enquired into the character of Messrs. Tobias, Fitzgerald, Anson, Sperry, William Green and R. W. Grubber, and recommend them as suitable persons to become members of the Association."

John Erskine, Chairman.

Weekly Gatherings.

Interest was aroused in the town by a weekly meeting held in the Town Hall in Ashburnham every Sabbath evening. At first the meetings were slimly attended. Then the secretary reported that they were "tolerably" attended. Subsequently after engaging evangelists like Mr. Douglas Russell (not the late Pastor Russell), full steam ahead was made, and the Association could be said to be in a fairly flourishing condition, although the ante-room of the Good Templars was still used as the Y.M.C.A. rooms. That real literary talent fairly ran riot in those days is evident from the essays that were read at the different meetings of the Executive. Here are a few of them:

"Hymns"—Mr. J. A. Hall.
"Life"—Mr. J. A. Hall.
"Why are professedly Christian people averse to talk about personal religion in their everyday life?"—Mr. Crawfurd.
"How far may Christians engage in worldly amusements?"—Mr. Crawfurd.
"Source whence men derive knowledge of God."—Mr. Fairbairn.

The Association work was also carried into the rural communities. Regular prayer meetings were held in South Dummer and North Monaghan.

Col. Hauttain.

Colonel Frederick Haultain, a Peterborough boy, who removed to the Canadian west, and was for a time Premier and afterwards Governor of the North-West Territories, and to whom a memorial tablet was erected and still stands in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, was one of the first honorary members of the local Y.M.C.A.

At a meeting on May 3rd, Mr. Eastwood read an essay on "Hope," and the same night a reading on "Horatius at the Bridge," from Lord Macauley's "Lays of Ancient Rome," was delivered by the Rev. Mr. MacDonnell.

At a meeting on October 18th, 1869, the following report on the objects of the Association was read and still stands to-day:

"The object of our Association is for the moral and spiritual improvement of the young men of our town and for such work that comes within the scope of such associations. We are the adherents or members of the various evangelical churches in town, and such an association as this is a good means of bringing together those who, though differing on minor matters, such as church government, are all agreed on the essential matters of our [illegible]. PTE. J. H. HALL.

Among the Peterborough soldiers who returned on the Carmania was Pte. J. H. Hall, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion, but was later transferred to the 5th C.M.R., which came home on the Carmania and was disbanded at Montreal. Pte. Hall saw heavy fighting in the battle of Vimy Ridge, and was there badly wounded. His home is at 677 Water Street.

Many of the spring suits are developed in tan or gray.

Presidents.

Since the Y.M.C.A. was organized, the following gentlemen have been Presidents of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A.: Messrs. G. M. Roger, H. S. Griffin, O. C. Rouse, J. W. Bennet, B. F. Ackerman, R. E. Harding, J. H. Connal, J. F. Jeffers, J. W. Flavelle, D. B. Gardiner, Alfred Parker, William Madill, J. C. Shook, J. C. Turnbull, F. W. Hilliard, G. J. Earley, Dr. W. D. Scott, E. B. Edwards, J. J. Turner, Jr., J. H. Connal and the present presiding officer, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.

The present standing of the Y.M.C.A., from every angle, including membership and finances, is one to be proud of. The last cent of debt was wiped out this year, and at the 37th annual meeting, held last January, it was reported that over 250 of the senior members of the Association were on active service. The religious work of the institution has gone on apace, and besides the meetings of the Willing Workers' Club, held every Sunday afternoon, there are Bible Classes under the supervision of a competent teacher for every class of the gymnasium. The Social Work, under the able direction of Mr. G. H. Roper, has been given new impetus, and a new innovation was introduced when the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company were invited to the building to share in the privileges. Every department of the Association during the war made wonderful strides in spite of the handicap of the loss of some of the most active members, and now that the war is over it is planned to make the local "Y" one of the largest and most wide-awake branches in the province. The general secretaries since the organization of the local branch number thirteen, and are as follows: Mr. Williams, Mr. R. J. Colville, Mr. Stephens, Mr. W. F. Chapman, Mr. R. O. Crowe, Mr. H. V. Smith, Mr. G. H. Williamson, Mr. H. C. Wright, Mr. F. G. Hassard, Mr. H. N. Gilchrist, Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, Mr. C. N. Meserve, and Mr. G. H. Roper, who is also physical director.

Present Site.

At the regular monthly meeting held in the rooms on June 3rd, 1890, Mr. R. J. Colville, the general secretary, read the bequest of the late Mrs. S. J. Nichols of $20,000 towards an Association building. At first it was suggested that the Town Council be petitioned to grant a site 150 feet by 100 feet on Central Park to build quarters, but seemingly this proposition was dropped because the Metheral property, now covered by those terraces on Murray Street, running from Dr. J. A. Morgan's house to the residence of Dr. J. W. McPherson, was considered, but finally rejected, when the present site at the corner of Murray and George Streets was secured. The bequest had by this time accumulated to $27,000, and Mr. William Blackwell made the plans, and Mr. A. A. McIntyre, now Ald. McIntyre, received the contract for $13,175, without heating, lighting or wiring. In 1879 the Association moved into its new home, a beautiful and commodious building, but which now, owing to the large membership, is much too small. A bronze tablet in memory of the late Mrs. Nicholls was erected in the hall, and still stands over the fireplace.

Camp Site.

In July, 1906, a camp site at Clear Lake, in Kawartha Park, was purchased, which, up to the opening of hostilities, was used for the purpose of holding boys' camps in charge of Association officials. The camp, it is altogether likely, will be re-opened now that the war has ceased. In May, 1905, dormitories were erected, so that young men away from home might enjoy the atmosphere of a Christian organization. The boys' department was enlarged and bowling alleys installed some time ago, and in 1909 the Board of Education first made arrangements with the Association, whereby the students of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute were to receive their instruction under the supervision of the physical instructor of the Y.M.C.A. After considerable discussion billiard and pool tables were placed in the building for the use of members, enabling them to indulge in a game under proper influences.

The Musical Comedy "Flo-Flo"

"Flo-Flo", that typical laugh-making musical comedy which had a sensationally successful run at the Cort Theatre, New York, for all last season will be brought by John Cort to the Grand Opera House, Saturday April, 5th, matinee and evening.

Just one of the reasons why "Flo-Flo" in addition to being Mr. Cort's "war-bride" musical show has been turning crowds away from the Cort nightly is its comely chorus, every member of which—not only is a "perfect thirty-six," but also boasts of that hitherto unknown quantity among chorus girls—a sense of humor. Another may be found in the trick hats of that comedy pair, Pinky and Afoysius, whose feet are as agile as their headgear.

"Flo-Flo" has a plot, which must be attributed to Frank de Grasse. It has to do with the love affair of Miss Angelina Stokes and her childhood playmate, a worldly mother and an imposter of a Count who schemes to marry Miss Stokes for her money.

The Bride Shop operated by Mosh-and Simpson two exceptionally well drawn comedy characters is the background for one of the most striking fashion parades ever seen in the stage of a New York theatre. The models worn by Flo-Flo the beautiful mannequin and her assistants in the "perfect 36" chorus the front the shops of the most exclusive modistes in New York and Paris. It would be difficult to say whether "Flo-Flo" owes its popularity more to its snappy lines and catchy lyrics or to the lavishness with which John Cort has costumed his cast. The evening wraps worn in one number alone are said to have cost the producer thousands of dollars. Among the more popular of the numbers composed for "Flo-Flo" by Silvio Hein are "Good Bye Happy Days," "On the River Nile," "Would You Say No," "Don't Trust Them," "Would you Love Me," and the "Ziegfeld Girl." An augmented orchestra is also an enjoyable feature.

Special Meetings at George Street

Last night concluded the first week's "special meetings" at George street Methodist church. Five very interesting and inspiring meetings were held this week in the Sunday school room of the church. But, if the attendance keeps increasing the meetings will have to be held in the church. Let everybody come next week and overfill even the church. It will do everybody good.

Each meeting commences at 7.45 o'clock. Then an address is delivered by some local preacher. These addresses have been very inspiring, so inspiring in fact that several persons have definitely decided to open their hearts to God. After each address, Mr. Thomas, the pastor, has asked those to come forward who wish to become a child of God. Several have responded and many others have asked to be prayed for.

Five Addresses.

Mr. Thomas organized this work and has received the hearty co-operation of the other preachers of the city. "Special hymn sheets" have been used all week, and new ones are printed for next week. Five very helpful addresses will also be delivered next week. Let everyone turn out and help along this evangelistic work. It is helping others, it can help you.

Monday—Rev. Mr. Manning.
Tuesday—Rev. Mr. Greatrix.
Wednesday—Rev. Mr. Whattam.
Thursday—Rev. Mr. Manning.
Friday—Rev. Mr. Pogue.

For the First Time in Four Years Peterboro Will Have a "Hallelujah Wedding"

Lieut.-Col. Morehen Will Perform the Ceremony in Victoria Hall —Special Features of the Occasion.

For the first time in four years a "Hallelujah Wedding" will be celebrated on Monday, April 21st, by the Salvation Army and the event is being looked forward to with keen interest on the part of members of the Army. The principals in the unusual event this time are Miss Aileen Braund, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund and Mr. Stanley Richardson, of the Canadian General Electric Works. Extensive preparations are being made for the affair which on account of the large number who will attend, is to be held in Victoria Hall, as the seating capacity of the Temple was considered to be insufficient for the expected guests.

Preceding the ceremony an immense banquet will be held in the Temple, Simcoe street, starting at 5 o'clock. After this the guests will assemble at Victoria Hall for the wedding, which will be performed by Lt.-Col. Morehen, Montreal, Provincial Commander, assisted by Adjutant Buntin. In connection with the wedding service all the customary ceremonies will be observed, inclusive of a speaker for the bride and for the groom. A feature of the wedding will be the presence of a white robed choir, the full band will also be in attendance. A large number of noted officials in the Salvation Army are expected from outside points.

2nd Battalion Will Go to Kingston

Cannot Create Another Dispersal Station in Peterboro.

The following letter has been received by Mr. S. Whatley, Secretary of the Great War Veterans Association from the Hon. Minister of Militia, General Mewburn, re demobilization of 2nd Battalion at Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—I am directed by the Hon. the Minister of Militia to acknowledge receipt of your letter in regard to the request of the Peterborough Branch of your Association, that the 2nd Battalion be demobilized at Peterborough. A record of the City of Peterborough in all the different phrases of war work is fully appreciated by General Mewburn, but it is impossible at this late to alter the demobilization arrangements by creating another dispersal station at Peterborough. The Overseas authorities were furnished with all the necessary forms as based on the present Stations and the men themselves have had an opportunity of intimating to which dispersal station they desire to proceed. Word has just been received that the 2nd Battalion will proceed to Kingston upon arrival in Canada. These units are allocated by the Overseas authorities and it must therefore be assumed that the larger per-centage of the present personnel of the 2nd Battalion comes from the Kingston district. General Mewburn regrets that this state it is not practicable to create a new dispersal station at Peterborough, nor can it be arranged for the 2nd Battalion to be demobilized there. Arrangements will be made, however, so that as soon as the men from Peterborough and that District are demobilized at Kingston they will either be put on a special train or in special cars attached to the regular trains and sent in a regular body to Peterborough for the reception which the citizens may have prepared for them. Officials at Kingston will be requested to try to have Peterborough men dealt with immediately upon arrival at Kingston.

Yours faithfully,
W. R. Creighton,
Major, Secretary.

Have Rosy Cheeks! Look Prettier! Feel Better!

Simplest Thing in the World to Do at the Small Cost of a Quarter.

You seldom see a woman with a pale, dull-eyed, thin-cheeked, and utterly worn out, who doesn't suffer more or less from headache and constipation. Her poor looks are more largely due to neglect than anything else.

Most women can have sparkling eyes and ruby cheeks if they will but use regularly a blood cleansing and laxative medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Just follow these simple directions. To-night take two Dr. Hamilton's Pills and note how much fresher you feel to-morrow morning. Your face will be clearer, your appetite better, your spirits brighter. Next night take three or perhaps two pills again. Gradually reduce the dose as mentioned in the company's directions.

Day by day you will note a steady gain. You'll quickly have back those happy girlish looks you once were proud to think about. No other medicine can do so much for you as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Buttermilk

Presentation to Mr. D. Morrison

Lakefield Curling Club Honour Retiring President.

LAKEFIELD, March 29.—The Curling Club of Lakefield met last evening in the Forester's Hall and elected the following officers for the coming season.

President—Mr. Thompson Braden.
Vice-President—Mr. R. J. Jory.
Second-Vice-President— Mr. Theodore Crawford.
Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. W. W. Leonard.

Committee—Father Meagher, Dr. J. C. Simth, Dr. S. J. Gibson, Mr. T. Chawford, Mr. C. S. Tanner and Mr. D. H. Charlton.

Mr. D. Morrison, the retiring president, who is leaving the village was presented with a case of pipes by the members of the club, as a token of esteem. Mr. Morrison made a suitable reply.

A progressive euchre party and smoker was held with a number of invited guests. Refreshments were also served.

Applicants at Labour Bureau

Twenty-nine Were Placed During the Week.

Of fifty-eight applicants at the Labor Bureau during the past week half of twenty-nine were placed in positions. Thirty-two of the men were returned soldiers and Captain Morrison found employment for eighteen of these. One feature of the applications at the bureau is the fact that in the last week they have shown a disposition solely from brass finishers or munition workers while during the past wek they have shown a disposition to become more general. At present the line up shows applications from clerks, painters, laborers and almost every class of labour. Three applications for female help were received and one woman placed.

The farmers are evidently in pressing need of help and a large number of positions on neighbouring farms are vacant. These Mr. Morrison and Mr. Robertson find hard to fill presumably on account of the wages offered.

Every garden requires bonemeal to enrich it.

Voice of The People

141 Hunter Street East,
Peterboro, March 28, 1919

To the Editor of the Examiner:—
Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

In your issue of Friday, the 28th instant, a letter appears over the name of J. W. Worth, presumably a gentleman and the former city councillor of that name, and in which he complains of my failing to come forward to assist the City Council. I am under the impression that he is in error and would ask him to seek the facts before he draws his inferences. There are many of my fellow citizens, including City Councillors past and present, who know me better, I am sure, than to allow such statements to pass unchallenged. I beg to refer Mr. Worth to the first paragraph of my notes, as published on page 8 of your issue for Thursday, the 27th instant, which I now take the opportunity to confirm and emphasize.

I am a working man in the true sense of the term, my "existence," and not my "surplus cash," depending upon my daily labours, and I do not possess the necessary property qualifications for such an honour as membership of the City Council, even if my fellow citizens considered me worthy to represent them and proved this by electing me. But I hope to live to see the day when personal riches as measured in dollars only shall cease to be the criterion of qualifications for the personnel of the service in the Public Weal, and that citizenship and the Public Confidence combined with ability and willingness to serve, shall rule election to any public office whatsoever from "floor scrubber" to "Priemership," or as a "Viceroy of Empire."

Kindly bear with me for a moment while I voice in public, what I have hitherto only advocated, I might say "persistently advocated," in private for many years, and when discussing public enterprises in the past with various of our City Councillors, viz: The "co-opting" of members on committees for the special service for the city, such "co-opted members" being chosen by the Council from the citizens generally in consequence of special knowledge or experinece they may possess, and who are willing to act in such capacity, without remuneration beyond out of pocket expenses. To this end I some time ago deposited with Mr. S. R. Armstrong, our City Clerk, a resume of my traning, education, qualifications, experience, etc., and which any City Councillor can, I presume, see and read for himself on application to our City Clerk.

Should Mr. Worth consider that he has done me an injustice, wittingly or unwittingly, I simply ask him to use the same medium to express his regret that he has used to voice his complaint, the Public Press.

I am, dear sir,
Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE.

Sir: Structural steel shapes can be landed in Peterboro to-day, freight and duty paid for $3.40 per 100 lbs.

Assembled and erected tanks can be put in Peterboro for 10 cents per pound or thereabouts.

A bridge with a 250 ft. central span, with 1200 feet of approaches, all of structural steel could be erected in Peterboro to-day for about $125,000, and adding $50,000 for two river piers, $175,000.

This bridge being of plate girders and open lattice girders, 250 ft. span.

Bridges of this type cross the river at Boston, Mass. Schenectady, N.Y., and many other places. They are pleasing in appearance, as all you see is a broad smooth floor and a massive hand railing.

This bridge could be built in Peterboro shops to-day; the shapes could be purchased in Canada in part, or whole probably.

My authorities for the above are Civil Engineers' Hand Book, Metal Trade Review and Peterboro men used to estimating on very large work.

Yours truly,
N. C. Mills, C.E., E.E.,
Member A.I.E.E.

Special Services Here To-morrow

Protestant Churches of the City Pursuing Policy of Reconstruction.

A series of union meetings will be held next week in this city in the different churches in connection with the campaign of reconstruction which is taking place in the Protestant church. Special speakers from outside points will speak in the city next Sunday, beginning with Rev. R. B. McKay, D.D., of Toronto, who will speak in Springville in the morning and will officiate at the evening service at Knox Presbyterian church. Dr. J. T. McCarroll, also of Toronto, will speak in Lakefield Sunday morning and will be at St. Paul's church in the evening. The Home Mission Superintendent of Manitoba, Rev. S. C. Murray, a forceful and gripping speaker, will preach in Warsaw in the morning and at St. Andrew's church at the evening service.

These union meetings will also be held throughout the week and on Monday and Tuesday evenings special services will be held at Knox church; Wednesday and Thursday at St. Andrew's church and on Friday at St. Paul's church. All of the speakers who take part in Sunday's services will speak at the week day meetings, also Mr. G. Tower Ferguson, a noted layman of Toronto and Rev. W. A. McTaggart, of Toronto.

A week from Sunday special speakers from Toronto will be here to wind up the campaign, among whom will be Frank Yeigh, the noted Canadian lecturer and boy's worker.

THE HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

(By MR. DAVID CONROY.)

To the Editor of the Examiner:—

There is a great deal said and written, and considerable criticism made, and I may say many knockers, over the proposed cost of building the Hunter Street Bridge. One party knocks the City Council, another the Engineer, and still another the plans. The facts are these: Our old bridge is about worn out, all agree that we require a new bridge. In order to get that new bridge the City Council had to engage an engineer to draw a set of plans to suit the same, and they very wisely advertised for tenders to take out the same. No fault may be found with this. I understand Mr. Barber was the lowest tender, and awarded the contract. He accordingly prepared a set of plans and submitted them to the Council, and the Council having approved of them, called for tenders. That is the proper course to pursue. But the trouble started where the lowest tender was about $100,000.00 higher than the estimated cost. The reason for this is the threefold advancement in price of all materials. The blame should not be shouldered elsewhere. In my opinion the Kaiser is the direct cause of it all.

In reading Mr. Hall's and Mr. Pretty's articles in Thursday evening's Examiner, in reference to the bridge, I will say that I quite agree with parts of their statements, but with other parts I do not.

All writers seem to put the high cost of the bridge on the single arch. On that I take issue. First, the high cost is due to the height, which, according to plans, is 80 feet from river bottom to top of hand rail. This height cannot be overcome, as the C.P.R. will not permit a lower bridge, then, also, the enormous quantity of false work required for that height. Mr. Hall states $75,000.00 for the timber for false work alone, and he is not far out, but that false work cannot be eliminated, even if a steel bridge is built. I understand the height of the bridge cannot be avoided, as the late City Council made an agreement with the Quaker Oats for a bridge that height. The question is, can the Quaker Oats Company compel the city to live up to the above agreement? If they can, why find fault with the Engineer over the proposed height? There is considerable said about building two or three arches instead of one. Certainly, the more piers, the stronger the bridge, but not any cheaper than the one-arch. $10,000.00 can be taken off the price of the bridge by eliminating the granite finish, and granite masonry, which are only ornamental, and add nothing towards the strength of the bridge.

Mr. Hall refers to the Smith Street Bridge, and the cost of same. I might say there is no comparison between the two bridges. At that time labour was $1.50 per day, nails 2½c per pound. At the present time they are 6 cents, and the cost of everything else is in proportion. Piles for that bridge were purchased at 25c each; lumber $12.00 per M. Piles cannot be now had under $7.00 each, and lumber $50.00 per M. I might further say the Smith Street Bridge is only 900 feet long. The proposed Hunter Street Bridge, including approaches, is 1,350 feet long.

If the ratepayers want a cheaper bridge, they must break away from the present plans.

Correct Way to Beautify Skin

Why Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Recommended to Relieve Face of Pimples, Blackheads and Other Such Eruptions.

Send For Free Trial Package

According to writers of medical fame calcium exerts a peculiar influence in the skin. It is thus considered a necessary constituent of cutaneous health. And it is this substance that has given Stuart's Calcium Wafers such popularity. As a rule, pimples, blackheads or other such facial blemishes may be traced to an excess of impurities being eliminated through the skin. It is the activity of calcium that enables this process of elimination to be carried on more completely.

The results have been noted in much finer skin texture and the disappearance of the blemishes for a really beautiful complexion. It is considered the correct way to have some lily-like skin. Get a 50 cent box of these wafers at any drug store and observe how quickly the skin soon clears. If you would like to first try them, fill out the coupon below and mail it for a trial package.

TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY SERVICES.

In Trinity Methodist Church, the pastor, Rev. F. E. Malott, will preach at both services to-morrow. His morning theme will be, "The Growth of Faith." Theme of the evening sermon will be, "The Great Invitation." Mrs. King will sing at the evening service. At the Brotherhood meeting in the afternoon, Mr. Hughson Johnstone will address the men. All are welcome to all these services.

SPECIAL SERVICE
AT MARK STREET

At Mark street Methodist church to-morrow the pastor will speak in the morning on the 4th words from the Cross of 'Victory Over Despair.' In the evening he will take up the temperance issue. This is a live question of very great importance. All citizens interested will be made welcome.

On Monday evening an exceedingly interesting service will be held under the auspices of the Efficiency League. The lantern slides will be used for a trip to the great Yellowstone National Park. A special set of slides have been procured. The service will commence at 7.30 sharp. The general public is invited. No charge will be made otherwise than a collection.

SERVICES AT ST. ANDREW'S.

At the morning service in St. Andrew's church to-morrow morning, the Rev. Mr. Rowand will give the last sermon of the David series on "David the Poet," dealing especially with the twenty-third Psalm, which has been pouring forth its melody for 3,000 years, and which has been committed to the memory more than any other portion of Scripture.

In the evening the Rev. Dr. Murray of Winnipeg, will speak in the interest of the forward movement, and will give an interesting exposition of nation-building in the west.

The public are cordially invited to these services. Special music will be provided

GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH

The pastor, the Rev. A. J. Thomas will preach at both services. In the morning his topic will be "The Son of Timeus," and in the evening, "Who is a Christian." New "Special Hymn Sheets" will be used at the evening service, as they were last Sunday evening. But this Sunday the song service, with the use of the "Special Hymn Sheets", will begin at (6:50 o'clock.) ten minutes to seven. Every one wants a seat come early. The pastor's address promises to be very interesting and helpful, especially to those who have given themselves up to God, at the Special Meetings this week, and to those who are contemplating doing so this coming week

For Freckles, Rough or Spotty Complexions

The freckling, discolouring or roughening to which delicate skins are subject after exposure to wind or sun, often appearing in early spring, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There is no more effective way of banishing freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by [illegible]ather, worry or Illness are also treated by a simple solution [illegible] prepared by [illegible] one ounce, dissolved in a one-half pint witch hazel. Nothing like this for the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

Living on $18,000 a Year Difficult Says New Yorker

NEW YORK.—Providing for herself and two boys from an allowance of $18,000 received annually from the estate of her husband, Robert A. Scott, of the Scott Foster Ice Company, presents many difficulties in the opinion of Mrs. Leonine M. Scott. Especially as the youths, Robert A. Scott, Jr., age eighteen, and Harold Scott, age fourteen, contemplate entering Yale, their mother has protested against their income being limited to $4,000 each year.

Her plea for an increase was made to David L. Weil, referee, of No. 35 Nassau street, whose report was filed in the Surrogates' Court here. Mrs. Scott explained that her own income of $10,000 together with the boys' $8,000, was insufficient for their needs in the last year, and she asked to be reimbursed for the excess amounts she expended.

Furthermore, Mrs. Scott thought her sons' allowances should be increased to $7,500 a year each, but the referee recommended it be made $5,000. She supplied an itemized account of the boys' expenditure during the year, including the cost of an automobile for each of them.

At Taft School, where both are students, it cost $1,000 a year and another $1,000 for living expenses. Pocket money for Robert was $360 and for Harold, $240. They were also allowed $600 in addition for entertainment, while Robert's clothing bill totalled $700 and his brother's, $500. Medical and dental bills for the two amounted to $200, and their automobiles $1,200 each.

Their father, who died July 21, 1917, left an estate of $1,373,746,46 from which he directed an annuity of $10,000 be paid to his widow and $4,000 to each of his sons. Mrs. Scott testified that when her husband was alive she was accustomed to living at the rate of $40,000 a year. The testator died suddenly after being assured on the morning of his death by his physicians that his health was excellent.

Daylight Saving's Death Beats Tariff As Vote Getter

The Acting Premier's Vote and Lemieux's Support of the Resolution Helped to Kill Measure—Some Toronto Members Present.

(Toronto Telegram).

OTTAWA, March 28.—The local debating society, sometimes known as the Dominion Parliament, met as usual Thursday and a pleasant time was had by one and all. The subject under discussion was daylight saving, but the opponents of the measure managed to bring the discussion on the following "Resolved, that daylight saving works more hardship on the farmer than it brings health to the golfer."

It was farmers' day in this farmers' parliament. If nobody loves a fat man it must be because everybody has fixed his affections on the lean, hungry farmer. Two out of three speakers sang the sorrows of agricultural life, and to-day's edition of Hansard will be a book of reference for those who love to tell why the boys don't stay on the farm. Everybody felt the farmer must be helped, and early in the day it was abundantly evident that saving daylight will not figure as part of Canada's thrift policy. During the early evening advocates of the reform spoke in the hushed tongue of men who utter eulogies of the dead. When Sir Thomas White, choosing, he said, between inconvenience to dwellers in cities and hardship to sturdy ploughmen, announced that he would vote for the farmers he wrote himself down a history as the man who killed the corpse.

Prepared the Funeral.

But it was all more like a wake than a funeral. The Government "passed the buck" gracefully when it cleared the decks for Major Cooper of Vancouver to move his resolution that daylight saving be re-enacted for the coming year. It provided a private funeral for the measure Sir George Foster had forced through last year with the Government at its back. Hon Rodolphe Lemieux helped to further loosen the strings by seconding the Cooper resolution.

With the party bonds thrown to the winds, the House made merry. The speaker who could get a hand or a laugh felt the thrill of popularity. The man who tried to urge more sunlight and fresh air for the denizens of the city workshop got little sympathy and was lucky that he did not "get the hook." It was borne in on the House that the farmer was in deadly earnest in his demand for an earlier sunset and a later breakfast, that he could not hoe the turnips or mow the hay while the dew of early morn soaked his overalls. Rich words of humour were thrown at the "drygoods clerks" who play golf, dally with the lawn bowls, or go rolling over the highways in their autos. All kinds of suggestions were thrown out for the benefit of the city dweller, but suggestions appear to be about all he can expect from this Union Government. He did most of the fighting in the war and will pay most of the war debt. But the war is over. The farmer who saved the Empire by raising wheat at $2.25 per bushel is around collecting his reward. Till he gets it all, others must stand out in the corridor, unless they prefer the street.

How Ministers Voted.

It was current report when the House met that the Government having tried daylight saving and found it good would put it in force again this year. But at the first caucus the farmer members raised the roof. They simply would not stand for it. And when it came to a showdown seven of the ten Ministers present voted with the farmers, to wit, Sir Thos. White and Hon. Messrs. Carvell, Rowell, Reid, Crerar, Calder and Guthrie. Only three had the courage of their convictions, Maclean, Mewburn and Burrell. Hon. Arthur Meighen dodged the vote.

Toronto members were as usual conspicuous by their absence. H. M. Mowat, Thos. Foster and H. C. Hocken were present and voted for Daylight Saving. W. F. Maclean spoke for it, and hiked for home before the vote was taken. Dr. Sheard was in the capital, but not in the House to vote. Sir George Foster is in Paris. Nobody ever knows where Edmund Bristol is. Sir Edward Kemp is in England.

Ontario's Vote.

Only seven members from all Ontario voted for Daylight Saving. And yet Ontario is sneered at as the home of the manufacturers and the oppressor of the farmer.

Nobody would dream of reporting the half-hundred speeches that preceded the funeral. John Best appeared to be the only one seriously affected. He opened with Dufferin County eloquence that Daylight Saving was putting race against race and creed against creed. Dr. Steele, of Perth, believed that it would improve the health of the nation, and town, perhaps with an eye to business, decided to vote against it. Sir Sam Hughes stuck by the time of his fathers and remarked that golf was "a pleasant exercise for delicate ladies." Hon. Martin Burrell, expert golfer, didn't help much by either his speech or his vote.

A Vote Gatherer.

But, after all, the whole debate was a joke. If it had been taken without a word spoken the result would have been the same. Each man figured out how many farmers there were in his constituency and how badly he needed their votes. For every rural member admits that as a vote catcher the repeal of Daylight Saving has free trade backed off the map.

But the cable from Sir Robert Borden stating that he wasn't considering that Washington Ambassadorship, but would be back to work on the old job as soon as his duties at the Peace Conference would permit, may have been at the bottom of the general joy. Meanwhile a grateful country will rejoice to hear that he is having his picture painted.

First Canadian Division to Embark for Home and Battalions Will Go to Kingston For Demobilization.

OTTAWA, March 29.—The First Canadian Division will be the next to embark for Canada. The dispersal areas have already been arranged. To Toronto for dispersal will come the 3rd, 4th and 15th Battalions, sections one two and three of Divisional Ammunition Column, the First Divisional Signal Company, the First Machine Gun Battalion, the First Divisional Train, and the First Canadian Divisional C. A. M. T. Company.

To Ottawa will come for dispersal the First and Second Batteries, Canadian Field Artillery; to Kingston the Second Battalion, the Third and Fourth Batteries and No. 1 Field Ambulance.

To Montreal will come the Thirteenth and fourteenth Battalions, the Fifth and Seventh Batteries.

To London will come the First Battalion and No. 2 Field Ambulance. The Eight and Sixteenth Battalions go to Winnipeg together with the First Second and Third Engineering Battalions and the Third Field Ambulance. Regina gets the Fifth Battalion; Calgary the Tenth; Halifax the Sixth Battery, Vancouver the Seventh Battalion, the 28th Battery. Since the armistice was declared 104,207 soldiers' dependents have been transported to Canada, and there are now 9,500 on the water.

Sufferings of Roumanians Have Been Very Great

Hidden Griefs at Rumanian Hearths Emphasized by the Queen—Welcomes Aid From Canada.

LONDON, March 31. — One of the last items in the programme of the visit to London of the Queen of Roumania was a tour of the Dominions' quarters. She had a cordial welcome at the big Beaver Hut, where she was received by Lady Perley. The queen also received an equally warm greeting at the Officers' Club, where the party took tea.

"Our sufferings have been great," Queen Marie said, "and some of them cannot be told. There are sorrows open to the light of day for all to read, and the wayfaring man going through Roumania can see in the desolate fields and impoverished towns the withering track of the invader, but who can interpret the hidden griefs at the hearths and in the hearts of those from whom everything that counted dear was roughly torn away to feed the fury of the foe.

"With my own eyes I have seen Gethsemane, and now that the Great War is over, though lesser wars seem to be threatening in different corners of the continent, Roumania's anxieties are with her still. It may be that they weigh upon her more heavily because the motion of the struggle that gave the mind a strength and stature beyond its own is now no more. We look around and see the bare ruins left our wealth gone, and our children fatherless and in dire distress. No wonder the cry of Roumania goes out to the end of the earth. Every hill and every valley calls out for help.

"Canada is coming to our aid. It was a gallant Canadian officer, Col. Boyle, who in our distress served the cause of humanity in my country. With unabating strength he brought us the health and help of a new world. He was an earnest example of his country's aid, and his touching to see the faces of my people turned wistfully towards Canada. You have promised to send us seed for our harvest, so that our golden

REV. CHAS. A. EATON RESIGNS PASTORATE.

NEW YORK, March 28.—The Rev. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison avenue Baptist church, and head of the National Service Section of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, formerly connected with the Toronto Globe, and well known all over Canada, has offered his resignation to take effect, April 30th.

Dr. Eaton's decision to resign came as a great shock to his congregation. Many wept, and a concerted rush toward the pulpit was made when the benediction was pronounced. Dr. Eaton fled to his study, but in the evening was compelled to meet the crowds of people who begged him to stay. He told them that his decision was irrevocable.

Dr. Eaton intends to engage in what he called "National Service," and will tour the country speaking before chambers of commerce, boards of trade, etc., interesting pressing problems of the day. He has had invitations to speak from all over the country.

Cupid and the Snapshot.

By ETHEL CONCANNON

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Of all your dead old places to spend a vacation in this place," exclaimed pretty Marie De Lisle to her chum as they sat on the sands of a beautiful lake in Hillcrest. "I am not a bit pleased with you, Pauline, for suggesting our coming here. You know I like dances, and lots of excitement. It is so quiet here, it is positively unendurable."

"Well," said Pauline, "you know every summer resort is quiet these days, as this is war time, you must remember, and, besides, I knew you needed a good rest, and that is practically the reason we are here."

"I'll tell you what I'll do, just to have a little fun," said Marie, and opening a small leather purse took out a snapshot, taken about a week before while playing tennis. "I'm going to bury this in the sand and perhaps some Romeo will come along and find it."

"Oh! you silly little goose," said Pauline, "nobody would ever think of coming down to such a deserted place as this; but if it will please you, why go to it." And as the girls finished their task, they wended their way home, leaving the picture to its fate.

In the meantime, Lieut. Gilbert Dexter, who had been on active duty in France and was granted a short furlough, arrived at the Broomdale Inn, an attractive little boarding house. As Gilbert's home was in the West, and his time was limited, he decided he would spend his few days in recuperating, and chose Hillcrest as a delightful place to rest.

Next morning Gilbert started out bright and early, to observe the little town; and, it being a warm day, naturally made his way to the water's edge. Being a little fatigued after his long hike on the dusty roads, he picked out a secluded spot to be alone with his thoughts and to enjoy the beautiful surroundings and the cool, refreshing breezes from the lake. Finally his thoughts wandered back to dear old France, and as he tapped the sand with his cane, whistling to the popular tune of "Over There," pictured the boys.

Suddenly he spied a white piece of paper, and as he examined it was [illegible] it was a picture of a very pretty

"By Jove, I'll say I'm lucky," he claimed, as he studied it more closely, "she certainly is some girl, and although my time will be short, I will make every effort to find her; if I do not succeed, I will leave this little town very much disappointed." After admiring the little treasure, he carefully slipped it into his pocket and started homeward. Gilbert thought Hillcrest the finest place he had ever visited, but there was a reason now.

As the sun was setting and the day was cooling off, he went down to the lake, and the water looking too tempting to resist, decided a row would be just the thing. As he was getting things all set a group of jolly girls came down to the boat landing. Of course, Lieutenant Dexter was the attraction, and the girls all thinking he was such a handsome young fellow, wished down in their hearts they would be the lucky one to accompany him out rowing. After a few minutes' conversation with the crowd he spoke to Marie personally.

Marie was flattergated to hear him mention her name; in fact, she was so surprised she came near tumbling off the landing [illegible] a little explanation he brought forth the snapshot with her name on the back of it. Marie blushed as she knew she was guilty.

It was not long before a party of two were out on the water, and as Marie looked into his face she had to admit she was glad that such an exceedingly captivating young man as Lieutenant Dexter was the leader.

The rest of Gilbert's time was spent with Marie and it was not long before mere friendship developed into true love. As his furlough drew near an end he dreaded to part with his new-found little friend, although he left Hillcrest very happy. With the understanding that Pauline would be the bridesmaid at their wedding.

As Gilbert reported for active duty again he carried the picture, the culmination of his romance, next to his heart. Marie didn't think Hillcrest such a dead place after all, as she is now wearing a beautiful solitaire.

D'Annunzio's Revenge.

Undoubtedly one of the most interesting souvenirs of the whole war will be an album which has just been given to the King of Italy. It contains 60 photographs of Vienna taken by Gabriel D'Annunzio and the flyers with him during their raid on Vienna. The recent exploits of D'Annunzio, by the way, must have been causing special pain to one class of people in Germany, to whom we offer respectful sympathy. They are the German caricaturists, who find part of their occupation gone. In the early days of the war he was one of the favorite butts of their most offensive wit. They had made up their minds—heaven knows why—that he had no courage, and he was generally represented in attitudes of abject terror—generally as an organ-grinder or hurdy-gurdy player. I remember one particularly disgraceful picture in which the King of Italy figured as an organ-grinder with two monkeys—one labelled Cadorna (with an umbrella), the other marked "D'Annuncio." The poet has at any rate had a noble revenge.

Shock Left Her Weak and Nervous

COULD NOT SLEEP

When the system receives a shock of any kind, the heart becomes weakened, the nerves unstrung, the appetite poor, faint and weak feeling come over you, you can't sleep at night, and you wonder if life is worth living.

To all those who suffer from nervous shock we would recommend Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as the best remedy to tone up the entire system and strengthen the weakened organs.

Mrs. J. J. Bunyan, Pilot Butte, Sask., writes:—"I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills after having suffered from a terrible shock to my whole system. I was so utterly weak, and nervous I could not sleep at night, and my appetite was very poor. I could not walk across the floor without trembling all over.

I had hot flushes and fainting spells. When I was on the second box of your Heart and Nerve Pills I began to feel that they were doing me good, so I kept on until I had used six boxes, when I felt like a different person.

I am never without them in the house, and highly recommend them to all who suffer with their heart."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Objectionable

Little Mary was in the habit of posting her mother's letters in the pillar box. One day a friend called and asked the child's mother what Mary was going to be when she grew up.

"Oh," said the mother, "I shall try and get her into the post office."

"Oh, mumsie!" cried the horrified child, "I should never be able to squeeze in there!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Bread.

Freshly made bread is more indigestible than stale bread because it is more moist and becomes more solid in the mouth; hence more impenetrable to the saliva and the gastric juices. For the same reason bread crust is more digestible than what is beneath it, being drier. Bread may be unfit for use from being made of adulterated or too old flour, by turning sour or developing a bitter taste from the yeast, from getting moldy and from insufficient fermentation in the rising process, which leaves it too heavy for the digestive fluids to act well upon.

HONORS FOR WESTERNERS.

Sir Archibald Cameron MacDonnell Has Good Record.

Sir Archibald Cameron MacDonnell, K.C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., mentioned in the New Year's honors, is one of the best known and popular officers of the Canadian West. He is a native of Western Ontario, born at Windsor, in 1864. After graduating from the Royal Military College, joined the Canadian Mounted Infantry permanent corps, but in 1889 transferred to the North West Mounted Police, and from the force volunteered for service in South Africa in 1900. He was in many engagements during that campaign, and was, in one action, seriously wounded. He was invested with the Distinguished Service Order and awarded the South African Medal with clasps. He also organized and commanded the 50th Western Regiment of Canadian Mounted Rifles for service in South Africa.

On his return to the Dominion he rejoined the Mounted Police, and was in command of the division at Battleford. In March, 1907, he transferred to the staff of Fort Osborne, and was in command of the Strathcona Horse when that troop left for overseas in 1914. He was speedily advanced, and in 1915 was a brigadier-general, and early the following year was seriously wounded in Flanders, sustaining injuries to the arm and left shoulder. In January, 1918, Gen. MacDonnell was created a Commander of the Order of Saint Michael and Saint George.

Brig.-Gen. Hugh M. Dyer, C.M.G., D.S.O., who is now also created a Commander of the Bath, was for years major of the Minnedosa squadron of the 12th Manitoba Dragoons, and was one of the first to volunteer for service overseas. Prior to leaving for the front Gen. Dyer was a member of the board of management of the Manitoba Agricultural College, with which he had been identified since its inception.

Brig.-Gen. Daniel Ormonde, C.M.G., D.S.O., of Portage la Prairie, went overseas with the first draft of the 18th Mounted Rifles, soon advanced in rank. In private life the general is a lawyer and was in partnership with A. McPherson, M.P.P. for Portage la Prairie.

How Fat Actress Was Made Slim

Many stage people now depend entirely upon Marmola Prescription Tablets for reducing and controlling fat. One clever actress tells that she reduced two to four pounds a week by using this new form of the famous Marmola Prescription and now, by taking Marmola Tablets several times a year, keeps her weight just right. All druggists sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at 75 cents for a large case. Or you can get them by sending price direct to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. If you have not tried them do so. They are harmless and effective.

Tobolsk.

One of the principal Siberian cities in Tobolsk, the commercial centre of the vast province of Tobolsk, which extends over an area of 500,000 square miles, a large portion of which, however, is practically uninhabited. The most prominent building in the city is the Kremlin, built in imitation of the great citadel in Moscow. This structure was erected by Swedish prisoners of war captured by Peter the Great at the battle of Poltavi in 1709.

Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, by all the more important that you should have one of the tried-and-true remedies for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill, or two, nights; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Genuine bears Signature

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood. Carter's Iron Pills will help this condition.

Humor, Discrimination and Good Taste.

All the addresses are excellent, but "The Baby's Debut," the suppositious work of Wordsworth, has an excellence all its own:

My brother Jack was nine in May,
And I was eight on New Year's Day.
So in Wate Wilson's shop,
Papa (he's my papa and Jack's)
Bought me, last week, a doll of wax,
And brother Jack a top.

So runs the first verse. It is certainly excellent fooling, and "Rejected Addressees" is not the least triumph in the history of Drury Lane.

HEAVY SENTENCES FOR BRUTAL ASSAULTS

Boy, Though Beaten With Iron Bars Refused to Give Up Money.

Toronto, March 28.—Martin Henry and Arthur Dewsbury, two youths, were found guilty in the Police Court yesterday on a charge of wounding with intent to kill, and were sentenced to 18 and 15 months' imprisonment respectively. The two youths were alleged to have suddenly pounced upon and beaten Arthur Hallin, another boy who is employed as a driver by John A. Macdonald, Spencer avenue. Although beaten over the head, it is claimed, with iron bars, the little chap bravely hung on to his master's money, amounting to $17.

Arthur Rooney, a third lad, alleged implicated in the assault, is now before the Juvenile Court. Detective Nicholls declared that he found the iron bars and a hammer lying in a pool of blood.

THE 42nd BATTALION (By Roland Hill)

THE 42nd Battalion, affiliated with the 5th Royal Highlanders of Montreal, which arrived from overseas in Montreal on Tuesday, March 11th, gained a record with the Canadian Corps for hard fighting, second to none among the kilted battalions under the command of Lieut.-General Currie.

Major Copse, Sanctuary Wood, Hooge, were its real baptism of fire. At the Somme—notably Fabeck Graben and Zollern Trench—the 42nd was in some of the bloodiest fighting in the area. At Vimy Ridge it was one of the jumping off units and reached its first objective in half an hour, the record for the Corps. Passchaendaele added more laurels to the battalion's record, some of the heaviest fighting on the left flank, in which the German final positions were taken, falling to the lot of the Highlanders. It was in the scrimmage at Hill 70 on the return of the Corps to Lens and when Amiens came last year, the 42nd held in leash for a short time, broke through the left on the third day and completed the discomfiture of the Germans. In the battle for the Hindenburg line at Drocourt—Queant it took a minor but important part and when Cambrai was menaced by the Allies, the 42nd were the first to thrust themselves into the town, having a race with a British Highland regiment driving the Huns from house to house and chalking up each street as it was taken so the Imperials would not capture it again," a Valenciennes also figures on the escutcheon of this gallant battalion, which was the first to enter Mons on the day of the Armistice.

When the Seventh Brigade of the Third Division was formed in France on December 22, 1915, under Brigadier-General A. C. Macdonell, now the commander of the First Division, the 42nd Battalion had already been three months at the front, acting as an extra unit and taking an almost regular turn in the trenches. The battalion had been recruited and mobilised in Montreal in February, 1915, and during its five months training in Canada it developed a splendid reputation for efficiency and smartness. After being attached to the First Division as reserve in the Ploegsteert-Neuve Eglise area it joined the Seventh Brigade then about to take up its position on the south of the Ypres salient.

On arrival in front of Kemmel the battalion was sent into the line as a working force and until January 30th it was repairing, draining and building up sandbag defences, at the same time patrolling long sections of trenches, being continually under the sniping fire from the enemy. On March 20th, after a short rest, in which more training was undergone, the battalion moved into the line with the 49th, relieving the British 17th Brigade, which had suffered heavily. It was here that the Canadians surprised the Germans by first using the Stokes mortar, the Germans believing that the bombs which ... fell accurately in their trenches came from aeroplanes.

While on a rest tour on April 21st Sir Douglas Haig inspected the battalion and paid the smart looking kilties a special compliment, by saying that they were physically the best body of troops he had seen.

In the German attack on June 2nd the 42nd was occupying front trenches when the Huns came through with flammenwerfer streaming fire on the defenders. In that heroic defence the 42nd lost heavily, but with the 49th and Princess Pats they maintained the reserve line intact. In all the attacks and counter-attacks at Sanctuary Wood and Hooge the Montreal Highlanders had their share, in many places taking part in hand to hand fighting. Two companies which had been hurried up from reserve at Ypres on that fateful June 2nd came through terrific shell fire and arrived just in time to rally their hard pressed comrades. In the report of the divisional commander he mentions that half an hour's delay would have been fatal and meant annihilation of the rest of the battalion. The losses of the battalion at that time were practically 500 men and fifty per cent of the officers.

Taking their share of trench work but with no major actions for a considerable time the 42nd stayed in the "Bloody Salient" until September 7th, when a move was made from Steenvoorde which was eventually to land them in the terrific fighting of the Somme, with their division. From the 15th onwards for a whole month there came the long, gruelling struggles for Courcelette and the famous Fabeck Graben and Zollern switch lines. The 42nd, with its brother battalions of the Seventh Brigade, moved up from Usna Hill through the crumbling communication trenches under an appalling fire from the suspicious German artillery. It arrived on time and by its attack kept the Huns fully occupied while the Second Division on the right went after the famous sugar refinery and the village of Courcelette. Fabeck Graben was a trench on a low ridge which commanded the village and the 42nd and Princess Pats were told off to take the position. The Highlanders reached their first objective in fifteen minues after sanguinary bayonet fighting and before dusk set in had established themselves in the redoubt. An attempt by the Royal Canadian Regiment to go further and gain the Zollern Trench was defeated by heavy artillery fire and they too found themselves in the Fabeck Graben. Later in the afternoon the 42nd drove forward in an attempt to take the Zollern Trench but half way met a strong counter-attack the Germans were launching on Courcelette. This they broke but the attack on Zollern was stalemate.

Heavy fighting before Regina Trench every day and night was the lot of the Highlanders until October 2nd, when the 42nd participated in the attack along the West Miraumont road, which it was hoped would give us possession of Regina. The attack failed, although the Highlanders held on until compelled to fall back on their old position in the colum... beating back of the battalion ... right.

Then the Corps moved ... to Arras where raiding was ... on extensively, in which the 42nd ... participated. After Arras came Vimy Ridge, on April 9th, 1917. The objective of the 42nd was to the right of Hill 145. The battalion reached ... half an hour after jumping ... although conditions were not favorable owing to the heavy sleet which was falling. In less than three hours they were able to report that they had their line well consolidated and more prisoners had fallen to the kilted men from Montreal than they had casualties. All through the day the 42nd held on, suffering from an enfilading fire from Hill 145, but never flinching until that evening the Fourth Division took the position that was bothering them.

In October, 1917, the 42nd Battalion found itself with the division at Passchaendaele. The Highlanders were one of the attacking units to the North East and after heavy fighting over the muddiest ground they had yet encountered, they were able to gain the main German trench just outside the shattered village. It was the objective that was needed for the phase of the attack and on their relief by men of the First Division the capture of the town which Imperial and Australians had attempted to take three times, was complete.

In November, the battalion was back again before Lens and into with the rest of the Corps ... into oblivion, that period when the Canadians underwent the open fighting training which was later to stand them in such good stead. The day before the attack at Amiens on August 8th, 1918, the Highlanders were moved up to the support lines of the First Division, which was to have the honor of jumping off. On the third day of the attack, when victory was so complete it needed vigorous following up to make it a rout for the Germans, the Third Division with it, the 42nd, went into the attack at Le Quesnoy. The village was stormed and the thrust in which the Highlanders took part after this was the spearhead of the great battle piercing the enemy's disorganized line for several miles.

Then came the breaking of the Drocourt-Queant section of the Hindenburg system and again the Highlanders were at grips with the Huns. Both Fontaine and St. Olle, two little villages strongly held by the Huns, fell to their charges. On October 1st the Seventh Brigade was in front of Cambrai and to the Highlanders went the honor of being the first troops in that town. In the street fighting that ensued they killed hundreds of Huns and came through with light casualties. The battalion was in the heavy fighting at Tilloy and the plateau beyond where they cleaned up scores of machine gun nests in their advance with the whippet tanks.

In what might be called the leisurely fighting to Valenciennes and Mons the Highlanders did their share but were in no particularly spectacular fighting and when the armistice was declared they went forward again in full strength to hold their place on the Rhine.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LITTLE BRIGHTEYES

She Came Into Her Rightful Place at Last.

By LOUISE NURRIFIELD.

That was what Davis had nicknamed her at the first rehearsal of "Flimflam." She was the scrawniest, homeliest girl in the chorus when the girls lined up for first inspection and happened to land in the middle at the line-up. Davis spotted her and called out before everybody in the pleasant, merry little way he had.

"That will do for yours, Little Brighteyes. Never mind about taking the center. We'll save the spot light when you're around. The back row for yours."

Everybody turned to take a good look at Little Brighteyes before the back row swallowed her forever. She was about thirty, a slim little woman with big gray eyes and dark hair. It was a point of beauty in its own way, that hair, soft and brown and straight as Minnehaha's ever was, but she had tried to marcel it into shape with a home applied curling iron to make her look professional, and it was a sight. But she took her medicine bravely, and even Davis recognized the grit in her.

It was her best asset in the after days, that grit. It carried her through all the Davis major and minor tantrums and the teasing from the other girls. She did little and worked hard, but the nickname that Davis had given her that first day stuck fast. Even Jennie Reynolds, the wardrobe woman, caught it. And when she was handing out the costumes to the girls she tossed a bunch across the room and called out cheerfully:

"Here you go, Brighteyes!"

And Little Brighteyes just laughed good naturedly, although she had drawn the least artistic clothes in the lot. It didn't matter when one was only the fourth girl in the last row back. She did as Davis had told her and kept out of the spot light.

"That girl's an old timer," Davis remarked to Vida Dorne as the two stood in the first entrance the opening night and watched the girls take a big encore on the "Rattlebang" song. There were sixteen picked out from the little ones in the crowd, and Brighteyes was one of them. It was a jolly, swinging, drummer boy chorus and took the minute it hit the house. The girls were all in scarlet and black, with snare drums, and Little Brighteyes was beating hers for sure, no make believe. The rouge helped her lots, and so did the red and black costume. Her head was held high, just a bit a-tilt, and her lips were parted in a smile.

Marshall—Nick Marshall that was—the manager, was beside Vida. He watched the skinny little figure on the end thoughtfully as the girls went off.

"She's all right," he said. "Put her on to lead tomorrow night in that chorus, Davis, and see how she goes. She's on to the ropes all right."

"I've seen that girl somewhere, Nick," she said. "Look at her now with that drum. And the way she steps! Who is she?"

"Little Brighteyes," laughed Davis shortly. "That's all she is now anyway, but she's an old timer all right."

Vida laughed, too, as Marshall walked around with her to the big white automobile in which she made her first entrance. The first act showed a mountain scene in a country anywhere between Italy and China. The beautiful American heiress was doing the touring stunt all over Europe, and the prince of the country was in love with her. He had followed the lead of the white automobile all over the map and finally had induced the girl to pay a visit to his own land. She feared possible banditti. He assured her the red and black drummer boys and the army behind them could protect her. And all the time, of course, he merely wanted to get her over the border, abduct her, shut her up in the castled steep fortress (act 2) and starve her into marrying him and filling his stingy little treasury with oodles of American coin. It was a rehash, but it went with a bang. Even before Vida's entrance the thing was a sure success, and Marshall was solidly joyous.

"Be careful and don't lose your head when you take that run," he said as he stood beside the auto while Vida was helped in. It was a good trick, that first entrance of the American girl. They had a mechanical arrangement for the auto to scorch down the mountain pass, and it looked as though it was going straight over the footlights. There were four turns to the run, and then it brought up short right in the center of the stage in a self locking frog and made a mighty effective picture.

"There isn't a bit of danger," answered Vida, drawing on her white gauntlets. "I'm just as cool as can be. Not a bit ruffled. Let her go."

There was the second's pause in the orchestra, then the crash of entrance music, and they released the machine. It took the incline like a boy's coaster—smooth and swift and easy. Davis was white, but Marshall stroked his vandyke and frowned ever so slightly as he watched the car and its occupant. It was a dangerous trick, but it brought down the house.

Marshall stared at Vida. Under the rouge her face was dead white, and he knew she was scared. When she came off the stage she sent for him.

"Nick, I won't go through that again not if the whole show goes to pieces. I simply can't. It is terrible. Why, it would be like dying every night. I won't ride in that thing again."

Davis suggested a dummy, but Marshall wouldn't stand for any fake. The girl in the machine must be alive, and suddenly Davis suggested Little Brighteyes.

"She's not the same air and build as Miss Lorne, and you can hide the face with a veil. Change the scene so as to carry off the auto long enough for the two to change places after the run, and there you are. And she's the only girl I know who has the grit to do it."

She had the grit. It meant a doubling of her salary, and she made the run night after night, with never a tremor of fear. No one knew the difference. The two women were the same size and the same carriage, and Vida was delighted.

"It's lots of fun," she told Marshall. "It's like hiring some one to die for you, don't you know."

The laughing words flashed across Marshall one night when "Flimflam" was on its third month. He happened to be standing at the foot of the stairs leading up to the platform where the machine stood. As she came by to take her place in it Little Brighteyes had to pass him, and for the first time their eyes met. Marshall never moved when she had gone up the stairs. He had forgotten "Flimflam" and New York. Somewhere, some time, so long ago that he didn't like to remember it or have other people either, one Nick Marshall had run a little one ring circus through the country towns—about thirteen years back—and there had been a girl, a pretty, piquant girl, who rode a horse in the parade and drove a chariot in the funny, shabby little grand entry, and after a couple of years of the one ring circus Nick Marshall had decided his talent lay in New York and had left the circus and the little country towns and other handicaps behind him.

The burst of applause from the front of the house recalled him. The machine was released and the American heiress incog. was doing her nightly "stunt." And suddenly there was a dull, strange crash, and the music stopped. Marshall spoke over his shoulder as he made for the stage, and they rang down the curtain and started up the music again, for the public must not see unpleasant things when it takes its gayety, and there was a most unpleasant thing lying under the automobile that had turned turtle.

"She isn't dead," said Davis as he and Vida bent over the slim figure in the white suede cloak. "Get her to the hospital and she will pull through. It's only the shoulder smashed."

Marshall pushed the two to one side and lifted the figure in his arms. As he did so Little Brighteyes opened her eyes and smiled up at him.

"Hello, boy," she said faintly. Marshall bent his head and kissed her before the whole crowd.

"Never mind the hospital, Davis," he said quietly. "I'll take Mrs. Marshall home myself."

And the rest watched him as he strode across the stage with his burden out to where a carriage waited at the side door of the theater. Then Vida looked up at Davis and laughed as the stage was cleared for the curtain raising.

"I've known it for weeks," she said. "I tried and tried to think where I had seen her before, and then all at once it came to me. Nick married her back in the circus days and then left her out west in some dead and alive hole while he came on to New York to try to make good. He made good, but forgot all about his responsibility out west, and she was too proud to hunt him up when she thought he didn't want her. I saw her in comic opera out in Frisco eight or nine years ago. She made a big success in 'Fatinitza.' I remembered her all at once watching her play that dream. But it was her own affair, and I didn't tell. Nick played fair at the climax, didn't he?"

Davis nodded. But as he watched the laughing, pretty face beside him, white to the lips as when she had taken that first run down the run, he knew that one other besides Nick had played fair, too—fair to Little Brighteyes.

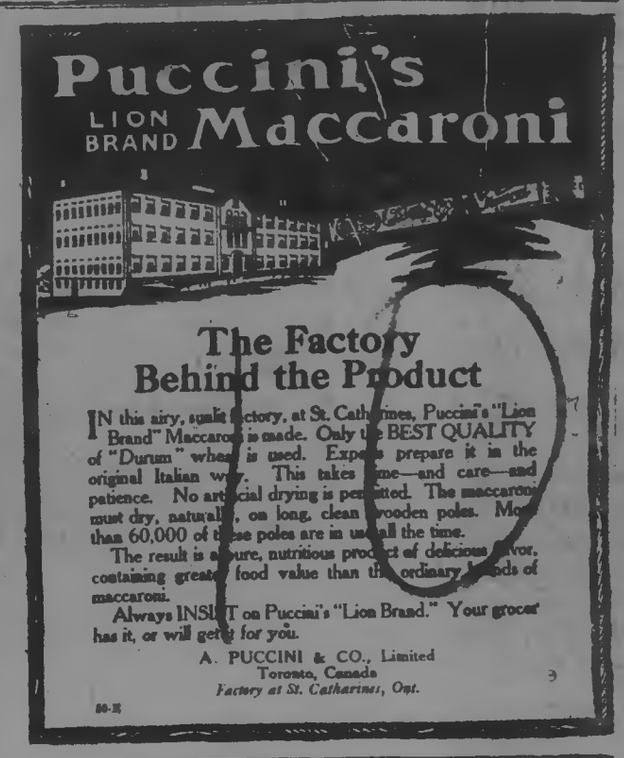
PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Dry Hair.

Many women are troubled with dry hair and would like to know how to relieve this condition. First try shampooing once every two weeks with an egg shampoo. Then twice a week rub into the scalp, being careful not to touch the hair more than is absolutely necessary, a bit of white vaseline which has been gently heated until liquid.

Salt is good for lusterless hair. Rub it well into the roots of the hair at night, then tie the hair up in a large handkerchief or wear a nightcap. Brush out the salt in the morning. Several applications of this treatment will bring about a great improvement in the appearance of the hair.



Puccini's
LION BRAND Maccaroni
The Factory Behind the Product
IN this airy, spick factory, at St. Catharines, Puccini's "Lion Brand" Maccaroni is made. Only the BEST QUALITY of "Durum" wheat is used. Experts prepare it in the original Italian way. This takes time—and care—and patience. No artificial drying is permitted. The maccaroni must dry, naturally, on long, clean wooden poles. More than 60,000 of these poles are in use all the time.
The result is a pure, nutritious product of delicious flavor, containing greater food value than the ordinary brands of maccaroni.
Always INSIST on Puccini's "Lion Brand." Your grocer has it, or will get it for you.

IN SILHOUETTE.

Lady with the wistful eyes
And the proud, elusive air,
Others haply criticise
What you wear—or do not wear.
I am no fashion finding churl.
If your costume gives you glee
That's sufficient, lovely girl.
You shall hear no wail from me.

Lady with the gauzy gown
That the sunlight glimmers through,
Think not that I pause to frown
Or hurl epithets at you.
It is not for me to say
That your modesty is flown.
If you wish to dress that way—
Well, the risk is all your own

Lady with the skimpy skirt
Slashed an inch above the knee,
Do not think that I am hurt;
You have not offended me.
But permit me, please, to add:
Granting that you are divine,
That I am extremely glad
You're no relative of mine

"In the old days, when the capital of Alabama was located at Tuscaloosa, there was a good deal of open gambling at that seat of legislation," said a southern man. "It was the custom in those times for men of all grades of society to risk their money at games of chance, and the lawmakers who gathered at Tuscaloosa were among the best patrons of the gaming tables.

"The proprietor of one of those resorts, wishing to keep the state solons separated from the ordinary customers of his place, put up a big sign in the apartment devoted to faro, poker, roulette and the like, which read:

"'Members of the legislature please take the table to the right; gamblers take the table to the left. It's hard to tell you apart.'"

WOMAN BADLY BITTEN AS SHE FIGHTS DOG FOR TEN MINUTES

NEW YORK,— Mrs. Olga Katz, fifty years old, of No. 24 West 111th street, was severely bitten by a dog in the cellar of an apartment house at No. 204 West 111th street, where she fought the mongrel for ten minutes before help arrived.

Mrs. Katz said she was looking for the janitor and entered the basement when the dog sprang at her and in her effort to escape from the dog she was bitten many times on the arms.

The dog was made a prisoner to be examined by a physician to determine if the animal suffered from rabies.

Pimples Broke Out All Over Face, Arms and Neck

Pimples are sure sign that the blood is not in its proper shape.

While the skin is the seat of the irritating, unsightly pimples, the real disease is in the blood.

Medicated lotions and powders may allay the itching and the irritation, but never cure, no matter how long and faithfully continued, and the condition is often aggravated, and the skin permanently injured by their use. The disease is more than skin deep; the entire circulation is poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually cures blood and skin troubles because it goes direct to the root of the disease and stimulates and restores normal, healthy action to the different organs, cleanses and enriches the blood, and thus relieves the system of all poisonous secretions.

B. B. B. cures permanently because it leaves none of the original poison to ferment in the blood and cause a fresh attack.

Miss E. M. Davidson, Daysland, Alta., writes: "Last summer I was greatly troubled with pimples breaking out all over my face, arms and neck. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters and after taking two bottles the pimples had almost all disappeared. I shall always recommend this remedy to anyone afflicted with skin troubles."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid.

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp, cold, raw, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and by helping to your kidneys as well.

City Could Save $50,000 in Cost of Hunter Street Bridge By Reducing Width 9 Feet

Opinion of Engineer, Who's in Touch With the Local Undertaking, Suggests That One Street Car Line be Dispensed With—Could Instal Switches at the Ends if Traffic Requires Double Tracks.

MIGHT NOT BE LONG DELAY

A reduction of nine feet in the width of Hunter street bridge, as designed by Mr. Frank Barber, providing thereby for one instead of two street car lines, would permit a saving of $50,000, according to the estimate of an engineer who has kept in touch with Peterborough's project. The necessary changes in the plans, he believed, could be made without much delay in starting construction operations.

This opinion was based on several considerations, and principally on the assumption that it would be many years before traffic would require double tracks to Ashburnham. In the meantime, if the original proposal is carried out, one of the car lines would remain unused even after the street railway extensions as at present contemplated are completed. Citizens who assert that the plans for a greater Peterborough must be laid now in the twilight of the morning of reconstruction and who are confident of the twin destinies of Peterborough and Ashburnham, will probably disagree with this suggestion of limiting the transportation facilities across the river to a single street car line. It was pointed out to the Examiner when this objection was raised that when double tracks became imperative they could be switched at each end of the bridge into the single line over it, and automatic signals could be installed, without seriously retarding the service. Visualising a Peterborough humming with a double track system, it was estimated that the loss of time resulting from the single track on the bridge would be only a few minutes, three or four at the outside.

The saving in material required in the construction of the bridge that could be effected by eliminating one of the street car lines was indicated by a reference to the requirements of the Ontario Municipal and Railway Board. As previously explained, the Hydro-Electric Commission, as managers of the Peterborough Street Railway system, advised Mr. Barber that the bridge should be built to carry big double-truck, inter-urban cars. The Railway Board's standard of live weight was a group of four of these cars, two by tandem on each track. They represented a total weight of 320 tons on a space 70 feet long by less than 20 feet in width.

It was argued by the engineer that if one track was dispensed with and the bridge narrowed to nine feet there would obviously be a very appreciable saving. In fact his estimate roughly figured was $50,000. This is, of course, for a concrete bridge.

The special committee doubtless had this praiseworthy economy in mind when they recently instructed Mr. Barber to ask the contractors for separate bids on a concrete bridge whose roadway would be decreased from the original 42 feet to 33 feet. This notice was sent out only a few days ago, and it is hardly expected that in the short time available the contractors will be able to prepare separate estimates on the reduced dimension.

May Permit Polish Troops to Land

THE STRIKE AT ESSEN IS INCREASING—THE DANZIG QUESTION.

(United Press.)

By Grank J. Taylor.)

BERLIN, March 31. — Hope grew in official circles here to-day that the Danzig question would be settled without a break with the allies. The newspapers approve the proposal for further negotiations with the allies regarding their demand that Polish troops be permitted to land at Danzig. Marshal Foch is said to have extended the invitation for a plenipotentiary to meet him at the Spa to discuss the matter.

The strike at Essen is increasing. More than 40,000 workers under Spartacan leadership, are demanding a general strike throughout Central Europe.

Twilight Musical At Queen Mary

Piano solo, 'Spring Song' by Merkel —Margaret McEwen.

Piano solo, 'Mermaid's Song'—Georgia Hardel.

Piano solo, 'Etuette' — Margaret Johnston.

Reading by Dorothy Clarke.

Piano solo, 'Sonata' Climenti—Irene Breckenridge.

Piano solo, 'Sweet Memories'—Dorothy Stevens.

At the close of the programme Miss Caldwell commended the children for the splendid way in which they had rendered different numbers and made some suggestions as to the arrangements of their future programmes, after which the meeting closed by singing "Rule Britannia."

A CHEAP BRIDGE

Could Be Build on Barrels, Suggests East City Man.

"From the letters I've read on the Hunter street bridge question, it looks as if we'll have nothing but a pontoon bridge built on barrels, with rope hand rails," was the sarcastic remark of an Ashburnham ratepayer, who evidently does not agree with some of the ideas that have been recently expressed in the local press.

GERMANS WILL YIELD ON DANZIG CONTENTION

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, March 31. — The Berlin correspondent of the Mail said to-day there is good reason to believe Germany will give way regarding the Danzig question if the Allies will agree that Polish troops shall not actually embark in Danzig pending establishment of peace.

WILHELM IS WRITING BOOK

Former Crown Prince Maintains He is Not An Idiot—Admits He is Unpopular.

A HATED NATION

(United Press.)

COPENHAGEN, March 31.—The former Crown Prince, interviewed by a correspondent of the "Berlingiske Tidende," admitted the possibility of his being tried by an International court, but declared he did not believe he would be executed. He stoutly maintained that he not an idiot. He frankly admitted his unpopularity.

"People say I started the war, but Clemenceau has done so all his life," Freidrich Wilhelm was quoted as saying. "I was of the opinion Germany ought to be prepared, but I did not desire to cause war.

"I do not ask people to consider me especially intelligent, but I am no idiot or degenerate, as English and American papers say I am.

"I know Germany is the most hated nation in the world. Why? Because the Reichstag never voted anything for propaganda until too late. When the war began we commenced propaganda, but, alas, what propaganda."

The correspondent said the former Crown Prince is writing a book on the war.

Silver Tenor at the Royal To-night

Frank Bessenger, the silver tenor who has been engaged to appear at the Royal Theatre tonight, is the possessor of a rich tenor voice that for sweetness of tone and purity is difficult to improve upon. There is this added quality too, in his singing, that one can hear the words distinctly. His articulation is such that every person in the audience knows what he is singing about. Mr. Bessenger has appeared in some of the largest and best theatres in America and comes here with a reputation already won. His engagement is limited and those fond of good singing should not miss this treat.

"THE CAVELL CASE" BASED ON FACT

"The Cavell Case," which Select Pictures announces for the Grand Theatre to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday, with Matinee daily, is the true and stirring story of the life of Edith Cavell, the British Red Cross nurse, who gave up her life to save those of seven English soldiers who were being kept prisoners in a dirty, reeking cell in an hospital in Belgium.

This picture, which was produced by Plunkett and Carre, was picturized by Anthony Paul Kelly, author of the big Broadway success, "Three Faces East," John G. Adolfi directed the picture. It is remarkable in its close adherence to the slightest detail of the actual happenings in Belgium at the time. Brand Whitlock's document is the basis for the truth of the story.

There will also be a special bill of high class vaudeville including the great Nadolny, the Oriental Surprise, the Three Musical Shirleys, the world's greatest Saxaphone Trio, and a special headline attraction, Bache-Jewett and Backe, in a refined comedy and singing act, with their educated pony Rastus. Seats can be reserved in advance for all evening performances. Patrons are requested to take advantage of the new system, avoid the crowd. Reserve your seats by telephone.

FRANK BRUNE SAYS:

"When our boys first began to come home from the front there were 'crimps' in almost every discharge depot who were touting for some particular outfitter. And many a doughboy nicked badly as the sailors used to be done in the olden days," said Frank Brune, of the Semi-ready Store.

"With full freedom of choice given to soldiers and officers the charge has been made in several cities that the Semi-Ready stores are being unduly favored by some officers. This is not true. The higher ideals of merchandising which the Semi-ready tailoring stands for will not permit one single store to stoop to unfairness.

"It's the price in the pocket—the same price Regina West—that the boys know to represent truthful value."

"A returned soldier deserves every thing we can give him—and more than we can ever repay."

A Montreal man has been condemned to pay $5 to other fellow he employed as a scout to locate a bride for him. The Montrealer contested the claim, not on the ground that the amount was excessive.

ALLIED OR NEUTRAL CITIZENS IN HUNGARY WILL BE REMOVED

(United Press.)
(By Edward Bing.)

BUDAPEST, March 31. — A Hungarian steamer was being prepared to-day to convey down the Danube to Belgrade any allied or neutral citizens who wish to leave the city. The trip will be made under the British flag.

The Red army is increasing daily. Eighty women at Czakenfehea volunteered, but were refused.

A soldier convicted of robbery by the revolutionary tribunal at Kecskement was promply executed. This was the first execution since the Soviet government was established.

The educational commission has introduced the study of Marxism in the schools. It has also asked the university students to assist in teaching the illiterate population to read and write.

Horse racing has been prohibited, and all the race tracks will be utilized as vegetable gardens.

"Contract Record" Censures Unnamed Engineers For Unprofessional Conduct

The following editorial from The Contract Record and Engineering Review of March 26th under the caption "Legislation or a Code of Ethics, Which Is Needed Most," was shown to the Examiner by a Toronto engineer, in a recent interview, who remarked that it evidently referred to Peterboro's Hunter Street Bridge:—

"There is a considerable discussion going on at present among the members of the Engineering Institute of Canada regarding the efficacy of "Legislation" in removing the present ills of the profession. Particularly it is argued that by licensing engineers we should succeed in raising the standards of remuneration. Now the writer is of an entirely open mind on the subject of legislation, but, at the same time, makes bold to confess that he cannot see how either the status of engineering or the remuneration of engineers can be improved by this course, unless, indeed, it is proposed to exclude from the privilege of practising all those engineers who at the present time are guilty of unethical conduct, or are responsible, directly or indirectly, for reducing the rates of remuneration. In that case, however, the membership of the engineering profession might be too severely decimated.

"A case in point. A contract is to be let for the design and construction of a large bridge. Four or five of our best-known firms enter the competition. The announcement is made that the contract is let to one of them. This, however, does not settle the matter so far as the other firms are concerned. They continue to discuss the matter with members of the municipal council, they submit new plans and endeavor in various and devious ways to upset the original contract. Certain of them seek to discredit their competitors—their brother engineers.

"Could anything be more unprofessional? Could the council and citizens of that municipality do otherwise than conclude that engineers, in general, are a body of men for whom it would be a waste of energy to entertain respect? In what way will legislation remedy this condition?

"And there is still more to this case. The bridge will cost, it is said, in the neighborhood of $300,000—certainly not less. A fair fee for designing and inspection would seem to be somewhere around 5 per cent—i.e. $15,000. However, the cut-throat competition among these four or five brother engineering firms (who so urgently desire legislation to raise the standard of remuneration) has reduced this figure, we have been advised, to $4,000.

"Now what amount of legislation will ever rectify the condition existing in this case. These firms are working against one another. Each is suspicious and unfriendly towards the others. As a matter of fact, they are all merely playthings of the municipal council. If the councillors and mayor have any sense of humor they are enjoying as well as profiting by this auctioneering process of selling their services, practised by the engineers.

"In all possible seriousness, we suggest that the members of the E.I.C. who hope to improve working conditions for themselves by legislation, while the ablest and best-known men in the profession are engaged in secretly auctioning their services, are doomed to disappointment. It reminds one very forcibly of that story about trying to take the mote of our brother's eye. Until engineers respect themselves no one else is going to be foolish enough to respect them."

Another Murder In City of Guelph

Foreigner Receives Three Shots at a Gambling Party on Sunday.

(Canadian Press.)

GUELPH, Ont., March 31. —This city has had another murder in the foreign quarter. Alexander Dudka, a middle-aged Austrian or Ukrainian, died in hospital this morning as a result of being shot three times in the body, following a row on Sunday afternoon at a gambling party. From all accounts Dudka received the fatal wounds when he went to the assistance of an older compatriot.

Two other foreigners have been arrested, and an inquest will be held.

GERMAN SOCIALIST IS ARRESTED IN BERLIN

Suspected of Participating in Spartacan Rebellion.

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, March 31.—Ernest Daumi, President of the Executive committee of the Soldiers' and Workers' Council of Greater Berlin, was arrested yesterday on suspicion of having been a leader of the January disturbances with George Ledenbour, who has been in jail for several weeks. Daumig is an Independent Socialist.

Street-frocks remain nearly ankle length.

TWO EXAMINER MEN RETURN FROM OVERSEAS

Mr. Fred Primeau and Mr. John Anderson, who enlisted while in the employ of the Examiner, returned home to-day from overseas, and were warmly welcomed by their old friends and fellow employees. Mr. Primeau joined the 33rd Battery with which unit he fought in a number of the principal engagements in which the Canadian troops achieved fame. He was employed in the news room of the Examiner. Mr. Anderson went over with the infantry. He was a linotype operator, and will return to work in a week or two.

Daylight Saving For The Examiner

Owing to the fact that the whole distribution of The Examiner is controlled by the arrival and departure of the trains, and the fact that we are late to-day with the getting out of our mail matter, it will be necessary for The Examiner to go on the Daylight Saving Plan to-morrow. Everything will be moved forward to confirm with the above and work in with the majority of the large factories that are operating now on the Daylight Saving Plan.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Little Has Been Done During the Past Three Weeks.

THE "BIG FOUR."

By Fred S. Ferguson.
(United Press.)

PARIS, March 31.— As the Peace Conference to-day enters its third week since President Wilson's return, practically nothing had been accomplished in the last fortnight aside from an agreement on military and naval terms of the treaty, disposed of in the first few days.

Last week was virtually a dead loss, as far as accomplishment of a peace settlement was concerned. The questions of reparations and boundaries were still far from a decision.

The French prevented adoption of a reparations programme when they insisted on including their claims to the Saar Valley. In addition to reparations, this naturally affects the problem of boundaries.

Optimists still point to May 1 as the probable date for the completion of the peace treaty. This apparently might be accomplished if the present virtual deadlock were broken, but April is opening up with the "Big Four" obviously in an impasse.

A Showdown in Peace Situation

Woodrow Wilson Will Put It Up to the Senate.

By Carl D. Groat.
(United Press.)

PARIS, March 31.—President Wilson believes the peace situation is about ripe for a show-down, it was learned from an authoritative source to-day.

Things must come to a head quickly, according to the impression obtained by American Congressmen after a conversation with the President yesterday afternoon.

The President frankly discussed many peace problems and said he wanted to get American soldiers home as rapidly as possible. He reiterated that the League of Nations covenant is not delaying the peace settlement, but indicated that the reparations question has badly hampered deliberations during the past week.

The Congressmen gathered that Wilson would not stand for much more delaying. One declared his belief that the President is prepared to return to the United States when the Conference's work is completed, tell the people that the results were the best that could be obtained under the circumstances, and then leave it up to the Senate to accept or reject the treaty.

In this connection it was said that the President evidently has about reached the conclusion that he could not obtain a clause definitely protecting the Monroe Doctrine, and was nearly ready to accept the covenant without a specific Monroe Doctrine.

Thirty Thousand Coal Miners Out

Disorders Are Spreading Throughout Germany.

(Canadian Press.

COLOGNE, March 31.—Reports from Essen and neighbouring towns show a serious increase in the number of strikers among coal miners. To-day thirty thousand men are out, the result being that thirty shafts are closed down. In Witten and Dortmound, Westphalia and elsewhere, meetings were held, at which terms were demanded, which were directed by a desire to bring about the same disordered conditions as those which existed a month ago.

The demands include the withdrawal of the Government troops, twenty-five per cent. increase in pay, additional bonuses and a six hour day. The strike fever is also spreading to other fields, for instance the Prussian Hessian railway.

French Troops Were Captured

Release of Prisoners Has Been Promised by Hungarians.

(Canadian Press.

PARIS, March 31.—A small force of French troops stationed in a neutral zone between Hungary and Roumania, has been attacked by Hungarian troops, three hundred and fifty of the French being taken prisoners, according to an official report.

On demand of the French General the release of the prisoners has been promised by the Hungarians. Grave disturbed conditions are reported to exist in Hungary.

MINIMIZES ATROCITIES

Says Present Administration of Russia is Clean and Uncorrupt.

A PROPOSAL.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, March 31. — George Lansbury, editor of the new Labor newspaper, the Daily Herald, declares that the allies have received a proposal for an understanding with the present rulers of Russia and intimates that the conditions of the understanding are the withdrawal of allied troops from Russia and the abandonment of the policy of interference in Russian affairs. Russia on her part would be willing not to interfere with the affairs of other nations. Allow Finland, Esthonia, Ukraine and other republics formed from the bygone Russian empire to choose their own forms of government and to pay Russia's international debts.

STORIES OF OUTRAGES

The writer minimizes the stories of the outrages by Russian revolutionaries declaring that such happenings have been less frequent than in other revolutions on a similar scale.

He declares that Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier, and Leon Trotsky, the Bolsheviki Minister of War and Marine, have been "outrageously slandered," and describes the present administration of Russia as "clean and uncorrupt." The reorganization of industries is proceeding everywhere in Russia, Mr. Lansbury says.

Queen's Park Working on the Old Shedule

Provincial Government is Operating the Old Time.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, Toronto, March 31.—Queen's Park has not yet advanced its clocks. When the factory whistles throughout the city blew at noon to-day it was eleven o'clock in the Parliament Building. The House will sit this afternoon at four o'clock, daylight saving time, or three o'clock standard time. Whether this state of affairs will continue, the government has not yet decided. It will probably await the verdict of the Dominion Railway Board, and follow the action taken by that body, according to an intimation made from the Prime Minister's Department. A number of the civil servants employed in the building arrived at their offices by the new time this morning and registered indignation when they learned the truth.

"Imagine," one of them protested to the reporter, "leaving home at half past eight, riding fifteen minutes on a car, and reaching the office at a quarter to eight. But worse still, imagine leaving the building at five o'clock and not reaching home until half past seven."

The situation is an anomalous one which cannot long continue. As indications are that the Dominion Railway Board will probably decide in favour of the new time to-morrow, it is likely that the local government will fall in line. Meanwhile, however, daylight saving is "no goo" at Queen's Park.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

NO CHANCE FOR PETERBOROUGH.

General Mewburn's letter to the Great War Veterans' Association indicates that Peterborough is to have no chance of welcoming the 2nd Battalion. That famous unit, according to the Minister of Militia, will be demobilized at Kingston, which disperser, General Mewburn states, was chosen by the officers overseas, who have charge of the demobilization for Canada's army. If the officers of the units themselves have any choice in the matter, and according to the Minister's communication, such is the case, it is singular that on the day his letter was written, a cable received from a 2nd Battalion officer stated that the 2nd Battalion, together with the other units of the 1st Brigade, was to go to Toronto for demobilization. It has been frequently stated that the administration of military affairs in Canada and in England are not closely enough co-ordinated, and the fact that while Ottawa announces that the 2nd Battalion will go to Kingston, the officers of the unit overseas are preparing to demobilize in Toronto, seems to bear out this charge. However that may be, the people of Peterborough can take it as settled that there will be no opportunity of having any of the units of the expeditionary force come to this city.

There will, however, be several large parties of Peterborough men returning, notably from the 21st Battalion, and the authorities should take up the question of whether or not there should be a reception for these guests.

THE GOVERNMENT'S WEAKNESS.

The manner in which the Dominion Government has mishandled the daylight saving question is a striking proof of its general incapacity to deal with the problems that are facing the country. It is true that the rejection of daylight saving was made possible by a majority vote of Parliament, the Government refusing to accept the responsibility of bringing in daylight saving as a government measure and thereby the onus for its rejection or acceptance upon the private members. But Parliament having made its decision, the inconsistency of the Government is shown by its permitting the Canadian Railway War Board, itself a creation of the Government, to order the Canadian railways to adopt daylight saving and run on the new schedule, throwing the whole country into a state of disorder. Parliament decides that the country, as a whole, shall not use the new system, and immediately the Railway War Board orders the railways to put their clocks on an hour, and the municipalities are forced to follow their example.

The Government in its dealing with the question has shown neither backbone nor common sense. It should have introduced daylight saving as a Government measure, knowing that the system was approved of by all urban centres and did not do any real harm to the farmers. But having failed to show the moral courage to do what privately the members of the Government thought was the proper thing, the Government should have shifted by the decision of Parliament and ordered the Railway Board to see that the railways ran on the old time, solving the problem of the border connections in any way that found possible.

Thanks to the weakness of the Government the whole country is just now [illegible] state of disarrangement. The farmer, far from being benefited, realizes that they have been, to borrow a phrase from the vernacular, "handed a lemon." Some municipalities are already using daylight savings; others are still running under the solar system. In some factories the new time is being used, others have not made the change. As far as the cities and towns are concerned, they will in a day or two all be found operating under the summer time, so that with the railways, steamship lines, telegraph and postal service, and the urban centres of Canada, the situation will be exactly the same as last year, while the farmers will be no better off.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Peterborough Horticultural Society will, at a meeting to be held to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, in the City Council Chambers, organize a membership campaign. The objective for this year's membership is 600, and while this means the retaining of all last year's members and an additional increase of 100 per cent., the officers of the society are confident that with an organized and systematic effort, the goal will be reached. There is no reason why their expectations should be disappointed. The Horticultural Society has done splendid work in this city and many of the beautiful lawns and gardens that delight the eye in Peterborough's residential sections are the result of the help and the incentive supplied by membership in the society. Few organizations offer their members so much at such a small cost. There is an individual incentive to join such a society, and at the same time there should be a sense of civic responsibility to give impetus to the campaign that is being inaugurated. The making of Peterborough into a beautiful city, into a community where the signs of a general love of flowers and trees and trim lawns are to be found, on every side, is an ideal that should be encouraged and supported. All members of the society should resolve that they will do their part by bringing themselves and a full supply of optimism and enthusiasm to to-morrow night's meeting. Peterborough shows the effects of the work of a membership of 600—is it unreasonable to look for double the benefit from an organization twice as large?

THE RED CROSS.

Many Canadian people only think of the Canadian Red Cross in connection with our wounded soldiers—yet the Society has been carrying on a glorious work along other lines in Europe. In the official bulletin published by the Canadian Red Cross, Miss Mary MacLeod Moore gives us the following picture of what is being accomplished:

"One realizes how strong and how real is the tie between the various Allies when the bandages made and the socks knitted in far off Saskatchewan or quiet little Prince Edward Island find themselves, at the end of a long, long journey by land and sea, and land again, comforting the people of Serbia, of Italy, of Belgium and of France.

"This is what many of the articles worked by the patient, skillful hands of Canadian women from one end of our great country to the other, have done during these years of war. Not for the faithful workers to see the result of their labours. They have toiled month after month and year after year for the Red Cross, knowing that all they did was needed for the soldiers of the nations fighting with the great British Empire for freedom and right. Yet few of them could know except by hearsay what a godsend these things have been to wounded and suffering men.

"Now the generous offerings packed so carefully in the Canadian towns and villages have done more than ease wounded soldiers. They have helped to save the lives of the worn and unhappy people who have lived for years under enemy rule, in France and Belgium, suffering the misery of seeing their own country, their own little settlements and towns, occupied by the Germans.

"It is hard for us in our safe homes to realize fully what this must have been like. But we can guess dimly all that it meant when the British troops drew closer and closer, and the people knew they were to be delivered out of the land of the enemy. We can imagine the joy when, as the Germans were actually leaving, and shells were still falling, the Canadian Red Cross lorries, packed with the plentiful stores of food and clothing sent from Canada, pounded into towns which had been occupied by the enemy for over four years. Many of the inhabitants were worn to skin and bone by privation and suffering, as well as by anxiety for the fate of their relatives fighting or those in other parts of the country. There were little children wasting away before the eyes of their mothers; there were tiny babies, born into a world where the sound of guns was as much a matter of course as the noise of a street car or the jingle of sleigh bells. Some of these tiny babies were dying for want of proper food; some were naked but for a wrapping of paper when the Canadian Red Cross arrived with your offerings.

"Many of the people in the delivered towns were victims of the influenza epidemic, and were in no fit state to hold out against any disease. They would have died but for the Red Cross.

"It is a wonderful thing to remember that the generosity and the kindness and the perseverance of Canadian workers made it possible for the Canadian Red Cross Overseas to feed and clothe and save these poor people. Soups, concentrated milk, food for babies, clothing, medicines, bedding and other comforts were supplied quickly and freely, and the letters from the Mayors and Burgomasters of the released towns tell what the help of the Red Cross meant to our Allies.

"There are others even more distant to whom the name of Canada will always speak of comfort and generosity. Serbia, so torn by war after war, so brave and so unhappy, did not plead with the Canadian Red Cross in vain for help. Five thousand cases of supplies and five thousand dollars in money had been given to the people of Serbia this autumn up to the end of November, and since then more supplies have been sent through the British Red Cross Commissioner at Salonika. The writer heard a lady who has lately come to England, after working in Serbia during the enemy occupation, speak of the conditions. They are almost indescribable. We who have not suffered invasion, who have not had our homes destroyed, our children reduced almost to starvation, ourselves barefoot and in rags in the coldest weather, cannot realize what the Serbians have suffered all through the war. But whether Canada can realize this, as those who have seen with their own eyes the awful sights, her sympathy is as warm and as keen as if the starving half-frozen people knocked at the doors of her comfortable homes. Canada is helping to feed the hungry and to clothe the naked and her name is blessed by them as that of a friend.

"Steadily, month after month, the cases of supplies have come to England from Canada. From the 1st of September last to the 1st of December, 24,219 reached England and were distributed far and wide. To Boulogne went 6,730, to the Belgian Red Cross 785, to the Italian Red Cross 2,048, in addition to those sent to Serbia, to the French people and to the units in England.

"Before August, 1914, many of the countries engaged in the war, were places read of in books and in newspapers, but somewhat unreal. Now, for the rest of our lives they have a vivid personal interest to all who have worked for the Red Cross. We are brotherhood of suffering in the same linked together not only through the cause, but because Canada has shared with these people out of her abundance, has fed them and clothed them, bound up their wounds, and aided in restoring them to health."

From thousands of miles away Canada has reached forth the warm hand of friendship to her Allies, and the mothers of the Dominion have helped to save the babies of those other mothers whom they will never meet face to face but know to be their friends.

Upon this property is erected a brick building with shingle roof, having three rooms downstairs and three rooms and bath on the second floor with hot air system of heating and installed with water, light and gas services.

TERMS—A marked cheque for ten per centum of the amount of the purchase money to be tendered must accompany the tender and the balance of the purchase money is to be paid within thirty days after the expiration of the tender.

Tenders will also be received up to the said date by the said J. T. Braund and Mrs. I. M. Routley for the purchase of one-fifth interest in the stock in trade, book accounts and all other assets in the business known as "The City Footwear Company" and for the purchase of one-fifth interest of the lands hereinafter described, namely: In the City of Peterborough, in the County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario, being composed of Part of Lot Number Two, West of George Street and North of Charlotte Street, in the said City of Peterborough, more particularly described as follows, that is to say: Commencing at the South-west corner of said Lot Number Two, thence easterly along the northern boundary of Charlotte Street thirty-four feet six inches, more or less, to the lands purchased from one James Dolsby by one Robert Neill; thence northerly and parallel with the western boundary of said Lot Number Two and along the western boundary of said Robert Neill's land one hundred feet, thence westerly and parallel with the southern boundary of said Lot to the western boundary thereof, thence southerly along the western boundary of said Lot to the place of beginning.

Together with the rights of the said party of the First Part in and over the lane ten feet in width, open along the eastern boundary of said Lot Two and being the right of way described in Registered Instrument Number 2984 for the City of Peterborough and also all the rights of the said party of the First Part in, upon and over part of the north half of said Lot Two as particularly set out in Registered Instrument Number 197 for the City of Peterborough.

TERMS.—A marked cheque for ten per centum of the amount of the purchase money to be tendered must accompany the tender and the balance of the purchase money is to be paid within thirty days after the acceptance of the tender.

The highest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.

For further particulars apply to J. T. Braund, Esquire, 718 George Street or Mrs. I. M. Routley, 336 Downie Street, Peterborough, Ontario.

DATED at Peterborough this 28th day of March, 1919.

A WONDERFUL ERA IN PROSPECT FOR THE HEBREW

(By B. LASTER. Formerly of Peterborough.)

We have been through the most wonderful four and a half years in human history. Things have happened and if we had not been present to look on how naturally great things were happening, we would have been compelled to believe that there must be something supernatural and, I believe, the invisible power of the Almightly brings before us, and shows us in a most wonderful natural way that right is above might, and that falsehood and brutality cannot last. No matter how high and how loud a party shouts and pretends that he does things in the name of the Lord, as long as they were made for the purposes of deceiving others, they do not succeed at the end. Those that apply the name of the Lord in sincerity, and mean truly and act accordingly, no matter if it is an individual or if it is a nation. That has proven in the last four and a half years that trust and just are above falsehood and deceit.

Just look at the facts. Is this Providence or what? The Allies and the Central powers were both proclaiming that they were fighting for democracy, for freedom, for betterment of mankind all over the world, for protection of the weak, for equal rights for all nationalities and religions, but there was only that difference of the methods and actions. On one side, in the name of the Lord they were drowning, torturing, burning men, women and children indiscriminately in regard of age or sex and, on the other side, in the name of the Lord, they were defending the weak, protecting the helpless, and giving aid in a human way to friend and foe alike, and in a most wonderful way has it shown and proved in the central powers and on the side of the Allies, the difference of the value of the Jew, their treatment and their consequences.

The Allies, England has accepted and permitted among the greatest advisers and legislators, men of Jewish race, and we had in the late years continually Jewish men under most important positions of the Empire governments, and, at present, there are leading men of the Empire who are Jews, like Lord Reading, lord chief justice of England, and, at present, ambassador extraordinary in the United States or Sir Alfred Mond or Montague and various others. Take France it has a finance minister, Clotz who is a Jew and various others. Take Italy it has a foreign minister, Sonino, or Luzaty, and that immortal poet, d'Annunzio, who with his fiery poetry brought in the Italians on the side of the Allies, and many others. And the United States has numerous great Jewish men in connection with the present government, like Brandeis, Paruch or Oscar Strauss or Gompers or Chief Justice Louis D. Brandeis, and numerous others. What has been the result of these nations? You may think: I am superstitious, but think what you may. The effects are that the Allies are victors, and that on the other side of the central powers, while in the acts of the law of their countries, the Jews are supposed to have the same rank as the Gentiles in all matters and privileges, but it was only on paper, and the whole world knows what promises and paper mean there. They call them scraps of paper and accordingly no Jew was allowed to occupy a government position. No matter how great or intelligent, or what abilities they might have they were not permitted to participate in the destinies of their countries, and what are the results of their countries? True, some cliques of junkers and anti-Semitic gangs who were thinking that they were above the general public, that they had different blood than the average man and that at the word of one man who has represented himself as the senior partner of the Lord Almighty, as the kaiser did, by his command and wishes the world should turn into a human slaughtery, such as the world has never seen before. And without the consultation of the millions of his subjects, but merely by a gang of adventurers, who were conspiring and preparing for a generation with all kinds of inventions of destruction. Hell, itself, could blush in comparison to fall upon the peaceful neighbors and force them to submit to his command, no matter how unjust or how cruel it was! What was the result? It looked very promising for them for four years, and by manufacturing all kinds of false reports corruptive inspirations of patriotism, they were able to blindfold their people with inspiration and continued terrible struggle until a handful of leaders of the people began to open their eyes and penetrate into the depths of the ambitio the so-called demigods. At th of their lives, they started t sk them. Very few at the b ming, have dared, until they got courage and support, until they have reached their full strength and many a noble life has been sacrificed, but they have succeeded in accomplishing a deed that the whole world has been astounded with astonishment. The mightiest of the mighty was overthrown, and they were insisting on stopping the inhuman slaughter of human beings. Without a moment's loss peace at any price was their byword. Down with militarism, down with everything that is corrupt and rotten, one after the other, all the culprits began to fall, and they fell never to come to the surface again, and if we have to thank the Lord for having back with us, our beloved boys, if there came happiness in the hearts of hundreds of thousands of despairing mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, we have to thank next our glorious war generals and able statesmen for bringing us to the victorious end. We also have to thank the handful of leaders of the people of Germany and the central powers for indirectly helping the stopping of further bloodshed. Had it not been for the socialistic leaders of Germany, the junkers would have still fought, even though they began to see that their fighting was a losing game. Still they would not give in and God only knows how many hundreds of thousands would have been slaughtered until the beasts were brought to their submission. And now, who were those leaders of the people, who took off the masks of the conspirators and ended this human slaughtery suddenly. The majority of those men are Jews. Start with the name of Hugo Haase or Emil David, Doctor Cohen, or Bernstein or Max Harden or Kurt Eisner and many others men of great ability and knowledge, men who are trusted by millions of the people, ignored by the previous leaders until too late. Just when the clique of gangsters had seen that the game was up they came to them, whom they had ignored, and tried by bribing them and all kinds of promises that they should help them to keep their jobs, but they were shown that they were worthy of the trust given to them by the people, not going on compromises but have shown furthermore at the risk of their lives as the late Jewish premier of Bavaria, whose name is Kurt Eisner, who has given to the world the proof of the origination of this world war. He knew by condemning the kaiser, he brought upon himself the anger of all the junkers and nobility. Still he went on with the exposing of the actions of the architraitors and demanding the prosecution of them, until he fell, assassinated by one of their murderers. But still further proof of the guiding of the Almighty while the Allies were victorious, the Russian ally, who supposed to be the main protector, the main source of strength of the Allies' cause they were torn to pieces, the previous ruler is a thing of the past and their country ravaged and the starvation and misery of the people is unspeakable of by imagination though they were a short time before among the most powerful of countries on this earth. It may be prejudiced against them, because that country has tortured more than any other country in the late years the Jews, and a country that could have had the best of men in guiding them in the right way, but they have ignored them, and no matter whether the Russian Government was on the right side in the beginning by their actions between the main and man, they were wrong, and especially the treatment of the Jews was a black spot in the Christian world, and therefore they reap what they have sowed.

Dominion Friction Surface Belting Gives Long and Continuous Service

The St. Maurice Paper Co., Limited, Three Rivers, Quebec, has a particularly heavy drive with constantly changing load. During the first 21 months after its installation the belts of four different manufacturers failed completely.

Our engineers made a careful study of this drive and recommended a Dominion Friction Surface belt of a special type that has more than made good our claims of superiority.

Last August The St. Maurice Co. wrote us that our belt had operated the drive without the slightest trouble or the loss of a minute and that "it looks good for many more months of service."

Our belting experts will be glad to study your belting equipment with a view to making only such recommendations as will cut belting costs or increase the output of your plant.

This service is within your reach by phone, wire or letter to our nearest service branch and is free of cost to all users of belting.

French General Describes Death of One-Time Tsar

Bodies of Romanoff Family Cut Into Small Pieces and Burned, He Says.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—Confirmation of the putting to death of the one-time Emperor of Russia and his wife and daughters under particularly revolting conditions by Bolshevist troops was given here by General Robert C. Paris, one of the first French officers to be assigned to the Czechoslovak army in Russia. General Paris is on his way home to make an official report of the occurrence to the French government. He arrived here from Vladivostok.

Nicholas Romanoff and his family were shot in the basement of their house at Ekaterinburg, Siberia. The women of the once royal family were subjected to indignities and mistreatment in the presence of the one-time Tsar before being killed, General Paris said.

The house is now the headquarters of General Gaida a Czechoslovak commander. Describing the scene attending the putting to death of the Romanoff family, General Paris said:

"Early one morning the Tsar was taken from an upstairs room and stood against the wall in the basement of the house. There he was shot after which the Tsarina was shot and then her daughters and other members of the household.

"A few days following the murder the bodies were taken under cover of night by automobiles into nearby villages, where they were cut into small pieces and burned separately. The charred remains were found by officers of the forces opposed to the Bolsheviki. Pieces of the burned clothing also were found. Proof that the garments were those of the Romanoffs was given by the fact that diamonds which the Tsarina and her daughters wore in their waists were picked up.

"The room in which the murder was committed is now sealed. The plaster on the walls shows where the rifle bullets penetrated. The bullets were removed with bayonet points. Bloodstains have been scraped from the floor."

A POSSIBLE COMPETITOR FOR BIG OCEAN RACE

LONDON, March 28.—An airship with engines and cabins enclosed in an outer envelope, so that the craft can float on the sea, may be a competitor for the Atlantic flight. The Admiralty was engaged in building two such air vessels before the war ended, and it was expected that they would be superior to Zeppelins for scouting for fleets.

The feature of this craft, which was one of the several surprises being prepared for the Germans, is the use of a non-inflammable gas. The late Professor Ramsay was the discoverer of the gas, which permits of the construction of engines so that they can be placed on an airship which can float in the water if disabled. Shots through the envelope it is said, will only damage the gas compartment struck. The airship is not expected to be ready for trial before June.

Widow of Former Secretary of State Endorses Tanlac

Mrs. Patrie Gains Twenty Pounds and Health is Restored.

A great many people, especially ladies of culture and refinement, feel a great reluctance in publicly endorsing a proprietary medicine although they have derived untold benefit from its use, as publicity is more or less distasteful to them.

To a great extent this is the case of Mrs. D. E. Patrie, who lives at Portland Hotel, Portland, Oregon. However, to use her words, "she feels that she would be ungrateful and delinquent in her duty if she did not tell others of the wonderful benefit she has received from Tanlac."

While Mrs. Patrie has lived in Portland a number of years, her former home was in Idaho. Prior to his death her husband was one of the most prominent men in Idaho, having been Sheriff of his county several years, and later being elected Recorder of Bingham County. Afterwards he was elected Secretary of State and at the same time served as chairman of the Central Committee of the State Republican party.

In speaking of her experience with Tanlac, Mrs. Patrie recently said: "I weigh just fifteen pounds more now than I ever did in my life, and have actually gained twenty pounds since I began taking Tanlac. My health failed about a year ago. My appetite left me almost entirely, and I didn't relish what little I did eat, and I just felt tired and listless all the time. I was extremely nervous and never slept well and would just lie in bed and long for daylight to come. I finally decided to take a trip back to Idaho thinking that a change might do me some good, but I didn't improve at all.

"In a very short time after I began taking Tanlac I could see that it was going to do me lots of good, and it is simply wonderful the way I improved. I have a splendid appetite now, and thoroughly enjoy my meals without any bad after effects. My nerves seem to be in perfect condition and I am thankful to say that I get good, sound, refreshing sleep every night. It is wonderful how my weight and strength have increased, and I can truthfully say that I am as well and strong now as I ever was in my life. I never lose an opportunity to praise Tanlac, and when my friends remark about my wonderful improvement, it affords me great pleasure to tell them that Tanlac is entirely responsible for it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

GREEK TROOPS TO GO TO ASIA MINOR.

LONDON, March 29.—The Paris correspondent of the Post said he understands the Supreme War Council has authorized the sending of 50,000 Greek troops into Asia Minor to maintain order.

Sees Blue Sky for First Time Outside of Prison in 12 Years

NEW YORK, March 29.—Joseph Marcantune saw the sunshine and blue sky from outside of prison bars yesterday for the first time in twelve years. But he was not without a grim reminder that his liberty was short-lived, for guards who brought him from Dannemora Prison to attend the funeral of his brother, Private Robert Marcantune, of the army, kept close to his side throughout his welcome to his aged mother, the solemn requiem mass and the burial at Calvary Cemetery.

The soldier died of influenza. A second brother, Michael, honorably discharged from the army after five years service, is ill, and Joseph bitterly arraigned at his trial for murder as the black sheep of the family, now seems likely to become the one solace and protector of his faded little mother, who lives at No. 239 Graham avenue, Brooklyn.

Even while in prison he sent home money earned as prison barber to pay for the care of Michael. He may soon be able to give his full time to his mother and brother, for Assemblymen Donnelly and State Senator Carroll who secured his release for to-day, are interesting themselves in a plea for clemency.

He was charged with having killed James Baslin, who lived in Lorimer street. For this he was sentenced to prison for from twenty years to life. He has served twelve years of the term and is now thirty years old.

Every Girl Who Earns Her Living, Read This!

Very complex in her physical relations to life, disease early seizes upon the woman who works, and she must therefore guard jealously anything that would tend to destroy her vitality or health.

Probably nothing is of more service than Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and every girl and woman can employ this grand remedy with gratifying results.

As a system tonic and blood renovator, no treatment gives such results.

Dusky, sallow complexion is changed to a healthy ruddy glow, which proves that Dr. Hamilton's Pills circulate blood that is rich and nourishing.

Weak organs are filled with new life and vitality, weakness, irregularities and the common ills are prevented.

When you feel poorly, when the head aches, back feels lame and a drowsy, tired feeling creeps through you—that tells of the need of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; try them.

Girl of 15 Indicted on Murder Charge; May Not Be Tried

NEW YORK, Mar. 29.—Said to be unprecedented in this city a girl fourteen years old was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder in the first degree, conviction of which must be death in the electric chair, at Sing Sing Prison. Filippa Gambino, of No. 227 Sullivan street, who was arrested on December 31 last, charged with slaying Tomasar Troia, twenty-nine years old, a boarder in her parents' home, is the young girl.

Following her arrest immediately after Troie's death, Filippa is said to have stated at the District Attorney's office that she fired two shots at the boarder in self-defence. Moses R. Ryttenberg, Assistant District Attorney, presented the unusual case to the Grand Jury. Filippa may not be tried on the indictment. District Attorney Swann, James C. Smith, as assistant and Mr. Ryttenberg will hold a conference to determine if the girl should be turned over to the Children's Society, said he will apply for bail for his client and oppose any attempt to try her on the indictment. Filippa will be arraigned for pleading to-day before Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in General Sessions. In March, 1915, when District Attorney was a Judge in General Sessions Edward Lucy, fifteen years old, was arraigned before him on an indictment charging murder in the first degree. The indictment was dismissed and the case referred to the Children's Court.

BLAST AT HIGHWAY BOARD.

Hamilton Motorists Complain of the Conduct of Prosecutions for Speeding.

HAMILTON, March 29th.—The Hamilton Automobile Club discussed the prosecutions for speeding on the Toronto-Hamilton highway, and it was stated that magistrates were strongly inclined to accept the word of constables in preference to the sworn statements of reputable defendants. The matter was left with a committee.

BOLSHEVIKI TRY TO CONVERT CAPTURED BRITISH SOLDIERS.

LONDON, March 29.—Forty British naval and military prisoners captured in Northern Russia are at present captives in Moscow, according to a British refugee just arrived from Russia. The refugee says that the Bolsheviki apparently are trying to win the men over by giving certain freedom to them while imprisoning the officers in small cells.

The men are allowed to circulate in Moscow and to call on British residents there. They are also better fed and clothed than the officers. Despite the Bolshevist efforts, the refugee says, the men show no signs of joining the Soviet ranks.

Peterboro Soldier Writes of the Riots at Kimnel Park

Men Were Cold and Could Not Obtain Coal—Some of the Reasons for the Riot.

The following interesting letter was written by Sapper Stanley Hartley, whose home is at 124½ Hunter street. He refers to the recent riots at Rhyl Camp:

March 26, 1919.

Sir:—

I wish to say a few words on the riot we Canadians had at Kinmel Park, North Wales, so many people have asked me. How it started and what the trouble was the papers have printed several accounts of it, and they have been all different reports, half of which is not true. Kinmel Park Camp is about two hours run on the train to Liverpool and is used as a camp for men who have been casualties and men who have no units as they are broken up. These men are put in the Military District for different parts of Canada to wait on ships or sailings. Some of them have been there three or four months waiting to go to Canada, and have been on drafts and taken off again. Some have had their papers lost and kept back. As you already know, the Third Division, after the heavy battle at Cambrai had to be reinforced with all new draft men who had just come over from Canada; and others who had never left England were being sent home with men in the Third Division, while these men who had seen long service in France, were being held up, just because these new troops were in the Third Division. Most of the men at Kinmel Park had seen three and four years service in France, so it did not look like a square deal, draft men going home ahead of them. That is the chief reason for the riot. Some say the men were cold and could not get coal. We always had lots of coal in our hut and I think the rest of the boys did. England is mild at any time, so I don't see why they try and hush it up by saying the men were cold. I certainly will say the food could have been a lot better than it was, as we were in England and everything was handy. There was no need of them making stew with potatoes with the peelings on them. I used to make pig feed that way. The riot started on Tuesday night, March 4th, in a canteen where there were about five hundred men. All canteens were raided and the beer rolled out onto the roads and into the huts. As cups were short fire buckets had to be used for drinking out of. The officers had a very large supply of whisky and port wine on hand in their messes. The boys had a drink on them. For once anyway, there were some pretty dry looking would-be officers going around the next day. All canteens were cleaned out and both Y.M.C.A. huts also in town, where the civilian people kept military goods for troops, and they certainly used to spot the Canadian soldiers coming. They were not tongue-tied when it came to putting the price on things. The Salvation Army Hut and Free Church Hut were the only huts left safe, and the boys gave three cheers when they passed them. All soldiers have a good word for the Salvation Army huts in England or France, and respect them, as they do help the boys. The other huts, such as the Y.M.C.A., well I will not say anything about them, but there is such a thing as graft even out of a soldier. The girls who worked in the canteens were used with every respect and none of them had any complaint.

The shooting started the next day but no one intended to let it go that far when it started. The officer who gave the order to fire on his own countrymen and comrades who were through the battles in France, and this shot down by their own blood, is nothing but a German, and of the worst kind. He should be in the Hun army not among white people. There were five men killed and about twenty wounded in the shooting. Quite a number were arrested and taken to the town of London in Red Cross cars for trial, as all prisoners in camp were turned loose by the boys. The cavalry was turned out on the riot but they were driven off by a barrage of rocks.

One man I know of never in the riot, but sitting at the table in his hut writing a letter home, was shot in the neck when a bullet came in through the window. He died soon after.

In the evening of the second day things came to a close and everything was quiet and orderly again.

The next day General Turner came to the camp in his car, and told us how sorry he was about our own comrades being shot down by their own men, and then told us there would be four sailings inside of a month, anyway, for the boys in the camp.

General Turner is a man respected by all Canadians there for the boys returned to their huts contented.

Yours etc.,

S. C. HARTLEY,
Sapper, 195469.

Mrs. Wilkin's Body Is to Be Exumed For Finger Prints

Authorities Would Learn If Her Hand Made Blood Stains on Wall.

NEW TREND OF STORY

MINEOLA, L.I., March 29. — The Nassau county authorities have decided again to remove the body of Mrs. Julia Wilkins from the vault in Lutheran cemetery in Middle Village for the purpose of taking her finger prints. This decision was reached after C. W. Hansen, Nassau county finger print expert, had found impressions on a wall on the first floor of the Wilkins home in Long Beach, which apparently were made by a blood stained hand.

By comparing these impressions with prints taken from Mrs. Wilkins' hands the detectives hope to ascertain whether there is anything to sustain the newly involved theory that Mrs. Wilkins was murdered inside her house and not in the driveway, as reported by her husband, Dr. Walter H. Wilkins, who is under arrest charged with the murder.

The investigators now believe that Mrs. Wilkins may have been inside the house on the first floor when first struck and that she put her hand to her head after which she sought to support herself against the wall, thus leaving the stains found there.

It is expected also that a report on the analysis of the contents of Mrs. Wilkins' stomach will be made in a short time. This will establish whether or not an attempt had been made to poison her.

New Thread of Mystery.

Meanwhile Charles R. Weeks, District Attorney of Nassau county, has taken up a new thread of the mystery, and is trying to establish the closeness of the reported friendship between the Wilkins family and a motion picture star and widely known model, who, with her mother, is said to have lived in the West Sixty-fifth street house conducted by Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins in Manhattan.

Mr. Weeks declared that he had found two more witnesses— railroad employees in Jamaica —who heard Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins quarrel as they changed trains at Jamaica on the night of the murder. These two men, whose names were not made public, are said to have testified that the physician and his wife were engaged in a somewhat heated controversy which seemed to involve a certain piece of property. They are said to have heard the physician say that he "must have really killed her."

Edward Hicker, a ticket taker at the Flatbush avenue station of the Long Island Railroad told the investigators that he saw Mrs. Wilkins alone at the station a few minutes before seven o'clock the night she was killed. She had missed a train and was compelled to wait almost two hours for the next one. Hicker said he noticed the incident particularly because he had never seen her travelling without her husband before.

Believe Meeting Accidental.

From this the authorities infer that the alleged quarrel began in the afternoon and became so violent that she left him to go to their Long beach home; that the physician returned to his Manhattan house and that the two met by accident on the train which carried them to Long Beach a little after nine o'clock.

Dr. Wilkins seemed to be in better spirits today. His chief concern apparently was over the two dogs and other pets in his Long Beach home. He repeatedly gazed at a newspaper picture of his two collie dogs and mournfully shook his head.

"I wouldn't take all the money in the United States for those dogs," he repeated several times and then dwelt at length on the good qualities of his pets, praising their bravery and faithfulness.

District Attorney Weeks, in a statement tonight in connection with the case, said:

"I am sure that there were no burglars in the Wilkins house on the night of the murder."

He would not state on what grounds he based his conclusion, but said that evidence which had been investigated led him to this belief.

The absence of clues to show that burglars were in the vicinity on the night of the murder has been one of the outstanding features of the case from the start, the authorities say.

"Flu" Rages at Port Colborne.

PORT COLBORNE, March 27.—The recrudescence of influenza is causing uneasiness in this district. No less than 30 or 40 cases in Humberstone and Port Colborne were reported today. One case of sleeping sickness was also reported.

Self-Determination Policy of British

(Special to the Examiner.)

LONDON, March 29.—(British Wireless Service.)—Efforts which the British delegation is making to procure for the world the clearest possible peace will bear fruit in the peace treaty shortly to be made public, the Paris correspondent of the Westminster Gazette declares. He states on authority of "a highly placed personage' that the conference does not mean to violate territorial rights and that fears on this point felt by interested peoples in Europe are quite unfounded. The correspondent says that points of the treaty drawn up by Premier Lloyd George, and which will serve as a basis for discussion, have been deliberately framed in a spirit of great moderation, because it is felt that the treaty must be something acceptable and desirable.

"Certainly peace will be a stern one for Germany," the correspondent continues, "but the greatest care is being taken that it shall be just to the eyes of moderate and well-informed Germans. The principle of self-determination will be rigorously kept in mind with regard to allocation of territories." The correspondent quotes his informant as remarking "there must be casus belli left to Germany, otherwise you will have blocks of people clamouring for an alliance with the Fatherland."

The correspondent points out, however, that Germany had deliberately created a German populated wedge on essentially Polish territory and that Germany will have only herself to blame if she finds her nationals under Polish administration. "British influence," the correspondent asserts, "is nevertheless infinitely arrayed against inflated pretensions."

Peterboro Man Will Build 3 York Bridges

Mr. R. Blackwell of Peterboro, has secured a contract from the Toronto and York Highways Commission for the construction of three concrete bridges at Schomberg, Oakridges and Vandorf costing $7,000. The Commission is also spending $60,000 on eight miles of bituminous-bound macadam roads.

Still Seeking a Wilson Peace

"DO NOT BEND YOUR WILL BEFORE THE ENEMY" WARNS LUDENDORFF.

(United Press.)

BERLIN, March 31. — General Ludendorff, writing to the Militarische Korrespondenz, says:

"Do not bend your will before the enemy, who wants to impose a peace deviating from President Wilson's fourteen points. Do not accept a peace of destruction."

Speaking at Weimar, War Minister Noske denied that the Germans are conducting an offensive in the Baltic region.

THE NEW U NTER STREET BRIDGE

(By W. H. Pretty)

The following notes are in direct continuation from those published on Pages 8 and 12 of the "Peterborough Examiner" for Thursday the 27th instant and Friday the 28th instant, respectively.

17. In reference to the two existing wrot iron through truss bridge spans, used in the series for spanning the Otonabee, "no attempt to use them elsewhere or money spent with this end in view" should be made, until a thorough examination as a whole, and the destruction under test of some of the members from each span, have been carefully carried out. Metal templates and gauges having first been made, before destroying any member, or members, so that their accurate replacement may be possible in the event of the member or members proving unsatisfactory under test. Should the material prove acceptable then stress diagrams should be made by reputable engineers,—preferably a Bridge Company of reputation and who are themselves fabricators of Structural Steel Bridges,—with a view to possible increase in strength of the span as whole, by introducing new members or improving the existing ones, at a reasonable expense.

18. The existing spans, however, and the material (wrot iron) of which they are made, will be found, in all probability, suffering from what is technically known as "Fatigue", and which is generally accompanied by "local" crystallization very difficult to locate. Hence, on the whole, these two spans which have done yeoman service for over forty years, should be discarded. In addition to "Fatigue," there is also a general condition, sooner or later arrived at, in a structure of this kind, and which may be fittingly described as "finding itself", wherein the stronger members, by carrying loads not intended for them in the first instance, assist their physically weaker brethren; and is analogous to the only condition under which even a human community can hope to continue its usefulness. A reference may here be made to "Rudyard Kipling's" inspiration, embodying the idea in his published book called the "Days Work", under the heading of, "The Ship that Finds Itself," anyone who has followed the sea in gale and storm knows how truly and vividly that descriptive chapter reads. As a result of a structure "Finding itself" under the conditions under which these existing spans have been used, the removal to a new site, no matter how carefully the foundations have been prepared, will unquestionably result in a re-distribution of loads and stresses, inviting collapse. The writer has seen actual instances of this in Canada, wherein the proposed use for a new location of a bridge was abandoned, after examination of individual members which were so "tired out" that they gave way and broke up under their own weight, when isolated and subjected to simple tests carried out on the original site, there are rare cases to the contrary—but very few and far between in bridge spans of this type after so long a period of service.

19. From the writers observations, made from time to time, when passing "to and fro" between Ashburnham and the centre of the city, over the existing bridge, and when road excavations were on view at the present approaches on both sides of the River, the marvels at the "Temerity" of those responsible for issuing the Plans and Specifications and calling for tenders for work of such magnitude, without first taking the usual precautions to make a series of preliminary "test pits", down while a man can descend to examine the nature of the subsoil and underlying strata from which a profile plan should be made in the first instance, to enable an "approximate" idea to be formed of the nature and extent of foundations necessary, for a permanent piece of work of the proposed description. Reference has been made in the press, from time to time, about tests for foundations being made, but the writer has only observed experiments made by "prodding" with a wrot iron or steel bar, which would interprete an ordinary boulder, as solid rock, to the average man above, in most instances.

20. In view of the suggestion in these articles that the Canal should follow the river bed through the city, the single span structural steel type of river span spoken of under paragraph number eight (8) on page eight (8) of the issue of the Peterborough Examiner of Thursday, the 27th instant, would probably be the best to adopt, but the abutments must be designed "now" for meeting the conditions of deepening the river from bank to bank, or subsidence will take place later on, when such deepening is carried out, and this deepening, should also be done at once in any case as the channel or stream velocity has increased alarmingly since the City Council has, presumably, granted the Quaker Oats Company permit to narrow the stream bed by dumping "spoil" material into the river, thereby reclaiming for their own private use considerable wharfage on the river banks in front of their works. For, canal, or no canal, through the city by the route of the river bed of the Otonabee, the stream velocity is now dangerous for local navigation and boating purposes. The question arises, should not an investigation be commenced by the citizens, and the legal right of the Quaker Oats Company, in partially filling up the river bed, be threshed out? In view of a possible canal through the city as suggested there should be no difficulty in determining "now", the necessary width and depth of the river for proper stream velocity and canal purposes, and also the future "regulated water levels" for this purpose, all this can be predetermined "now", at very little expense to the city, and, in all probability at "no expense" whatever to the city.

(End of Article III).

Rum Found Cached Ten Feet Under Barn

SYDNEY, N.S., March 29.—What is believed to have been one of the main bases for the liquor trade in Cape Breton was unearthed at North Sydney when the Chief of Police discovered ninety gallons of white rum, or alcohol, and 45 gallons of ordinary commercial rum, cached at the depth of ten feet under a barn on the Gannon road. A second raid an hour later discovered about one hundred bottles of the manufactured product. The white rum, which was contained in a large drum, is believed to be part of the cargo of the steamer Afghan Prince, which went ashore last summer on Forchu Shoal with two million dollars' worth of alcohol on board. A large part of this cargo was afterwards salvaged and shipped to its destination, but so much was washed ashore and stolen that it is believed there is enough stored secretly in the island to furnish the making of illicit drink for years to come. Great pains had been taken to conceal the liquor, which was buried under ten feet of earth and rock. James Anthony, proprietor of the premises on which the liquor was found, was arrested, but later released on $500 bail.

FINAL SESSION ON APRIL 4TH FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS

"Obstructionists Spell Delay"

To the Editor of the Examiner, —

Dear Sir,— As a taxpayer I have followed the controversy on the proposed Hunter street bridge, and while there may be some good points in some of the letters yet if our City Council listen to the last hour advisors, it spells delay which we as loyal citizens of Peterboro cannot afford with so many idle breadwinners on our streets as well as the understood agreement with the Quaker Oats Co. If these obstructionists had desired to aid our Council with their suggestions they could have done so months ago and not waited until last week when second call for tenders was due or as Mr. Worth suggested, take a more active part in civic affairs.

The comparative cost of steel girder construction which means an extra pier or two in river bed I will have to leave to those better qualified than I. The recent reduction of steel prices would affect both types of bridges. But the suggested girder construction means a good share of appropriation spent outside the city and probability of experienced steel men imported for assembly here while present plan of reinforced concrete arch means practically all city labor.

By all means let us go ahead with the present plans if at all possible and get started as quick as possible.

Yours truly,
Taxpayer.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE MEMORIAL

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I have had the privilege of hearing the Bridge question discussed by a number of our leading citizens and I find that the majority are in favour of adopting the plans as prepared by Mr. Barber.

It is true that the plans for the bridge have been condemned by several parties, but the critics admit that they are not experts, and while they no doubt are sincere in making objection to the plans of the bridge, their opinions are not of so much value as they would be if the objectors were practical bridge builders.

The location and site of the bridge demand that it be made to present a good appearance, anything cheap would look mean in contrast with the beautiful buildings erected by the Quaker Oats Co. And it will be much used, more people come into the city over the roads leading to the site of the proposed bridge, than from any other avenue. As it will be permanent, it should be made the full width of the street. And it should be made to look well, made a beautiful bridge, a monument to the enterprise of the men of this city who build it. And why not make it a memorial to our soldier dead.

I note that in several places in Ontario, the people are building memorial bridges in honour of their dead soldiers, and I have wondered that the suggestion was never made here to use the new structure as a memorial bridge, and have the tablets with the names of our fallen heroes placed in suitable positions on it.

It is an ideal location for the site of a memorial. It is easy of access from all parts of the city. Numbers of people would pass it every day, coming into the city from the east, strangers visiting the Lift Lock, all would see it.

Some time ago there was a discussion in the local newspapers, over what form the memorial to our dead heroes would take, some suggested a home for the returned soldiers, and some a monument to be placed in some public place. I believe that this question was never finally settled, and I suggest that now is the time and now the opportunity to act, and place on the new bridge a monument to the memory of the men whom we desire to honour.

I am sure that Mr. Barber could easily work in the design and make it add to the beauty of the bridge.

The County Council would no doubt help in defraying a part of the additional expense, and private citizens would also contribute towards providing the tablets.

MEMORIAL.

THE HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

(By Ratepayer.)

It is well known that concrete was used by the ancient Romans and that many examples of their concrete bridges yet remain in use. The cement used for them was the same as our "natural cement," called in England "Roman cement." It is the same as the ordinary Portland but not so uniform.

The more recent discovery that steel may be embedded in concrete, thus preserving it forever from corrosion, has given a marvellous impetus to concrete building within the last thirty years. The concrete and embedded steel are called "reinforced concrete."

The first reinforced concrete bridge in America was built in 1889, and since then many thousands of concrete bridges have been built in all parts of the world from the smallest spans to those which exceed any masonry arch spans.

Amongst the greatest concrete bridges are many built by railway companies and other private corporations, after carefully considering the merits of steel and there is every evidence that reinforced concrete will be the standard material for future bridges and viaducts.

Concrete is permanent. Many stone bridges have lasted for centuries, and concrete is better in this respect than any stone as it is everywhere admitted that concrete gets stronger with age.

As years go by traffic upon the highways becomes heavier, steel bridges grow weaker, concrete bridges grow stronger.

A concrete arch bridge at Indianapolis withstood the flood of 1905, though every steel bridge in the city was damaged or destroyed by the flood.

A concrete structure will be almost as rigid as an earth embankment ,and the passage of cars and vehicles much less noisy than over a steel bridge.

It is tough. Two concrete stores in Tunis settled eight degrees out of the horizontal by the settlement of the foundation, and were jacked back to place without a crack occurring.

A viaduct of concrete would be manufactured at the site almost entirely keeping the purchase price in the city, while steel would be manufactured elsewhere and only put together at the site. Then the erection gang who would put the steel together at the site would be expert steel erectors sent out from the factory. Only the comparatively small amount of concrete in piers would employ Peterboro labor.

Steel deliveries have been and are still very uncertain. The demand for steel in ships and many other structures will push the supply, making the time limit uncertain for a considerable time to come.

Concrete has frequently been less in first cost than steel in pre-war times, but the extra advance of steel over that of concrete since that time has resulted in making the concrete bridges cheaper in first cost than steel for practically all situations.

The price of steel at the present time as recently set to be in effect for one year, is practically double the price of steel in 1915, while in the same period the cost of finished concrete work has gone up about 45 per cent., principally on account of the advance in labor.

A case in point is that of the four principal Toronto-Hamilton highway bridges, now being completed as concrete trusses. A situation could scarcely be found more disadvantageous to concrete construction than those of three of these bridges, the foundations for which were through very loose mud for a considerable distance; and it is well known that hard foundations at a reasonable depth is advantageous to concrete. Even in this situation, however, bridges both in steel and concrete were completely designed by engineers for the buyers and bids received from companies on both designs: concrete being accepted in all four situations as being lower in first cost.

In most situations of late years, even in the United States, where there is no duty on steel, and it has a better chance against concrete than in Canada, concrete has been found cheaper than steel where bids have been asked for both ways, and for the first time in the history of concrete bridges the amount spent on concrete bridges has exceeded that spent on steel bridges for the first nine months in 1918, the amounts being as follows: $5,000,000 on concrete bridges, $4,800,000 on steel bridges.

One or two examples may be given out of a great number that can be cited:

From the Engineering News Record, Feb. 21, 1918: The Sullivan bridge, Illinois, over the Chicago and Eastern Railway, length 526 feet, was designed in concrete for the sole reason that the first cost was found to be less than steel.

From the Engineering News Record, July 12, 1917: The James River Bridge, Richmond, Va., over a double track [illegible] of length 2278 feet, the cost of concrete was found to be $477,774 and of steel $492,435.

From a paper presented by Clifford Older, bridge engineer to the Illinois Highway Commission, and read before a meeting of the Northwest Road Congress, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, October 4th, 1915: "The Illinois Highway Commission have adopted concrete for practically all bridges, the price being cheaper in first cost in eighty-five per cent. of the cases. They had then built 1700 concrete bridges in Illinois, and the maintenance covering 9 years was found to be one-tenth of one per cent., for the whole period.

Let us compare the final cost of steel against concrete, assuming for the moment that concrete and steel will be exactly the same as steel in the first cost, noting that concrete is permanent and steel will last at the most fifty years, and will cost considerable for painting. In this we shall assume that concrete will last only twice as long as steel in order to be conservative, though it will last many times as long.

Painting, per year	$1440
Sinking fund at 4% interest to renew steel viaduct in fifty years	1965
	$1405
Sinking fund necessary to renew concrete structure at end of 100 years	$ 242
Saving per annum in favor of concrete	$3163

This sum capitalized at 4% equals $79,064.

This drain of $3,405 per year can be saved by building the viaduct of concrete or you can afford to spend $79,064 more for concrete.

If the cheapest bridge is to be adopted, however, regardless of value, it is simply an incentive to designers to get out a bridge cheap in every sense of the word. Such a method will not lead to a fair comparison between steel and concrete, nor between one concrete design and another.

Finally, it is to be said that if a steel bridge or any other bridge should be adopted at the present time work on it certainly could not start this year, as it will take considerable time to design and another considerable time to have the plans checked by the Railway Board before work will be allowed to start; and in the case of a steel bridge practically no Peterboro labor will be employed, excepting in a comparatively small amount of concrete that may be used in the piers.

Yours truly,
RATEPAYER.

THE "FLO-FLO" MUSICAL COMEDY

No musical comedy of the Broadway season has been more persistently hummed and whistled into fame than "Flo-Flo," John Cort's latest musical comedy success, which he will present at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, Matinee and evening.

"Flo-Flo," delighted blase Broadwayites all last season at the Cort Theatre, New York, being one of the few attractions to remain the whole year.

"I don't know what you see in Me," has been sung into popularity in every state in the country this season. It is one of the features in which Mr. Cort's "Perfect 36" Chorus comes to the front to establish its claim as being the only comedy chorus in captivity. The eccentric dancing of the girls in this number captivated New York. The chorus supports an excellent cast which includes Louise Kelly, Jere Delaney, Carl L. George, William Cummings, Rose Southern, Mildred Beverly, Augustus Buell, Rhea Norton, William Burton Burns, Edward Lynn, and others equally well known, the perfect "Thirty-Six" models, and an augmented "Flo-Flo" orchestra which is heard to excellent advantage in the play's tuneful score. Special Augmented orchestra. Seats on sale on Thursday.

PAN-GERMANS IN DANZIG MAKE TROUBLE.

Inter-Allied Mission in Danger of Imprisonment.

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, March 29.—A rumour was in circulation here last night that the Inter-Allied mission at Danzig had been interned. This morning's newspapers, however, declare that no confirmation of this rumour had been received in French official quarters. According to the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail, a telegram was received at the French Foreign Office, reported serious disorders had occurred at Danzig, instigated by Pan-Germans. The demonstrations are declared to have been directed at the Inter-Allied Mission.

"People Don't Seem to Know What is Going On"

Farmers' Representative Amazed at the Acrobatic Feats of the Administration.

FROM THE DEAD

(Special to Examiner.)

TORONTO, March 31. — The farmers' resentment of the action of the railways and cities in adopting daylight saving irrespective of Parliament's action, was expressed to an Examiner representative in Toronto, by Mr. C. W. Gurney, chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the United Farmers of Ontario.

"People don't seem to know what is going on," said Mr. Gurney. "We shall soon hear that there is no more need for Parliament; and that every big interest is a law unto itself.

"Last year Parliament passed an act setting the clocks forward an hour. Everybody obeyed the act, including the farmers, who suffered by it. This year the House of Commons, by the remarkable vote of two to one, decided against renewing the act; and at once the railways, cities, municipalities start in to defy Parliament, by trying to compel the whole country to do their bidding.

HAS NO OPTION.

"That is a brand of law-defying Prussianism that I suppose the farmer is not expected to understand. He is merely to accept it. And then," added Mr. Gurney, somewhat bitterly, "they wonder at popular discontent."

"Have you seen that the chairman of the Railway Commission has summoned the railways to show cause why they should change the time all over Canada without getting the permission of the Railway Commission?" Mr. Gurney was asked.

"Oh, yes, but what does that mean?" replied the farmers' leader. "It may mean something or nothing. The railways announced their intention days ago of making a law unto themselves. Everybody in Ottawa knew that there would be a big majority in the House of Commons against a return to daylight saving time. Then was the time to warn the railways against setting up a fresh autocracy in this country — not when the orders have gone out to the employees."

"But the farmer is not going to be robbed of any time, is he, Mr. Gurney?"

RESIST OPPRESSION.

"The farmer is going to be compelled to do something that Parliament has said he should not be compelled to do," was the retort. "That is oppression, and it is the duty of free citizens to resist oppression. Because of the morning dew and other reasons, we found that daylight saving was an economic burden—it hampered our business. We convinced our representatives in the House of Commons that this was so. But because city people think the clock shifting would increase their pleasures, we are to suffer."

"What are the farmers going to do about it?" Mr. Gurney was asked.

"What is Parliament going to do about it?" he answered. "It is Parliament that is being set at naught. If Parliament has lost all self-respect, do you think that the farmers can raise it from the dead?

"Will the farmers be making another remonstrance to the House of Commons?"

"I don't know. Perhaps we ought to. Last year we called upon the House, which refused to allow us to state at the bar our objections to its abdication of self government — to recover its freedom from cabinet dictation. This year the Cabinet ran away from its responsibility it last year was quick enough to impress upon the House. So the House must, I suppose, be given a little time to see whether it is capable of asserting its rights and privileges. If it does not stir—well, we shall see if there are any friends of Parliamentary government left in the country."

German Reply to Entente's Demand

No Provision Made for Transportation of British Troops in Armistice, Says Hun Government.

Special to the Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, March 29.—The full text of the German reply to the Allies concerning the landing of Polish troops at Danzig shows that Germany made a point that it did not undertake to give free access to the Polish army to West Prussia in the armistice agreement with the Entente Powers. The reply says: Since the conclusion of the armistice, the entire situation in Posen, West Prussia, and Danzig has entirely changed.

Offering the ports of Stettin, Koenigsberg, Memel or Libau, the German Government says that "all necessary facilities for the speediest possible landing and transit of General Haller's army to Poland will be provided.

"From the standpoint of railroad facilities," the reply adds, "the routes to and from the city lead more specially to their goal, without entailing the interruption of importations of foodstuffs to Poland."

Voice of The People

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH—PETERBOROUGH SOUTH.

To the Editor: I am writing to correct an article which appeared in Saturday's Examiner, which to put it mildly, was very misleading, and caused quite a lot of dissatisfaction amongst those who were laboring to build up a cause worthy of the South End amongst the Anglicans of that district.

First of all you state that the new Chancel which is being added is being erected as a war memorial to the former members of the church who have fallen in the Great War. Such is not the case. The beautiful stained glass windows (which were, or at least three of them, in the old Murray Street Baptist church) that have so kindly been donated to St.George's church by the Great War Veterans' Association of Peterboro, have been placed in the new chancel as a memorial to those late members or comrades of St. George's who have made the supreme sacrifice. Thus you will see that the windows and not the chancel are the memorial.

The labor is being given by men of the congregation (not returned soldiers with one exception) under the superintendancy of Mr. G. Lancaster, who have been unsparing in their efforts during the evenings, after their day's work was done, and to whom every credit it due, in trying to show their practical interest in the church.

The first services when the church was first founded, was held in Mr. Manley's house, and after a time transferred to the old Exhibition Building on the Fair Grounds.

As you stated, the formal opening of the chancel will be on Easter Sunday, when the Ven. Archdeacon Warren will conduct the services at St. George's but on the following Wednesday evening, which is St. George's Day, the Bishop of Ottawa will conduct the service in St. John's church (which has been kindly lent by the Vicar and Wardens for the occasion) and not in St. George's church.

Another error in the article was that we have no surpliced choir (which we have) but as yet have no cassocks, which we are trying to get.

Kindly insert this letter in your paper and oblige the Wardens of St. George's.

Peterborough, March 29, 1919.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

May I use your columns once more in connection with the much-discussed Hunter Street Bridge.

I am persuaded that the citizens, including the city fathers, have not studied the design of this bridge very carefully, or sufficiently.

As designed it means a huge expenditure, and there is no reason now, nor is there likely to be within the next forty years, that would justify adding three hundred thousand dollars to the city's indebtedness, when one hundred and fifty thousand, or less would meet the requirements.

This bridge is designed with two street car tracks, whereas one is all that possibly could be used. Imagine a bridge over seventeen hundred feet long with an extra street car track clearance of about thirteen feet wide, which will cost about seventy thousand dollars for the extra track space. At five per cent. this extra track will mean an annual charge (which will have to be collected from the citizens) of thirty-five hundred dollars. Turnouts on the regular highway for cars to pass could be made instead of being put on the bridge.

Build a bridge of the right size, but do not follow somebody's insane idea that two street car tracks are necessary and at an annual charge of thirty-five hundred dollars for interest.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Jiggs Mahoney, Maggie and Dinty Moore, the famous cartoon characters originated by George McManus were visitors at the Grand on Saturday afternoon in Gus Hill's fourth serial "Bringing Up Father at Home." Two capacity audiences welcomed John E. Cain and his corps of funmakers and while the production was hardly up to the standard of the earlier presentations of the adventures of "Father" yet there was plenty of amusement. Mr. Cain was as funny as ever as Jiggs. His make-up exactly catches the Mahoney appearance as seen in newspapers and while some of the business he introduces is getting somewhat shop-worn from having been used in his other productions it does not fail to produce laughs and many of them. Miss Lyda Kane the "Maggy" of last year was again with the company as was Miss Blanche Newcomb who has had the soubrette role in the production for several years was seen as the daughter. The rest of the principals were new-comers to the cast. One of them Miss Grace Hanson sang nicely and contributed a clever specialty.

To-night the fraud opens a special three day bill at popular prices. In addition to the wonderful film featuring Julia Arthur in "The Cavell Case" and a Charlie Chaplin picture there will be three high class vaudeville acts and the Screen Magazine.

The next road show is the big musical comedy success "Flo-Flo" which comes to the Grand for matinee and evening performances on Satruday.

Increasing Demand for Mr. Huycke's One-Step

Mr. Asa Huycke's new one-step, "Navigatin' Home," has won immediate favour in local music circles and has already had a large sale. His latest composition is a descriptive novelty that shows the influence of syncopation that predominates in the popular music of the day. It has a jazz flavour, and is suggestive of negro melody in its original themes and also in the excerpts from old favourites that are cleverly employed in one of the conoluding movements. Mr. Huycke has given new proof of his versatility in "Navigatin' Home" which is unlike any of his other successes. It possesses appealing qualities of melody and well marked rythm that justifies the expectations that it will exceed the sale of even his best previous work.

There Are Two Kinds of Eye Strain

External and Internal

External eyestrain is strain of the muscles, on the outside of the eyeball which move it around in its socket. Internal eyestrain is the strain of those muscles on the inside of the eyeball and which help the eye to focus clearly.

Where glasses are needed to relieve eyestrain they must be ground for the individual using them—otherwise instead of relieving the strain they will increase it.

DAYLIGHT SAVING FOR PETERBORO WILL BE PASSED TO-NIGHT

Mr. C. S. McClelland, Peterboro's official horologist, in other words the custodian of the Market Clock, called at the city hall to-day for instructions in regard to changing the city's time. Mayor Duncan informed him that he should be prepared to push the hour hand forward one space to-night.

The council has a resolution on file for the special meeting that has been called for to-night and an effort will be made to put Peterboro in the urban class that prefers daylight saving, instead of trailing behind with the farmers.

The Postmaster will present a petition, it was stated, objecting to the council's promised action, but the sentiment of the factory workers is indicated by one report that all but five employees in one shop were in favor of the new time.

"If the Dominion Railway Board orders the Canadian railways to abide by the decision of Parliament, we can go back to the old time with the rest of the cities," said Mayor Duncan.

His Worship and other members of the council, declared that they desired to carry out the wishes of the majority of the people, and from the urgings of the manufacturers, merchants and factory employees, the majority opinion is unquestionably in favor of the Daylight Saving scheme.

Voice of the People

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE
March 31st, 1919.

To the Editor:

Sir:—Would it be possible to inform the citizens of Peterboro how much extra cost is being added to the actual cost of the proposed Hunter Street Bridge through agitation and calls for different plans and different estimates, etc., etc.

The city council have done their part in a business-like manner. They have the peoples' confidence or they would not be there. Why embarass them with so much conflicting advice? Mr. Barber is the paid man to give any advice needed. The estimates will be in on Tuesday next I believe, so why meet trouble half way. The working men have every confidence in the council, and that they will not delay this work.

Yours,
INQUIRIER.

141 Hunter Street East,
March 30th, 1919.

The Editor of the Examiner,
Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

I received by postal mail on Saturday morning, the 28th inst., a communication, of a "semi-anonymous" nature, from someone, who, apparently, would lead me to believe that he is one of our City Aldermen, the subject matter seeming to bear upon my articles on the proposed new Hunter Street Bridge for this city, as published on pages 8 and 12 of your issues for Thursday the 27th inst. and Friday the 28th inst., respectively. As no name is subscribed, I must, with your permission, have recourse to the press, in the hope that the letter and invitation will meet his notice.

The note is purely "personal," so far as I can gather from its perusal by me, and does not, therefore, warrant publication here, but I feel that I hold a "mortgage" on his manhood and I invite him to redeem it. I have, as yet, never held a mortgage of any description on any one or more of my fellow creatures, man, woman, child, men, women or children, that was not redeemable by gratitude or goodwill, and I make no exception in this instance.

I invite him with two of his friends selected by himself, to form with himself a self-constituted tribunal, to meet me at my home or elsewhere some evening, by mutual arrangement, to meet as man and man, have a talk together, burn the evidence and "mortgage" in our joint presence, and I trust part as brother and brother, and thus, so far as I am concerned, at any rate, close the incident for ever.

The honours I have won in my profession as an Engineer I have no cause to be ashamed of, and, with your permission, I will wear a few of them in public on this occasion, others shall be accessible to my judges (the self-constituted tribunal herein referred to) when we meet.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PETTY,
Whitworth Scholar, Associate of the Royal College of Science (University of London); Associate member of the Institution of Civil Engineers.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: At the risk of wearying your readers, let me reply to a "Woman Voter," and here let me say people really ought to sign their true names. It is not fair not to do so, when the writer may be a mere ragging politician in disguise.

W. S. says that God created everything, including cocaine, etc. Would I let the people, therefore, have free access to it? Certainly not. I am in favour of the strictest regulation of all things that being misused may be dangerous. But I am not in favor of cursing cocaine, alcohol, strychnine or anything else made by God. I am in favor of preventing their misuse. That is my creed. Surely W. S. would go no further. On the other hand, take race-track gambling, a purely human invention. I will vote to extinguish it if possible. That is where total prohibition can come in, but not where God is a maker and creator.

J. H. Burnham.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH NEW CHANCEL

In the account of St. George's Church new chancel, which appeared in the Examiner of last Saturday, there were some statements that were not altogether correct. For instance, the Chancel, according to the report, was being built as a "memorial to the memory of those who went overseas". As a matter of fact, the chancel is being built because there was an urgent need of it, and would have been built if no war had taken place. It is quite true that the beautiful stained glass windows in the new Chancel, have been given by the G.W.V.A. as a memorial of the soldiers from St. George's who sacrificed their lives in the interest of their country, and the rest of the men from St. George's, who went to the "front" as a matter of duty to their country.

Also the statement that "the work being undertaken by six of the men who have returned," is also incorrect. As a matter of fact, only one returned soldier takes a part in the work, the rest are members of St. George's church who could not enlist for various reasons. It may be mentioned that the work is being carried out under the direction of Mr. George Lancaster and Mr. Manley.

Also the reference to the forthcoming visit of the Bishop of Ottawa is rather misleading. His Lordship will not preach in St. George's, but at St. John's church. The occasion being St. George's Day Service, April 23rd. These National Services ar always held at St. John's although organized by St. George's people.

There is another statement that is not correct. The writer stated, "He, (the Rector), also looks forward to having a surpliced choir in a short time." As a matter of fact, there is a surpliced choir. What is now wanted, are cassocks for the choristers. Also a "Bishops" chair and lecturn are urgently needed. Gifts from the kind friends of St. George's in the City, of any or all of the above mentioned things, would give great delight to the people of the South End and would complete, for the present time the needs of poor St. George's Church.

A Member of St. George's.

THE MOTOR SHOW REPLETE WITH MANY NEW FEATURES

Will Be Held Next Week in the Armouries and Will Be Big Affair.

The Motor Show proceeds of which are to be handed over to the Peterborough Health Association, is going to be a pronounced success in every way. Every bit of space has been contracted for, and the armouries are being handsomely decorated for the occasion. The program, being arranged, is to be an exceptionally good one and will be the means of drawing many people to the Show. A big feature is the 35-piece orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Gliddon which is preparing a special program.

Extra attractions in profusion will be located in different parts of the Armouries to lend excitement and entertainment to the event.

Altogether, next week will be a great week for Peterborough. Everybody is getting their motor cars in shape for the Monster motor parade on Wednesday evening next, which will usher in the Show in proper motor style. Advance tickets are now being sold, seven for a dollar and when you are convassed by a young lady, just buy a dollars worth and you will find you will have use for them.

MAN CONVICTED OF SEDITION TO LEAD BUTTE DEMOCRATS.

BUTTE, Mont., March 29.—W. F. Dunn, editorial writer on the Butte Daily Bulletin, won the democratic nomination for Mayor over Captain William Cutts, one-time army officer, according to returns compiled from the primary election.

Dunn recently was convicted of sedition at Helena and fined $5,000. He is at liberty on bail pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court. Captain Cutts made his campaign on the issue of "Americanization."

Monthly Meeting Teachers' Guild

Interesting Programme Was Provided.

The monthly meeting of the Women Teachers' Guild was held in Central School on Friday evening. After the business had been disposed of, a very interesting programme was presented, "An Evening with the Composers." Several of the teachers gave very interesting talks on famous musical composers and their works. Each talk was followed by the rendering on a Victrola of selections from these works.

At the close of the meeting a vote of thanks was passed to those who took part and particularly to the Cressman Company who very kindly loaned a splendid machine for the evening.

Annual Meeting Board of Trade

Efforts Made to Increase Industrial Activity in Peterboro.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Board of Trade for the election of officers and council and for the consideration of routine and special business, is called for tomorrow evening in the Council room of the Board on the 2nd floor of the Dominion Bank building. The presence of all members of the Board and delegates of affiliated associations is especially desired at this meeting when subjects of extraordinary interest to Peterboro are to be submitted for concerted discussion and action. Following are some of the reasons why you should be at the meeting:

1. An aggressive far-reaching policy of obtaining manufacturing concerns for Peterborough is to be inaugurated during the period of reconstruction, in order to develop and increase the growth of the city.

2. Report system is to be organized so that every business man will know the financial responsibility of any person asking credit.

3. Investigation is to take place as to the means of reducing the operating cost of City Government.

4. Efforts will be made to form British and Foreign connections with local manufacturers to increase the manufacturing output of local concerns.

BOLSHEVIKI SEND ULTIMATUM TO CZECHO-SLOVAK REPUBLIC

Slovenes Are Mobilizing Against the Hungarians.

(Special to The Examiner.)

GENEVE, Switzerland, March 31. — The Hungarian government is reported in Vienna despatches to have sent an ultimatum to the Czecho-Slovak government. This action, it is said, was taken because of the concentration of Czecho-Slovak troops and a rumour that there would be a general mobilization in Bohemia in the near future.

Fire at the Quaker Oats

Sprinkler System Performed Its Work Well.

At a quarter to three this afternoon fire broke out in the grinders on the sixth story of the warehouse of the Quaker Oats Company, but very little damage was done owing to the new automatic sprinkler system, which soon extinguished the small blaze. It is thought that a nail or some other small obstruction lodged in the conveyors which transmits the hull feed to the next story. A spark caused the dry dust to catch fire, resulting in a small blaze. The fire brigade were quickly on the scene but the sprinkler system had done its work well, and only the pouring of smoke from the sixth story window suggested a conflagration. No chemicals or water was used by the brigade, but some damage was done by the water from the sprinklers.

Sergt.-Major Thomas Arrives From Front

Big Party of Peterboro Boys Reach Home From Overseas.

A large number of Peterborough boys returned from overseas over the week end. The trains on Saturday evening and early Sunday morning brought some of these, and others arrived on the morning C.P.R. train today. The returning men came over on the Olympic, Minnekada and Cedric.

Among those who reached home on Saturday was Sergt.-Major Sam Thomas of the 21st Battalion. Sergt.-Major Thomas enlisted here in September, 1914, with the 57th quota to the 21st Battalion, and was with the battalion in France during all of its battles, winning promotion to the rank of Serg.-Major and also being awarded the Belgian Croix de Guerre and the Distinguished Conduct Medal. His brother, Sergt. Fred Thomas, of the 21st, was killed in action.

Sergt. Stan. Hagerman and Bomb. Alf. Hagerman, two brothers who were with the 33rd Battery, were in the party of week-end arrivals, while Gunner Arthur Horsfield of the 33rd Battery, arrived this morning.

ADDRESS AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH

Rev. A. J. Thomas Delivered Eloquent Address.

Last evening an impressive service was held at the George street Methodist church. The church was filled to capacity. The first ten minutes were spent in singing praises from the new "Special Hymn Sheets," to be used at this week's special meetings. During the service a "Forward Step" Card was given to each one in the audience.

The pastor explained that it was to help some to make a decision to become a Christian and to encourage Christians to take a forward step.

Rev. Mr. Thomas then delivered a very eloquent and practical address on "Who is a Christian?"

He emphasized particularly and made very clear, what an ideal Christian should be. A Christian is more than a good man or a good woman; that is using the word "good" in a moral sense. A man can be moral and yet not be a Christian. If he lacks the appreciation of God or does not bow down to God for his imperfections, or has no vital relation at all with Christ, he is not a Christian.

Christian Life.

Christian life is experience, not belief. No one can be a Christian without this actual fellowship with God, and without having sought and found forgiveness for his sins. Sin is transgression of the laws of God. God sent His only begotten Son to offer us Salvation. Nevertheless we must seek God in prayer and ask Him for the forgiveness of our sins. A Christian is one who has received the "Gift of God"—that is one who has allowed God to come into his life. There must be peace between the soul and God. One Christian is mysteriously born again. Good deeds are not enough. Added to this there must be faith and patience. When we look to God and not to self then we are showing a Christian spirit.

Appeal to All.

Everyday our consistency with the will of God should be shown. The Christian spirit should be made manifest everywhere, in the home, in business, and in all affairs with which we come in contact. A Christian will be honest and diligent in toil; will remember that there is one Eye upon him always; will be just and will face sorrow without complaining. Also a Christian recognizes the mastery of Jesus Christ. He is aware that his talents, his energy and his substance are Gods, that he is in the world to work for God, and that his occupation is a means of serving humanity.

The speaker closed by stating that the Christian life should appeal to one and all, and that we should not allow anything to keep us from enjoying its blessedness.

17,000 MEN LAND IN ELEVEN DAYS.

HALIFAX, March 29.—From Mar. 17th more than 759 officers and 16,780 other ranks have been disembarked at this port and sent to points in Eastern and Western Canada. This has necessitated the use of 46 trains, for which 851 coaches were needed. Some idea of the enormity of this transportation feat may be gathered from the fact that these trains end to end would reach a distance of nine miles.

8th Line Won From 6th Line

On Saturday night at the Water street alleys, the 8th line Otonabee five-pin team clashed with the 6th line boys. The 8th line boys emerged from the fray with a 16 pin margin. The 6th line boys gave them a merry chase all the way rolling up a total of 1969 against 1985 for the victors. J. Porter for the 8th line, had high count of 511, while C. Porter came second with 467. For the 6th line F. Hope and F. Hall were the leaders with 440 and 423 for totals. The 4th line Otonabee have challenged the 8th line and the match will likely be played on Saturday night next.

Prince of Wales Will See Fight

(United Press.)

LONDON, March 31.—The Prince of Wales and Prince Albert are expected to be interested spectators at the National Sporting Club to-night when Jimmy Wilde, British flyweight champion, and Joe Lynch, American bantam weight meet in a scheduled fifteen round bout.

Both Lynch and Wilde expressed confidence, the former grimly and the latter gaily.

"I wouldn't have agreed to fight Lynch if I thought he would beat me," laughed Wilde.

Empress of Britain Docked This Morning

A New Disembarkation Record Was Established To-day.

(Special to Examiner.)

ST. JOHN'S, N. B., March 31. — That a new disembarkation record would be established, was the indication to-day as the soldiers who arrived here last night on the Empress of Britain were hurried ashore to cars and rushed off over the C. P. R. lines to their destinations.

At 8 o'clock the officials boarded the steamer. At 9.40 o'clock the first two trains were en route to Toronto. At 10.10 the third special got away to Kingston and Ottawa, and at 10.40 the fourth started for London and Hamilton. At noon every man had left St. John's.

The Empress had the largest number of soldiers that have arrived at this port on any trip since the boys started returning home. There were 97 officers and 2,— other ranks. The steamer encountered fair weather. One soldier from Ontario developed pneumonia and died on Saturday as the steamer was nearing the Bay of Fundy.

Marvellous Picture At the Royal To-night and Following Days

To-night is the first performance at the Royal under the control of the Paramount Theatres Limited, and a programme of extraordinary merit has been arranged. The feature picture is Victor Hugo's masterpiece, Les Miserables, in which William Farnum appears as Jean Valjean.

The picture is well termed "stupendous." It is the only real screening of the remarkable story of the conflict of man with humanity and humanity's half barbarous laws.

In the character of Jean Valjean, Mr. Farnum gives a portrayal that leaves one half feeling that he walked out of the book. The hard side of the man is shown by all his revengeful feeling against the world that caused him to serve nineteen years at hard labour for stealing a loaf of bread for his starving relatives. And the softer side, when he, having changed his name and become wealthy, is lending a helping hand to every one around him. Then, too, the wonderful spirit that makes him renounce the few joys he has had in life is shown in remarkable bits of acting by this master artist, William Farnum.

For this production William Fox had built in Fort Lee, N.J., a cross-section of streets in Paris. Nothing has been omitted to make the entire production realistic and true to Victor Hugo's conception.

Those who have read the book, or who know anything of Jean Valjean, are in for a rare treat to-night, to-morrow and Wednesday at the Royal Theatre, added to which are other good music.

Will Oppose Daylight Saving

Street Railway Men and Postal Employees not in Favour of Scheme

Two widely circulated petitions against daylight saving will be presented at the special meeting of the City Council this evening from the Street Railway employes and from the Post Office employes. The motor men claim that at present they find it necessary to rise at 3.30 and that they find it impossible to adapt themselves to the new schedule for retiring. They also claim that the revised time is unfair to the children who likewise are unable to get the proper amount of sleep.

...O MAINTAIN CLOSE ECONOMIC RELATIONS

(United Press)

BUDAPEST, April 1. — M. Fenyes, a representative of the Hungarian Soviet Government in Vienna, told the representative of a Vienna newspaper that our economic relations with German Austria must be closest possible it was learned here to-day.

What Soviets Will Demand

Freedom Claimed for All Political Prisoners.

(United Press.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

BERLIN, April 1. — The general ...trike declared in the Rhineland by ...he Soviet for to-day is regarded as ...he possible beginning of a new cam...paign to overthrow the present gov...ernment. Its full extent will not be ...certain before it actually gets under ...way.

Among the demands being made by ...the Soviets are:

Disarmament of all troops.

Arming of the proletariat.

Freedom for all political prison...ers.

Workmen in Berlin were irate to...day over the government's arrest of Ernest Daumig, leader of the city's Soviets. He is the most important Radical leader next to George Ledebour, and was largely responsible for the organization which overthrew the Kaiser.

He is charged with instigating the Spartacan uprisings in January. The Soviets claim that his arrest was due to the government's fear of further opposition.

Something Motor Men Should Know

About the Duffus Garage, its Scope and its Battery of Sales Service.

The Duffus Garage Management of this city have perceived the folly of selling a man a car only when they might just as easily sell him a few other things as well. Not content with being the largest dealers in Ford cars in the Midland district, and a good many other districts as well, the Duffus Garage handles also Gray-Dort cars and one-ton Ford trucks, and Fordson tractors, and are distributors for Ford cars and ...anuine Ford parts to all garages throughout the district. A fine line of tires, accessories and supplies are stocked in large quantities, and a large repair shop is kept busy with facilities for handling any kind of car trouble. Half a dozen experienced salesmen and stock men to interview the public looking for good service ready to help you to remember your wants, are on the job.

One of a number of interesting features on the floor of the Duffus Garage show room is an exhibition structure of the Gray-Dort chassis, showing all the internal parts and methods of working. What keen motoring brains have done to plan each tiny detail so that the whole will be a piece of consummate mechanical genius, may be inspected by every visitor.

JULIA ARTHUR AT THE GRAND

Men Opposed to Act as Firing Line.

So revolting to the human mind is the memory of the murder of Edith Cavell, the British Red Cross nurse, that difficulty was experienced in obtaining a number of actors to play the part of a firing line in the Messrs. Alive to the details of the real Cavell story, Anthony Paul Kelly, the author of "The Cavell Case," wrote in ...for a group of murderous looking ...men who form the firing ...which kills Edith Cavell. All ...them were opposed to playing such an unsympathetic part, until Mr. Adolfi told them that they were going to help make the name of Edith Cavell immortal.

THE DANZIG QUESTION

Trouble May Result Unless Allies Send Polish Army to Warsaw.

THE HUN ARMY

(By Frank J. Taylor.)

BERLIN, April 1. — The Danzig question has become a most important issue in Germany. The government has taken the position that serious trouble may result unless the allies send General Hallerin's Polish army to Warsaw by some other route than Danzig. Anti-Polish demonstrations have occurred in Berlin, Weimar, Brestau and Danzig.

The old threat of Bolshevism is reiterated, many conservative leaders declaring that if the government gives in to the Allies a new radical uprising may be precipitated.

The German army commission has suggested that Polish troops land in Stettin, Libau or Koenigsberg, instead of Danzig. The situation in the latter city is said to be critical, owing to the antipathy between the German and the Polish residents.

The Germans there declare they will resist every effort to make Danzig Polish.

PREPARED TO REVOLT.

Americans returning from Danzig report the Polish element is prepared to revolt and declare the city Polish as soon as Hallers' troops land. The reports from various sources agree that it is impossible to assure the Poles a quiet passage through Danzig, so long as both elements are at swords points. The Germans anticipate the trouble will lead to actual warfare with Poland if the Poles attempt to seize the port.

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg spent last week personally inspecting the Polish front. His army probably totals 150,000. It is greatly outnumbered by the Poles, but the Germans are believed to be more effective in actual fighting, owing to their superior equipment and greater experience.

Ready for the Flight Overseas

Big British Flying Ship Has Arrived at St. John's.

(United Press.)

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., April 1.— Pilot Hawker, of the Sopwith airplane, with which an attempt will be made to fly from Newfoundland to Ireland, declared to-day he expected to start not later than April 10.

Both Hawker and his navigator are very reticent, but they express absolute confidence in the success of the venture. They feel sure the Sopwith plane will be the first to fly across the Atlantic.

The machine was taken to the flying field in sections, and now awaits the arrival of mechanics who are en route here, and who were expected to be on the ground some time before the pilot arrived. They are aboard the steamship Kyle, which has been jammed in the ice two miles off Low Point ever since March 24. There is no immediate indication of the vessel being released unless the wind changes, and this will delay the return of the airplane considerably, but will not cause the start of the flight to be postponed to later than April 10, Hawker insists.

Captain Robert Bartlett Plans Flight in June.

(United Press.)

LONDON, April 1. — Captain Robt. Bartlett, of New York, plans to fly to the North Pole in June, starting from a base at Cape Columbia, it was announced to-day.

Bartlett, who is 44 years old, started his polar explorations as a member of the Peary expedition in 1897. He headed the Canadian government expedition in 1913-14, when he crossed on the ice to Siberia.

The Municipal Elections in the City of Chicago

One of Bitterest Fights in History—Six Candidates for Mayor—the Prohibition Issue.

(Canadian Press.)

CHICAGO, April 1.—Men and women balloted for Mayor and other city officials to-day after a campaign said to have been the most bitter in the history of the municipality.

With six candidates in the field for Mayor, partisan, religious and racial hatred flamed high during the campaign, which ended last night with riotous scenes in the Central District, which area police details had difficulty in controlling at times.

The candidates for Mayor are: William Hale Thompson (Republican), incumbent; Robert M. Sweitzer (Democrat), County Clerk; Maclay Poyne, Independent (Democrat), States Attorney; John Fitzpatrick (Labour), President Chicago Federation of Labour; John M. Collins (Socialist); Adolph S. Carm (Socialist Labour).

Each of the four leading candidates claims his election to-day, although political forecasters say they are at a loss to make anything like credible predictions.

Among the propositions appearing on the "little ballot" accompanying the Mayoralty ballot is the proposition, "shall Chicago become an anti-saloon territory." This proposition was not allowed on the ballot at the last election.

Big Programme At the Grand

Yesterday marked the ... inauguration of the new policy of ... vaudeville and de luxe pictures that Mr. A. J. Small is putting into force at the Grand Opera House, for the first three days of each week, and the quality of the programme and the crowded houses that attended both performances yesterday indicate unmistakably that the new system is going to be a great, popular success. Last night's bill, which will be repeated to-night and to-morrow night, with matinees on each day, proved to be one of the finest programmes that has been offered in this city. The feature film showed the famous Canadian stage celebrity, Julia Arthur, in "The Cavell" case, a thrilling picture that held the audience from start to finish. Three splendid vaudeville acts were included in the programme, and if they can be accepted as a criterion of the class of artists Mr. Small is going to send here, there will be a series of treats for Peterborough play-goers.

The three Shirleys were seen in a musical act that was most delightful. The saxaphone selections of the trio were splendidly rendered. Nadony, billed as the "Oriental Wonder," scored heavily in an unusual juggling act and Backe, Jewett and Backe have a comedy singing, and educated pony act that is a most pleasing success. The pony does everything but talk. In addition there is Charlie Chaplin in "A Deckless Fling," a special comedy and the screen magazine, which completes a bill of good things. Under the new policy seats can be reserved for the evening performance, a convenience that will be appreciated, as it enables patrons to avoid the crowd by ordering seats in advance.

OPINION OF AN ENGINEER

It Would Be Improper for the Council to Accept Tenders On Independent Plans.

WHOSE INTEREST FIRST?

"It would be most improper for the Peterborough Council to accept a tender for the Hunter street bridge based on plans and specifications prepared by a contractor himself, or which was prepared for him by an engineer he engaged independent of the Council." This was the statement of a Toronto engineer who was interviewed by the Examiner for an unbiased opinion of the local problem and who affirmed that he was neutral toward the men who might be interested in the planning or construction of the bridge.

"I have no brief for Mr. Barber," he said, "I am merely giving you a professional opinion that may appeal to the citizens and the Council of Peterborough. Mr. Barber is a general engineer. He has probably built as many steel bridges as concrete. He has an excellent record and stands high in the profession. If there is a good reason for considering a steel bridge in spite of the fact that he was employed to design one of concrete, then the decent thing for the Council to do is to instruct Mr. Barber to prepare alternative plans. This of course should have been done at the outset if there was any question that the Council might change its mind in the end. If there was indecision in regard to the material of which it should be built, the engineer should have been asked for alternative plans with a report on comparative costs. But the Council first decided to build a concrete bridge.

Question of Motives.

It would not only be most improper to accept any tender for a bridge designed by the contractor himself, but it would be a poor business and highly undesirable. These tenders, as I understand the situation, are not submitted at the Council's request. They have been designed not according to any instructions from the city, but principally for the purpose of getting the work. I will leave it to the Council and the citizens whether they consider this a proper practice, and also whether such plans have been prepared in the interests of the city or for the advantage of the tenderers who adopt this procedure.

"It will be obvious even to the layman that an engineer can take a set of plans and cut the heart out of them to lay out a cheaper bridge. The phase of the Peterborough case that I am most interested in is the reported action of engineers and contractors who ignore the city's plans and come along with their own plans and accompanying bids. If the Council had officially sanctioned this competition the features that are repugnant to me might be somewhat diminished, but I think I have said enough on this point, and after all it is a problem for Peterborough to decide for itself. If they choose to accept any tender no matter how it is submitted that is their business.

There is another phase to this case. Suppose that in the beginning you had ordered Mr. Barber to prepare plans for two bridges, one of steel and the other of concrete. They would surely have been similar in their general design and plan. That is, they would have been of the same length and width and built to carry the same live weights. The Council would have required the same qualities of workmanship and design. One bridge would not have been shorter or narrower than the other, neither would one have provided for a single street car line and the other for two. The Council would have defined these general specifications. But under the present competition that we know is going on, the situation seems to have developed into a general free for all, and it must

Farmers Are Offering Good Wages to Returned Soldiers

From Forty to Fifty Dollars a Month and Accommodation for Family is Offered By Some—Big Demand for Help.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, April 1.—"The farmers throughout Ontario were never so anxious for labour as this season of the year at any previous time," was the emphatic declaration of Rev. J. R. Miller, Superintendent of the Provincial Labour Bureau.

"I have on file between 500 and 600 requests for farmers," continued Mr. Miller, "and many of them in writing state that they would be only too glad to hire a returned soldier at $40 or $50 and provide accommodation for his family if married.

"The need is evidently very great and seems to be growing, and if people really need work I do not know of any inducement which could surpass some of the offers that are being made by farmers through the province."

Baby Welfare Clinic at the Motor Show

An Interesting Feature of the Motor Show.

An interesting feature in connection with the Motor Show next week, is to be a Baby Welfare Clinic and Exhibit, which will be held each afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock in a room set aside for that purpose.

The Baby Welfare Exhibit is being put on by the Provincial Board of Health and promises to be very interesting and instructive. Besides many sets of posters on Infant care, School Hygiene, Tuberculosis, etc., there will be shown a model layette for infant, an outfit for a toddler, and many photographs illustrative of Child Welfare Work in Canadian Cities.

In addition to this, there will be a free picture show each day.

Naturally in the midst of all these interesting things for babies, we would expect to find—not a mere man—but a good, capable, motherly woman to explain everything and answer all questions, and here again we will not be disappointed, for in charge of all this will be a fully qualified nurse, a graduate of Toronto General Hospital, Miss Knox. Miss Knox will also demonstrate how to properly bathe and clothe and feed a baby.

Then as to the Clinic which will be perhaps, the most interesting part, for every mother who has a baby two years old and under is asked to bring it to the Clinic. A doctor and a nurse will be in charge and each baby will be weighed, measured, and examined, and a report given to the mother.

Each mother will also receive a copy of the Baby Book, which is in itself worth coming for.

Watch the papers for further particulars.

New Electrical Business On Charlotte Street

One of the stores on the new Braund Block, No. 188 1-2 Charlotte street, has been leased by Mr. W. R. Cowain, the well known electrical contractor recently of the firm of Grant, Thorpe and Cowain. The store was formally opened to-day, and ready for business with the snap of a going concern.

Mr. Cowain is not a new comer or a stranger to the Peterborough public. He brings with him into his new enterprise a valuable reputation for expert electrical work in connection with the installation of large and important contracts both in Peterborough and elsewhere as well as for skilled service in the general electric field.

The new store which Mr. Cowain has had fitted up for his business, is well lighted and specially arranged for carrying full stocks of electrical home and business needs. These will include the most modern electrical devices, heating and lighting fixtures, electric lamps and fixtures, and all the other handy expedients that add so much to the refinement of the home and the convenience of business.

Mr. Cowain will be distributor for the Canadian General Electric Company's motors and other goods, and will take on all descriptions of electrical contracts and maintenance of service. Further announcements will be made shortly by Mr. Cowain.

THE WEATHER

This morning's temperature was down to 5 degrees above zero, and with a keen, cutting north wind. Heavy snow has fallen over the eastern part of Ontario, and there is again good sleighing in many places. In this district the sleighing this winter has not been of long duration. Last winter (a year ago) we had 117 days of good sleighing, not counting days when it was but poor. This past winter the days of good sleighing only numbered 35, but there were 64 days of poor sleighing. Taken together the total was below the average. Milder conditions are again coming eastward.—W. Too Many Wives Foundation for Contest of Will

NEW YORK, March 29.—The statement made by Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell in his will that he had a wife living in Australia when he married Mrs Emma Lynas Tyrrell in this country has resulted in legal proceedings to prevent the distribution of his estate George H. and William T. S. Lyons of Logansport, Ind., brothers of the second wife, took preliminary steps in Surrogate's Court yesterday to contest the physician's will on the ground their sister was not legally married and to prevent an estate of $35,000 left by her, passing to a young woman who inherited it from Dr. Tyrrell.

Mrs. Lynas-Tyrrell was an invalid for ten years prior to her death in November, 1917. She bequeathed he estate to the physician, whom she believed was her lawful husband. Last July Dr. Tyrrell died, and his will made known both marriages. He explained having left Australia after the disappearance of his wife, Mrs. Elisabeth Tyrrell.

Five years after his arrival in this country he and Mrs. Lynas Tyrrell were married. Later he learned his first wife was alive. In each will he bequeathed $100 to his wives, leaving the residuary estate to "My dear little friend, Miss May Cleary, of No. 1,142 Lind avenue, the Bronx." His business, known as the Ideal Company, he left to a son by his first marriage, Ernest Alfred Tyrrell, of Broughton Park, Australia.

According to the brothers of Mrs. Lynas-Tyrrell, the legacy by Miss Cleary includes $35,000 inherited by the physician. They contend that this money should be awarded to them as next of kin of Mrs. Lynas-Tyrrell, and quote the physician's will to the effect that their sister was mentally unsound for ten years.

Stern Judge Says He Will Rid Newark of Vampires

Frank A. Boettner Has a Scheme for Establishing a "Vampire Gallery."

NEW YORK, March 29.—Flirting by women on the streets in Newark, N.J., is now under the ban. Police Judge Frank A. Boettner has clamped the lid down tight, and he is going to keep it down, he says. What is more, he is going to have a "vampire gallery" wherein will hang the pictures of all the known "vamps" in that city, and if any of these are caught at flirtations they will bring down upon themselves the wrath of the Court.

In defining what a "vampire" is, Judge Boettner consulted the best authorities and then, after diagnosing the situation, gave the following description:

"A vampire is a woman who flirts on the streets with men, bleaches her hair, camouflages her face and disguises herself with clothes and gives wrong names, but is unable to change her eyes or dimples."

The last is very important, for upon this rests the foundation of the Judge's scheme to rid the city of "vamps" and make his "vampire gallery" an institution of worth, for, says the Judge, "there is one thing these women can't do, and that is, change their eyes and dimples so that they can't be recognized from a photograph. My idea, which I am going to put up to the Director of Public Safety, is simply to photograph all women brought into my court on charges of flirting and leading men away from their families, and then when they come back a second time, if they do, I can make the punishment fit the crime. The lid is on and will stay on. The women flirts must go.

"Judges can't remember every face they see. A good looking vampire trips up before me and says she's Marie Brown, Susie Smith or Jennie Jones, and I send her away for a month, but when she comes back again she's Somebody-else and instead of wearing a tam-o'-shanter she is all decorated up in a picture straw.

"Now, will you tell me how in the world a judge can remember them all? You ask them if they've ever been in court before and they say, 'Decidedly no!' and with their names fictitious and their hair bleached or brunetted there is no chance to find out anything about them.

"It may be an easy matter for a photograph to be taken of every vampire brought into the Newark police courts. That would solve the problem."

FOR FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

John Devitt recommends Vinol to Create Strength and Vitality.

Marlton, N.J.— "I am 69 years of age and after a severe sickness, was in a weak, run-down condition, Vinol has built me up and made me strong, so now I feel real well again, and I can recommend it to others for such conditions."—John M. Devitt.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Mr. Devitt's case, is because it contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, the very elements needed to build up a weakened, run-down system, make rich, red blood and create strength. It is perfectly wonderful what it does for old people.

Here's T. Longboat Bobbing Up Again

Not Dead and Wants His Troubles Straightened Out by Tom Flanagan.

TORONTO, April 1.—"Tom Longboat dead?" ejaculated Tom Flanagan, when the query was put to him recently. "Not so as you could notice it, though he has been rumored dead a dozen times. Why here's a letter from him, which came in Tuesday," and Flanagan fished out the Indian's latest communique.

It came from Belgium and was mostly a tirade about some one who had told his wife that he had taken unto himself a Belgian or a French wife.

"There is nothing to it," writes Tom to Tom. "You stood up for me when I was married so you can just get busy and straighten this thing out."

Longboat goes on to say that he is studying in a "Khaki University" there and when he lands at New York, as he expects to do shortly, that he will go to a Philadelphia college to complete his education. A United States man, who took a fancy to him, is going to pay the shot, Tom writes.

The belts of the more frail gowns are often tucked.

Juice of Lemons! How to Make Skin White and Beautiful

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as sallowness, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier.

Just try it. Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful to smoothen rough, red hands.

A Farewell Banquet Was Tendered to Mr. John Allan

Mr. Allan Has Accepted Position of Organist of the First Baptist Church, Brantford.

THE SPEECHES

On the occasion of his resignation as organist of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, which position he has held for the past seven years, and his acceptance of the position of organist of the First Baptist church in Brantford, Mr. John Allan was the guest of honour at a banquet given last evening in the Empress Hotel by the organists and musicians of the city. Since coming to Peterborough Mr. and Mrs. Allan and Mrs. Maurice Park (nee Dorothy Allan) have aroused great enthusiasm not only by their musical attainments, but also by their assistance in every branch of patriotic work during the war. Mr. and Mrs. Allan's departure from the city is a loss not only to the musical world but to the general public.

The Guests.

The guests last evening included Mr. and Mrs. Allan, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Park, Mr. John Crane (chairman), Mr. J. H. Renwick, Mrs. George King, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Parsons, Master Harvey King, Mr. George King, Mrs. Kenyon, Mr. Wand, Mrs. Wand, Mr. Kenyon, Mrs. Devey, Mr. Frank Pratt, Miss Etta Kemp, Mr. R. J. Devey, Mrs. Greenslade, Mr. Smith, Mr. Asa Huycke, Miss Helen MacLaren, Mr. Coleman, Miss M. Flowers, Mr. Rupert Gliddon, Miss Ida Sanderson, Mr. J. Wearing, Mrs. J. H. Renwick, Mr. Chandler, Mrs. Gliddon, Mr. Naish, Mr. Barry, Mr. Treneer, Mrs. Nicholl, Mr. Walter Stocker, Mr. Greenslade, M. Nichol, Mrs. Chandler, Aledrman J. J. Turner and Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

Short Addresses.

After a sumptuous repast served in a manner characteristic of the management of the hotel, short addresses were made by some of the musicians, expressing the deep regret generally felt in the city at the departure of the guest of honour. Mr. John Crane, who acted as chairman, after expressing the appreciation of the city of the benefit Mr. and Mrs. Allan have been in Peterborough, urged cooperation amongst the musicians. He said that last evening's entertainment was the first real agthering of the musicians in the city and hoped that through organization they might in future get in touch with each other. He proposed a toast to the King.

A Hero.

In proposing a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Allan and Mrs. Park, Mr. R. J. Devey, who was styled By Mr. Crane as the 'Dean of Organists' in the city, wished Mr. and Mrs. Allan health, wealth and prosperity in their new fields. Besides being one of the foremost Canadian musicians, Mr. Allan is, he said, a hero, "anyone who can hold the position of organist and struggle on is a hero," he said. He concluded by a brief sketch of the splendid influence Mr. Allan has been during the past seven years in the city.

Presented Bouquet.

At this point, on behalf of the guests, Mrs. Allan was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses by Master Harvey King, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. George King. She was then called upon by the chairman for a few words and thanked the assembly for the honour shown Mr. Allan, which she shared. After urging co-operation amongst the musicians, she concluded by saying that a lovlier place than St. Paul's church could not be found and that she felt in leaving Peterborough she was leaving many warm friends. She extended a cordial invitation to any of the assembly who might be in Brantford to visit her in their new home.

Staunchest Friends.

Mr. Allan, in a short address, said that he felt it an honour to be the guest of so large and representative a gathering. It was, he said, quite a unique experience to meet so many musicians round a table, as musicians are on the wheel, not a fraternal order and felt that such gatherings would be a great benefit to the fraternity. He thought that it would be a wise move to have all musicians and choir masters meet frequently, as with such gatherings the different musicians could become known to one another and exchange helpful views. He concluded by expressing his keen regret at leaving the city and St. Paul's, of which church the people are numbered as some of his staunchest friends.

"Toast to Music."

Mr. Joseph Wearing, in proposing the toast to music, said that he felt he voiced the sentiment of every citizen of Peterborough when he said that the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Allan was a great loss to the city. He told of the debt the city and county owed to Mr. and Mrs. Allan and Mrs. Park for their unsifling patriotic efforts. In conclusion he said that while the loss sustained by the city in the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Allan is inestimable, we have still cause to rejoice in the fact that Mrs. Park, who could take her place with any singer in the Dominion, is to remain with us.

Mr. Treneer responded to the toast.

Three Minute Speeches.

Three minute speeches, all expressing the same sentiment, the keen regret of the city in the departure of the guests of honour, were made by Mr. G. Chandler, representing St. John's church, Mr. Treneer from St. Andrew's, Mr. Asa Huycke from Murray street Baptitat church, Mr. Gliddon representing the Conservatory, and Mr. Renwick representing George street Methodist church.

Colonel Mills, who was to have represented the Band, was unavoidably absent.

Musical Programme.

During the evening a short musical programme was given by Mrs. Park, Mrs. King and Mr. George Chandler, each contributing much appreciated solos. At the conclusion of the evening the musicians formed a circle and sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The New Home Treatment for Ugly, Hairy Growths

(Boudoir Secrets)

Here is a simple, yet very effective method for removing hair and fuzz from the face, neck and arms: Cover the objectionable hairs with a paste made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. Leave this on for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. No pain or inconveniece attends this treatment, but results will be certain if you are sure to get real delatone.

Tyler Declares He Was In Los Angeles Day of Bank Murders

Man Held in Connection With Brooklyn Slaying Gives Out "Complete Alibi."

NEW YORK, April 1. — Declaring that he had a "complete alibi," Roy Tyler, who is being held in connection with the killing of two officials at the East Brooklyn Savings Bank, and the theft of $13,000 December 13 last, stuck to his story under severe questioning by Harry E. Lewis, District Attorney for Kings.

"I have only one statement to make," he is reported to have said. "I have a complete alibi. I have to account for my whereabouts from December 9 until December 16 last year. On December 16 I was in Los Angeles, bound, New Mexico. As to December 13, I was at the Harvey House in Seligman, Ariz. My wife was with me. I was registered under the name of F. H. Wiegand. We were with a married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Rose, who were travelling on their honeymon. My wife and I were travelling in an automobile, and so were they. That's how we met."

Tyler was described by District Attorney Lewis as the "coldest and calmest and cleverest" man he had ever seen. Police department officials of long experinece, the District Attorney said, admitted that they had not seen the equal of Tyler.

Although several persons looked at Tyler, they failed to identify him. District Attorney Lewis refused to discuss this mater, and would not even make known who had been summoned to look at Tyler. It is known, however, that George McCullough, who drove the taxicab used by the robbers and several of the bank officials who witnessed the crime, are yet to be given a chance to make an identification.

District Attorney Lewis is now engaged in the work of checking up the alibi provided by Tyler, and is of the opinion that this will require at least a week. After being taken to Manhattan Police Headquarters in the morning for the line-up, Tyler was taken back to Brooklyn, and after a long session of questioning by the District Attorney was lodged in a cell in the Raymond Street Jail.

Mrs. Tyler and Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Harding, who accompanied Tyler on his trip from St. Louis, where the latter was taken into custody, are not in custody. Both Mrs. Tyler and Mrs. Harding, who were questioned by the District Attorney, were removed to a hospital suffering with influenza.

Landslide Kills Railroad Engineer

Mr. Allen Fraser of the C.N.R., Killed on Sunday in the Yellowhead Pass.

EDMONTON, ALTA., April 1. — Allen T. Fraser, 45, chief engineer of the Canadian Northern Railway, was killed on Sunday by a snowslide, near Mount Robson, in the Yellowhead Pass through the Rockies.

Mr. Fraser's train was stopped by a slide and he went ahead with a section gang to make an investigation. Another slide came and buried them all. The section men were dug out. All were practically uninjured, but Mr. Fraser was dead when they reached him.

The very flat, round collar is attractive.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice a letter on page 9 of your issue for this evening (Monday, 31st March, 1919), headed "Obstructionists Spell Delay" and signed "Taxpayer," and which seems to be an "echo" only, the heading might perhaps have been more appropriate to the letter had it read, "Delay Spells Obstruction." The "Kaiser" used a similar headline a few years ago, and used it both ways in his "Prussian Progress"—"backwards"—but we want to progress "forwards."

I think I have already dealt with his points, in so far as I as I am concerned. I am not free to mention names of aldermen with whom I have discussed in the past many of these published notes of mine, but they must be familiar to some of them, as also my offers to work as a co-opted member on any committee whatsoever when I could be of any service, neither shall I consider myself free to reveal his (taxpayer's) name, or identity, if he will reveal himself to me.

It is certainly no dishonour to be a "taxpayer," but whether the man or the name is the more honoured in the association, I am not in a position to say, but I shall be pleased to meet him and discuss matters of mutual interest.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

Telephone Notice

In the matter of long distance telephone service, the confused situation re daylight saving offers opportunity for no end of trouble and inconvenience.

In making appointments for long distance conversations, unless the parties are clear as to what time—standard or daylight savings—prevails in both towns, confusion is inevitable.

The peak load of long distance telephone traffic occurs between the hours of 9 and 12 in the morning and 2 and 5 in the afternoon, the great majority of busines calls being during these periods. Suppose Brown in a standard time community calls Jones in a daylight saving city at, say 11 o'clock, he finds Jones has gone to lunch. On returning to his office, Jones learns of the call and at once tries to get Brown, but finds that it is now his lunch hour, and that he must wait for him. Before they can have their talk, two full hours have elapsed. In other words the long-distance telephone-day, already short, is reduced two hours and congestion is probable.

The Federal authorities, having decided against the adoption of daylight savings, night rates for long distance service must be based on standard time.

NO TRUTH IN RUMOUR.

That Pleasure Boats will be Taxed This Summer.

A rumour that canoes will be taxed $10 and motor launches $25 this summer, has been recently heard on the streets, but the local authorities informed the Examiner that there is no truth in it whatever.

The report has been circulated with a completeness of detail that was in itself sufficient to arouse suspicion. At any rate the local officers of the Dominion and Provincial governments state that they have received no intimation of such a tax nor have they even chard of it from any source.

The round button hole grows more popular.

Two Million Hours Lost By the Passengers

Railways Explain to War Board Why Daylight Saving Was Effected on Railroads.

OTTAWA, April 1. —The Dominion Railway Commission to-day heard officials of the Railway War Board and the Railway Companies explain why they adopted daylight saving time. The argument being generally put forth is that both convenience and safety of passengers and freight on Canadian lines made it necessary to fall in line with the United States.

Secretary Neal, representing the Railway War Board, emphasized the difficulties in international traffic and figured out that the maintenance of different time from United States would mean a loss of over two million hours by passengers on Canadian lines. Experts agreed also, he said, it would be distinctly dangerous to operate trains with different time in States from Canada.

After hearing the officials of the C.P.R. and Grand Trunk, as well as Mr. W. M Neal, representing the Canadian Railway War Board, Sir Henry Drayton adjourned the hearing at one o'clock (daylight saving time) until half past two this afternoon, when other witnesses will be heard.

The Commissioners have received telegrams from about thirty-five municipalities, cities and towns in the country, endorsing daylight saving.

Hungarians Want Allied Intervention

Ancient City of Goths and Visgoths is in Grip of Terrorists—Ten Days' Supply of Food.

(Canadian Press.)

PRAGUE, April 1.— The Communists have set up a reign of terror in Budapest. The stocks of food in the Hungarian capital are sufficient for only ten days and only three hundred head of cattle are coming into the city daily instead of the normal 3,500. Famine is feared, while the coal situation is also grave.

The population of Budapest hopes for intervention by the Allies.

Standard Time For the Grocers

Some of the Grocers Would Rather Have the Extra Hour in the Evening.

The Mayor at last night's meeting of the City Council stated that the new Daylight Saving measure although it had been passed by the city was not compulsory. The Council could recommend it to citizens and would advance the town clock one hour but the people would not be forced to advance their own clocks.

The Daylight Saving project will not affect the grocery stores which are compelled under a city by-law to close at seven o'clock.

Some of the outlying grocery stores contend that most of their business is carried on in the evening and it is altogether likely that they will continue to operate under "farmer's time."

Boers Will Demand Independent State

Delegation From South Africa Will Ask Peace Conference For Independence—Delegates Include Former Boer Generals.

(Canadian Press.)

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Dutch steamship "Bawean" arrived here today from Capetown, South Africa, with a delegation of Boers en route to London and the Peace Conference for the purpose, it is said, of laying before the Government and the Paris Conference their right to self determination in setting up a republic. The delegates include General I. B. M. Hertzog, Frederick Williams Beyers and others.

The Toronto Markets

TORONTO, April 1.—Toronto Cattle Market. Receipts fair, trade generally steady, choice export cattle $14.00 to $15.00, choice butcher $10.75 to $13.00, medium butcher cattle, $9.50 to $10.50, ewes $11.00 to $14.00, lambs $18.50 to $19.50, hogs, fed and watered, $20.00, hogs f.o.b., $18.00 to $19.25, calves, $14.50 to $16.00.

President Assumes Blame for Delay In Peace Conference

No One Country is Responsible For Delay—Lloyd George Will Stay to the End.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 1.—President Wilson to-day explained he was willing to accept his share of responsibility for the Peace Conference delays. He was careful to point out that the slowness of the negotiations was not due to any single country or its representatives.

Notwithstanding the delay in reaching an agreement on the preliminary peace treaty, Premier Lloyd George does not intend to return to England before the questions are adjusted in spite of his desire to attend the closing meeting of the British Labour conference.

3,500 RETURN TO PRISON TO AVOID FIGHTING BOLSHEVISTS

HARBIN, March 29.—Rather than serve at the front against the Bolsheviki, 3,500 Roumanian prisoners of war, who had been released by the All-Russian government at Omsk surrendered their arms and returned to prison, a despatch from Irkutsk says. The Roumanians also refused to guard the railways in Siberia.

Board of Trade Meeting To-night

Board is in Favour of Daylight Saving Scheme.

Peterborough is evidently unanimously in favour of daylight saving. The Board of Trade, through the several sections of which it is composed, including Merchants, Trades and Labour Council, Manufacturers' Association and others, made a thorough investigation, and yesterday Mr. J. J. Turner, President of the Board of Trade, sent the following message to the Hon. Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada:

"The Peterborough Board of Trade, reflecting the general sentiment of all classes in the City of Peterborough, strongly favour daylight saving as adopted by the Canadian railways, and desire to express the earnest hope that your Honorable Board will make tthe order general."

The Board of Commissioners holds a session to-day to hear several deputations, and will doubtless decide the question in favour of daylight saving.

Much interest is being taken in the annual meeting of the Board of Trade, which will be held this evening at eight o'clock in the new rooms of the Board in the Bradburn building, at the corner of George and Simcoe street. It is expected that there will be a large attendance, and a representative attendance of members and delegates from all of the allied associations.

"Flo-Flo" at Grand Next Saturday

A sense of humor distributed generously among the "Perfect 36" chorus girls—is one of the reasons why John Gore's "Flo-Flo" which comes to the Grand Opera House, Saturday April 5, Matinee and evening, packed the Cort Theatre in New York with enthusiastic throngs nightly for months.

The eccentric dancing of the comedy chorus which is a novelty, has been the tobacco in the delightful offering of lovely lyrics, clever lines and lacey lingerie, which captivates the fancy of the Broadway theatregoers.

John Cort has given his chorus an attractive setting in the Bride Shop. His cast comprises only artists of established reputation and popularity The story concerns the matrimonial intrigue of a bogus Count, an American heiress and a rising young man from Oshkosh, Wis., also the beautiful mannequin Flo-Flo, who exhibits corsets in the establishment of Mosher and Simpson, proprietors of the Bride Shop and purveyors of lingerie to the social elect. The principal roles are taken by Louise Kelly, Jere Delaney, Carl L. George, William Cummings, Rose Southern, Mildred Beverly, Augustus Buell, Rhea Norton, William Burton Burns, Edward Lynn and others of prominence and the "Perfect Thirty-six" Chorus. An augmented orchestra assures an artistic rendition of the delightfully tuneful score, Silvio Hein has given to "Flo-Flo". Seats on sale Thursday.

The Foe Announces Official Policy on Peace Terms

Will Only Act in Accordance With Wilson's Fourteen Points.

EXPECT MORE SPEED IN PARIS THIS WEEK

LONDON, April 1.—The department of the German Foreign Office having charge of the peace negotiations has reached a decision as to is attitude toward the negotiations, a German wireless message says. The department has decided the German Government should act only in accordance with President Wilson's fourteen points.

Final Decisions Expected.

The probability that important final decisions will be taken this week by the peace conference conferees is pointed out by the French press today. Dwelling upon the French claims the newspapers reiterate their arguments that these are just and legitimate and absolutely necessary for the safety of France and likewise of the world.

The Echo de Paris claims to know that in order to insure the security of the French frontier it will be made obligatory upon Germany to destroy her forts on the right bank of the Rhine, with the allies occupying the left bank until the war indemnity is paid. Regarding the indemnities the experts, the newspaper continues, have admitted that impossiblity of Germany's paying enormous amounts during the next two years. The paper says it understands that the payments required will be on a rising scale, yearly, each of the allies to receive its share either in cash or various products.

Tackle Reparation Question Again.

PARIS, April 1.— When the "big four" resumed its sessions to-day, the question of reparations was expected to be the principal subject of discussion. An effort was to be made to dispose of this problem, which is understood to have been chiefly instrumental in delaying the peace work during the past week.

Premier Lloyd George, it was learned, was prepared to offer a substitute for the French plan presented last week, which proposed that France's share of indemnities be $16,000,000,000. A prominent financial expert said that the "big four" had obtained the advice of several financiers in this matter and that he "understood that the French proposal had been headed off." While the informant did not reveal the exact nature of the financiers' advice, he indicated that President Wilson and Lloyd George felt that $16,000,000,000 was excessive, inasmuch as from $25,000,000,000 to $40,000,000,000 has been practically agreed on as the maximum of reparations. He added that the situation is such that the French cannot expect to get an excessive amount.

be admitted that this is hardly fair to your consulting engineer. It seems to me to be a question as to whether the Council intends to decide what it wants or to permit outside engineers make the decision for them, without being formally asked to do so.

Not Extravagant Bridge.

Insinuations that Mr. Barber has been extravagant in his plans are a rather serious reflection that should not be lightly made. Do his plans fulfill the instructions of the Council? If they do, and there is still dissatisfaction, I fail to see wherein he should be criticised. The width of the bridge was practically fixed, and its height would largely depend upon the clearance required in the main arch over the river and also in the arches over the railway sidings. The design is simple, yet it is graceful and beautiful. There is very little ornamentation called for, and no intricate form to make. The granite facing I think could be dispensed with, but this finish prevents discolouration and efflorescence. I don't know the locality, hence I cannot speak of the approaches. Nor can I say definitely whether two arches over the river would be more economical than one. But I cannot entertain the thought that a reputable engineer would put his clients to the extra expense of a single span if two were cheaper. A steel bridge could probably be built more cheaply than the one Mr. Barber designed, but if it was of the same dimensions and capacity only a competent engineer or contractor could make a comparison of costs.

If the Council wants a cheaper bridge than the one designed, that is a matter they should take up with the engineer, and, as I said, in all fairness to Mr. Barber, they should consult him, for the reasons stated, that he is qualified in both steel and concrete, and secondly that the Council did not give him the opportunity of submitting plans for a steel bridge."

THE IRON TEST EPISODE NO. 14. 2 PARTS

Anonymous Letter to Mayor Against Change

In his mail this morning Mayor Duncan received an anonymous letter signed "Shop Worker," cordially condemning the "imposition" of daylight saving and protesting that this change has been forced upon the people without their consent. It benefits only loafers and automobile "fiends," and works a hardship on the workers, who according to the Mayor's unknown correspondent, will throw in their lot with the farmers at the next election and secure free expression of their own sweet wills. Daylight saving, this writer asserts, is a contributory cause of Bolshevism and so on. The letter alleges that the Examiner refused to let the light of publicity shine upon a similar epistle of protest, but if it were written it must have disappeared in the mails, for the Examiner has published all the letters that have been received on this subject.

De Laval Won Two From the Canadian General

Last night at the Water street alley the Business Men's ten pin league, the De Laval took two games out of three from C.G.E. For the De Laval Barrett was high man with 556, Carter 514, W. Fitzgerald 502. For the C.G.E. E. Villeneive was high with 556, Fielder 520.

SHAMROCKS WON TWO FROM LAWN BOWLERS

In the five pin league Shamrocks took two from the Lawn Bowlers. For the Lawn Bowlers Walton hit the rubber bands for 577, Maynard 520. For the Shamrocks Sullivan was the only man to pass the 500 mark rolling 543.

BOARD OF WORKS WILL OPEN BRIDGE TENDERS

Ald. Phelan has called a meeting of the Board of Works to-night for general business, of which the tidbit will be the opening of the tenders for the Hunter street bridge. Three or four sealed bids had been received at the City Clerk's office at noon, and while there was no way of ascertaining how many tenders would be finally submitted, the presence of quite a group of contractors at the Empress to-day suggested that the committee would have its hands full. Several tenders are also expected from local men.

GERMANS COLLECT LARGE FORCES UNDER HINDENBURG

Marshalled on Eastern Front Near Danzig.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 1.—The Germans are concentrating large forces in Eastern Prussia under the command of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg. The German forces are being gathered in Graudenz and Thorn in order to defend the railway lines from Danzig to Posen.

Price of Milk Reduced in Kingston

(Special to The Examiner.)

KINGSTON, Ont., April 1.—Citizens got a most agreeable surprise when it was announced that milk would sell at 11 cents per quart. It has been selling all winter at 13 and 14 cents per quart, but the change was made to-day when a new agreement was made between the milk vendors and the farmer.

HINDUS CAN NOW BRING IN THEIR WIVES.

OTTAWA, April 1. — The question of East Indian immigration to the other self-governing dominions, which was taken up at the Imperial war conference in 1918, and especially to Canada, is the subject of an order-in-council passed on March 26. It deals with the reciprocity of treatment of the several communities of the British commonwealth, and allows certain modifications of the restrictive provisions of the immigration act.

The order-in-council allows Hindus now residing in British Columbia to bring in their wives and families.

THE HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

(BY W. H. PRETTY.)

(Conclusion.)

The following notes are in direct continuation from those published in the Peterborough Examiner for Thursday, Friday and Monday last, the 27th, 28th and 31st ultimo, respectively.

21. It should not be overlooked when considering the advisability of the Canal following the River bed through the city, between Little Lake and Nassau, that Freight and Passenger Service by Steam Railway already exists, and is in continuous operation, and that excellent highways, also already exist on each side of the River following this course, and only awaiting radial electric railways to give, with the Canal proposed, an ideal combination of Transportation facilities from an industrial standpoint to any works along this route, whose establishment would greatly increase business and revenue to the City of Peterborough, even if some of them were located outside the city limits.

22. The management and staff of the Quaker Oats Company deserve all honour from the writer for the loyalty they have proven themselves to possess towards the great industry they represent, and he grants it them, in all sincerity, ungrudgingly, and pride, as the just due of all who have faithfully carried out the stewardship entrusted to their care. They have done their duty, the highest tribute man can pay his fellowmen. The writer has tried to do his duty, in a cause he is not ashamed to represent and defend—in the cause of the City of Peterborough and her citizens, their children, and their children's children, in the long years to come, and with the fervent hope that future generations shall not be born in debt, and come into this world for no other purpose, and with no other prospect in view, than to slave and toil to pay off the "debts of honour" ?? of their forefathers—more often than not, the legacy of the gambler.

23. In reference to the question of the proposed street car service for East City, this, to be in any way progressive and satisfactory, from the point of view of East City people as a whole, should cover the area "threaded" by George street, going north, turning east via Smith street, then going south via Concession street to Downer's Corners, and thence going west via Otonabee street and Lansdowne street, and then turning north again up Lock street, and finally reaching our startpoint on George street. This will necessitate crossing the river at three points, since Hunter street must necessarily be included.

24. The best distribution would seem to be by means of loop lines from Hunter street, going east to East City from George street, thence north to Smith street, or neighborhood; from thence going west to Water street, and thence down George street to our starting point on Hunter street, giving transfers as necessary en route, with a similar service in the opposite direction on the same tracks.

25. Similarly, another loop line from Hunter street, going east to East City from George street, using the single track over Hunter street bridge when built, thence south to Downer's Corners or neighborhood, from thence going west via Otonabee street and Lansdowne street, and thence north via Lock street and George street, to our starting point on Hunter street, giving transfers as necessary en route, with a similar service in the opposite direction.

26. Such a system of car routes as indicated in paragraphs 24 and 25 above, would involve the building of about five miles of single track with the necessary turn-outs, and would necessitate crossing the river at three points, as already stated in paragraph 23, only one, however being available at present, and generally unknown to our citizens, viz., the Auburn dam, where such a crossing was provided for by extensions of the dam piers on the down stream side, and which can be seen by anyone visiting the dam. A crossing for street cars will be provided at Hunter street by means of the proposed new bridge at this point, but why wait for this before reasonable transportation for pedestrians is provided to and from East City. We have three highway bridges in actual use, at Smith street, Hunter street, and Otonabee street respectively, and the city could, by purchasing motor busses, reproduce the service indicated in paragraphs 24 and 25 above, at a comparatively trifling expense, compared with the cost of building street car tracks (of which at least five miles would be required to give service approaching that of the motor bus system suggested here) crossing the Auburn dam, and building a new bridge at Otonabee street. The whole of the area covered is practically within the city limits, and it would open up to the city revenues from lands and properties which are within the city limits also, that have been neglected too long. If we are not prepared to develop magnificently placed districts like the locations just east of the Little Lake, it's surely unreasonable to expect outside districts to have confidence in us and be over-anxious to be enrolled under Peterborough City control.

These notes have now reached the limit of what the writer believes to be to the public interest for the moment, and in conclusion would again emphasize the fact that they have been offered freely from time to time in the form of suggestions made by the writer to various of our aldermen and citizens in past when discussing questions bearing upon city development; he has no right to abuse friendly talks together by disclosing names, no useful purpose would be served by doing so, and thanking his readers for their patience and the many appreciative remarks made by many during the past few days when meeting and discussing frankly and openly, many of the points raised—he now takes his leave.

HUN FINANCIAL COMMISSION ARRIVES TO CONFER WITH THE ALLIES

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, March 31.—The German financial sub-commission, which is to discuss pending financial questions with representatives of the Allies has arrived at the Spa.

The financial conference between German and Allied representatives, according to the first announcements, was to be held in Paris. Later advices said the meeting was likely to be held at Versailles.

A Pimply Face or Poor Complexion Quickly Restored

Thousands of young men and women would be handsome and attractive were it not for unsightly pimples, blackheads, and rough uneven skin. Custom seems to recommend lotions and salves, but unfortunately their effect is but temporary. These disfiguring blemishes do not originate in the skin—their birth in every case goes further back, to the blood, which must be cleansed of humors before the pimples depart for good.

A physician who has made a careful study of such cases, says that the quickest cure comes from a blood-building medicine like Ferrozone. The minute Ferrozone strikes the blood its good work begins. Poisons and foul matter are expeled. Every trace of humor is driven out, and the whole life current is supplied with nutriment and health giving qualities. You can always tell a Ferrozone complexion when you see it—the cheeks are clear and rosy, no signs of sallowness—the eyes are bright and expressive because rich, red blood is circulating through the whole system, carrying health, energy and strength with it. Not only will all skin eruptions disappear, but an increase in vital strength, an all-round improvement will be apparent. No rebuilding tonic could be more efficient. Get Ferrozone to-day —Good for young and old, for well folks and sick ones, too. 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CATTLE MARKET

Trade started off slow. Prices asked were very high, and this probably had the effect of causing an apparent slowness of trade, though the demand for good butcher quality steers and heifers was on the whole good and active and prices realized before the close showed a good steady market for this class of cattle.

The heavy steers were not quite as active, the market for this class going slow.

Choice calves were about steady. Heavy calves easy.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hog market steady for yesterday at last week's closing prices.

Brutally Murders Girl He Loved

DETROIT Mich., March 28. — With her throat cut and five bullet wounds in her body, Miss Erma Cassler, aged 19, a school teacher in Lodi Township, about 100 miles from Detroit, was found lying on the floor of her little school house by a pupil who was the first to arrive for his day's studies. Robert Warner, a discharged soldier, was arrested, and lodged in the county jail. He has confessed to the shooting, declaring that the young school teacher had repeatedly rejected his advances.

The authorities have learned that Warner, who is the same age as Miss Cassler, has been forcing his attentions upon the young woman for some time, and that they were unwelcome. This is testified to by the fact that as recently as last night she had complained to her landlady that Warner was "bothering" her. Sheriff Cook of Washtenaw county, ordered Warner to cease his attentions, but he remained in the same boarding house as Miss Cassler, until this morning, when he was last seen walking with her in the direction of the little school house.

A TOW TEAM FOR PEDESTRIANS.

A Hastings county correspondent has the following to say regarding spring road conditions: "We are beginning to think that the road superintendent was furnished with an airplane instead of a car by the candition of the roads. We would suggest that a tow team or an auxiliary be placed along the road for the convenience of the travelling public. The oldest settlers have never known the roads to be in such a state. They are getting worse every year."

Capes and dolmans continue to gain in popularity.

Thousands of young men and women would be handsome and attractive were it not for unsightly pimples, blackheads, and rough uneven skin. Custom seems to recommend lotions and salves, but unfortunately their effect is but temporary. These disfiguring blemishes do not originate in the skin—their birth in every case goes further back, to the blood, which must be cleansed of humors before the pimples depart for good.

A physician who has made a careful study of such cases, says that the quickest cure comes from a blood-building medicine like Ferrozone. The minute Ferrozone strikes the blood its good work begins. Poisons and foul matter are expeled. Every trace of humor is driven out, and the whole life current is supplied with nutriment and health giving qualities. You can always tell a Ferrozone complexion when you see it—the cheeks are clear and rosy, no signs of sallowness—the eyes are bright and expressive because rich, red blood is circulating through the whole system, carrying health, energy and strength with it. Not only will all skin eruptions disappear, but an increase in vital strength, an all-round improvement will be apparent. No rebuilding tonic could be more efficient. Get Ferrozone to-day—Good for young and old, for well folks and sick ones, too. 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CATTLE MARKET

Trade started off slow. Prices asked were very high, and this probably had the effect of causing an apparent slowness of trade, though the demand for good butcher quality steers and heifers was on the whole good and active and prices realized before the close showed a good steady market for this class of cattle.

The heavy steers were not quite as active, the market for this class going slow.

Choice calves were about steady. Heavy calves easy.

Brutally Murders Girl He Loved

DETROIT Mich., March 28. — With her throat cut and five bullet wounds in her body, Miss Erma Cassler, aged 19, a school teacher in Lodi Township, about 100 miles from Detroit, was found lying on the floor of her little school house by a pupil who was the first to arrive for his day's studies. Robert Warner, a discharged soldier, was arrested, and lodged in the county jail. He has confessed to the shooting, declaring that the young school teacher had repeatedly rejected his advances.

The authorities have learned that Warner, who is the same age as Miss Cassler, has been forcing his attentions upon the young woman for some time, and that they were unwelcome. This is testified to by the fact that as recently as last night she had complained to her landlady that Warner was "bothering" her. Sheriff Cook of Washtenaw county, ordered Warner to cease his attentions, but he remained in the same boarding house as Miss Cassler, until this morning, when he was last seen walking with her in the direction of the little school house.

A TOW TEAM FOR PEDESTRIANS.

A Hastings county correspondent has the following to say regarding spring road conditions: "We are beginning to think that the road superintendent was furnished with an airplane instead of a car by the condition of the roads. We would suggest that a tow team or an auxiliary be placed along the road for the convenience of the travelling public. The oldest settlers have never known the roads to be in such a state. They are getting worse every year."

Home bread-making reduces the high cost of living by lessening the amount of expensive meats required to supply the necessary nourishment to the body. The increased nutritious value of bread made in the home with

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the phosphated hot water is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

CATS SUCKING BREATH.

An Old Wives' Fable That Has Served a Good Purpose.

Can a cat really suck the breath of a child?

We have always heard that it could. Away back in early childhood we distinctly remember frequent warnings to look out for the cat. Do not allow the cat to get into bed with you, especially to get into bed with the baby, as it is liable to suck the baby's breath, which would cause the baby to die.

Is there any foundation for such a notion as this? We never could discover any real meaning to the belief that a cat can suck the breath of a child. Indeed the sentence is totally unintelligible.

What is meant by sucking the breath? It may be true that the cat, attracted by the breath of a child who had recently been nursing, might attempt to interfere in some manner with the child's mouth. If young [illegible] nurse might be excited by the smell of the child's breath. It is barely possible that the cat might seize with a desire to bite or [illegible] the child's lips or tongue, but [illegible] by the smell of milk. We are not in a position to deny these possibilities. Maybe they are true.

But not any of these suppositions furnish a basis for the statement that the cat is liable to suck the child's breath. We have always heard this statement with a shudder of horror. It seems to convey some weird, horrible tragedy that can hardly be imagined. But it is a mere fancy, the origin of which is hard to explain.

Yet we would advise mothers to be careful about leaving the infant with a cat. We do not favor the idea of cats sleeping with children, nor do we favor the practice of children playing with cats, handling them, mopping them around the floor, fondling them, dressing them up as dolls. It is not good for the cat; it is not good for the child. Neither cats nor dogs ought to be treated in this manner. They are all right in their place, but they are not fit for playthings.

If the superstition that a cat can suck a child's breath has operated as a preventive to mothers allowing their children to play with cats, it has served a very good purpose, but such childish notions are hardly compatible with mature reflection. It is one of the old wives' fables which may have served a good purpose, but it is too ridiculous for repetition. There are other and better reasons why the cat and baby should not be left together than the vague, unintelligible fear that the cat will suck the child's breath.—Medical Talk.

The Care of Children.

It is usually accepted without question that the modern scientific methods used in the care and bringing up of infants tend to increase the average duration of human life. Mr. Charlton T. Lewis, writing in Harper's Weekly, presents a different view. When infants were treated with less wisdom, he points out, the weaker perished and the stronger survived. When the sick are cared for so that a large number recover from disease, it is inevitable that on the average those who are thus rescued must be weaker than the community to which they are restored. Thus all these influences, says Mr. Lewis in conclusion, while saving life, "tend especially to save lives which are feeble in a greater proportion than those which are strong and thus in the end must lower the vitality of the great mass of the population."

HER FIVE CHILDREN

Had Whooping Cough At the Same Time

Whooping cough is one of the most dangerous diseases of children, especially to those under five years of age. It first starts with a fever and cough, sneezing, watering of the eyes and an irritation of the throat. Later the coughing increases, the child becomes livid in the face, the eyes appear as if they would burst from their sockets and suffocations seems imminent till relief is brought by the "whoop."

On the first sign of whooping cough we would advise the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This famous remedy will clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm, and in this way ease the racking cough and in a short time make it disappear entirely.

Mrs. Walter McGaughey, North Battleford, Sask., writes:—"I have five children, the eldest thirteen and the baby two years old. They all had the whooping cough at the same time. I tried two or three cough remedies, but none gave the same satisfaction as Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A home where there are young children should never be without it. I will highly recommend it to those who want a quick cure."

There are many imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so be sure you get the genuine by insisting that the package is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Notorious Case Is Recalled

In mentioning the fact that Leon Bourgeois, formerly Premier of France, cites the case of Henry Wirz as establishing a precedent for the punishment of William Hohenzollern one of our contemporaries does Wirz a grave injustice in referring to him as a German. Wirz went to his last reward many years ago, and it probably does not matter greatly what he is called, but accuracy demands the statement that he was a Swiss. Of course, Swiss are mainly of three breeds—German, French and Italian—so he may have been of German blood. Stories of his cruel treatment of prisoners-of-war at Andersonville, and of his subsequent trial and execution, are going the rounds these days, and on account of its bearing upon the prospective fate of William Hohenzollern the case of Wirz is interesting. Wirz was a captain in the Confederate army, and was appointed commandant of the Confederate prison at Andersonville, Ga., by Gen. Winder. His administration of that prison was one of the outstanding horrors of the war between North and South.

It is said that not fewer than 45,000 Northern prisoners died as a result of the treatment to which they were subjected by Wirz. Two-thirds of them died of starvation, and from the impure water and tainted food that Wirz provided for them. Ten thousand perished from exposure to the cold and the extreme summer heat, the prisoners being allowed no protection whatever against the elements. Another thousand died from inhaling the foul air of their quarters. Another hundred died from torture, and fifty who escaped and were recaptured died as a result of the wounds received, many of these having been practically torn to pieces by the savage dogs that Wirz employed. The guards, who must have been personally selected by the commandant, killed three hundred. Others succumbed as a result of being vaccinated with poisonous serum and Wirz is said to have personally shot several. It is peculiarly unpleasant to have to record the fact that Wirz was not alone in his inhuman treatment of prisoners, and that men of American blood were willing to carry out his orders. Similar charges were made against several other prison commandants, but were not proved.

Stories of the Andersonville horrors were brought north by escaping prisoners, and when the South laid down its arms there were thousands more witnesses against Wirz. Since the South had to acknowledge the sovereignty of the North there was no need for President Johnson to make a formal demand for his surrender. He was arrested like any other citizen on a charge of having violated the laws of war. He was court-martialed at Washington, had a firm of lawyers to defend him, and after a trial which began six months after the conclusion of peace and lasted another six months, was found guilty. He was hanged three days later. It was proved that Wirz refused to furnish the prisoners with tents or blankets, and that many thousands of them were forced to sleep on the bare ground, winter and summer. Those who had clothing and blankets were deprived of them by the commandant, who seems to have acted simply on the principle that the prisoners were enemies, that they had absolutely no rights, and that a soldier's plain duty was to kill off as many of them as possible.

The water they drank was reeking with the filth and garbage of the prison and prison yard and the offal and drainage of the cookhouse. Under such treatment the men died like flies, while great numbers went insane. On the most trivial pretences Wirz subjected the men to outrageous punishment. He fastened large iron balls to their feet, and shackled large groups of them together so tightly that they could hardly walk. They were left like this for hours, and sometimes even for days, without food or drink. The use of the stocks was a favorite device of Wirz's. For hours the men were forced to stand, lie or sit in one position. Just around the inner wall of the prison, at a distance of 20 feet from it, he established a dead line. The guards had orders to kill any prisoner who crossed this line, even if he had the bad fortune to stumble or be pushed over it. Some 300 prisoners were shot on the dead-line.

Dogs described as "ferocious bloodhounds" were kept to hunt down the prisoners who escaped, and were deliberately trained to maim and mangle their quarry. It was proved that on many occasions Wirz personally attacked prisoners, kicking them and stamping on them when they were down. Their food ration was about 20 ounces for the 24 hours. There was much scurvy, and many cases of gangrene were treated with nothing but water. It is said that the prisoners used to beg Wirz for bones when the food was distributed. It is difficult to believe that the terrible conditions at Andersonville could continue for years without some of Wirz's superior officers being aware of the fact. Yet is it easier to believe that being aware they would permit such horrors to continue? The Southern officers as a class were chivalrous opponents, though perhaps they hated their enemy more than the Northern officers did; and it was a man of alien blood who brought the Andersonville disgrace upon them. Nevertheless, Wirz was not a German.

"His Master's Voice" Records Out to-day

JOHN STEEL

With a voice like John McCormack.

Here is a record by a new singer, LIEUT. JOHN STEEL. He first sang in a boy's choir when ten year's old and commenced to study under the best teachers in New York, and before the age of sixteen he had developed a wonderful tenor voice. Later studying in Paris with Jean de Reske, under whom he made wonderful progress. Returning to America; only last September, he immediately scored a triumph in light opera, creating a sensation wherever he appeared.

Mr. Walter Rogers, the eminent conductor, who has directed the recordings of all the world's greatest artists, in the Victor Laboratory said: "I think John Steel's voice is one of the most beautiful I ever heard."

Many critics who have heard John Steel have remarked how much his voice resembles that of John McCormack, so closely in fact, that he bids fair to become a formidable rival of that celebrated artist.

Imperial Fairy Tale.

It would be pleasant to believe the tale or legend sent from Amsterdam that a "sealed wagon," freighted with "200 sacks, each containing a hundred weight of German gold, silver and coin," trundled over the Dutch frontier and on to the castle where Mr. William Hohenzollern is staying at present. It is a good story, and the correspondent who heard it in Amsterdam understood his business when he cabled it. Among Imperial fairy tales, however, it must be classed. What X-ray eye saw the sacks through the sealed wagon, saw through the sacking the gold, silver and coin? Sacks of gold.

What fancy doesn't love them, like the "Arabian Nights," pieces of eight, angels, rose nobles, "jewels, pearls and ouches?" This gold and silver uncoined, did the Rhine Maidens send it, perhaps, to Wilhelm the disinherited? But, just as kings, it is believed, seldom wear their crowns, even in private cars, so it is believed that they don't habitually store gold and silver even in the best warranted A1 sacks. The fairy world is always going on, but its financial theories and practices, such as changing gold into coal, for example, are a bit belated.

Lava Curios.

The largest volcano in the world is that at Kilauea, in the Hawaii Islands. It forms one of the principal attractions to tourists visiting the island, and one of their desires is to procure a lava specimen as a memento of their visit. All kinds of coins, pocketknives, brooches, and other trinkets are thrown into the lava streams near the edge of the crater. These quickly become encased in the molten mass. After remaining there for some minutes the guide recovers them with a long stick, when they are allowed to cool. Through the lava the embedded article can be easily recognized, and such souvenirs are naturally prized and carried away as a reminder of the visit to the world's greatest volcano.

VERNON CASTLE FACED POVERTY WHEN HE DIED.

NEW YORK, March 29. — Vernon Castle, the expert dancer, society favorite and hero airman, left but a small amount of erly possessions.

His estate is less than $1,000 and may be but a few hundred, it was announced here by William Kleen, counsel for Mrs. Castle. Mr. Kleen explained that Castle had lived up to every cent of his income.

More Exploits of Lieut. Beverly Robinson

A Model Aeroplane, made in Germany by a British officer, prisoner of war.

A group of British orderlies in a German prison camp for officers.

RECENTLY we printed an article which attracted an unusual amount of attention. It was from the pen of Lieut. A. A. Milne, formerly Assistant Editor of "Punch," and perhaps the best known and best loved of all Mr. Punch's famous contributors. We give below a sequel describing another of "X's" extraordinary adventures in escaping from Germany.

The "X" in the story, we are now permitted to say, is Lieut. John Beverley Robinson, son of the late Christopher Robinson, K.C., and grandson of the late Sir John Beverley Robinson, Bart., Chief Justice of Upper Canada. Lieut. Robinson has the unique distinction of being the only Canadian-born officer who escaped from Germany during the whole war. He is now engaged on a series of lectures through Canada, given by permission of the Air Ministry and under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor-General.

"I wrote a few weeks ago about my friend X who had just escaped from Germany. I wish now that I had not called him X; there is something so lifeless about a man with a short name like that. Another time my hero shall be Montmorency. A romantic atmosphere encircles a man so named, whereas an X only suggests a thin fellow with knock-knees. Of course, anyone who has been two years in a German prison would be thin, but his extremities need not have suffered. However, I must go on as I began. It may be, of course, that people who read this article one week make a point of never reading it again; but there may be others, more optimistic, who go hopefully on week after week. For the benefit of these, who have already been introduced to X., I shall continue to speak of him by that name in recounting more of his adventures.

"You may remember that he had tried to escape before, but was captured after four days freedom. Those days had been spent in hiding, the nights in trekking. The fourth night was cloudy. There was no friendly star to guide him, and without it he might be marching straight back to prison. He decided to lie up for that night in the hope that the next night would be fine. Now you or I, with the whole of Germany to choose from, would probably select the thickest part of the thickest wood for our refuge. We would hardly dare to sleep least we should wake to a heavy hand on the shoulder, and a voice growling, "Now then, you come along o' me," or its equivalent in German. That, anyhow, is how I imagine myself behaving. I feel that I should be a nervous escaper. But as X. pointed out, it was a wet night. Not at all the night to be out of doors. He also went on to say that your first escape should really be regarded as a practice one. You only go out to get the experience. And apparently the experience of spending a cold wet night in a wood was one which he did not want.

"So he chose a suitable farmhouse, climbed into a suitable loft, took off his boots, made himself comfortable in the straw, and went to sleep. He awoke feeling hungry. Providence apparently had thought of this, for there at his elbow was a clutch of eggs. At the moment nobody except X. seemed to want them. He not only wanted them, but had the means of cooking them; had, indeed, been carrying this about hopefully with him for the last four days. He ate two of the eggs, and disposed the others, hard-boiled about his person. So far, so good. He took the straw out of his hair, and looked regretfully at his boots. It was time to put them on.

"But he had forgotten something. He had forgotten that interesting story of how the geese saved the capitol; he had forgotten a mother's feelings. In short, he had overlooked the hen. The hen came back. Had it only attended to its duties that night, instead of going out somewhere, X. would have got away—in fact, would have got away with the hen. As it was, the hen saved itself and served its fatherland by its night's absence; for when it rolled up in the morning and saw X. bulging with hard-boiled eggs, it made more noise than a hen had ever made before. And X reached out for his boots.

"It was too late. The farmer's wife heard her beloved hen clucking in a language unknown to her, but barred evidently with some deep meaning. Wondering what had happened, what portent in the egg world was to be disclosed to her, she rushed into the barn, and heaved herself up the ladder which led to the loft. My friend X. hastily covered himself with straw; from a safe distance the hen continued to curse him; and slowly over the top of the ladder came the head of the farmer's wife. One look was enough. Bits of X. were only too visible, and with a shriek she fell off the ladder. X. observed, took the straw from his hair, and once more felt for his boots.

"The next visitor was the farmer himself. X., who had got one boot on by now, looked at him, observed that he had a shot-gun with him, and put on his other boot. Then he came down the ladder. Further than that we need not follow him. He returned under escort to his prison, and was given a month's solitary confinement. When that was over he began to get busy again, and five months later was in England. Solitary confinement is not pleasant, but he consoled himself with the thought that the experience was worth it. No doubt it was. At any rate, he had learnt one thing. He had learnt that a mother's feelings cannot be ignored."

A Russian and British officer who made many attempts to escape from Germany. The British eventually succeeded.

Lt. Beverley Robinson, Royal Flying Corps, a prisoner in Germany for 2½ years, who escaped.

$50—NO BENEFIT

This money might have been saved by Mr. Z. D'Muro of 722 Papineau Ave., Montreal, had he only known of Zam-Buk sooner. Writing to the proprietors of Zam-Buk, a short time ago, he said:

"For over a year I suffered with eczema which nothing seemed able to cure. I had treatment from three doctors, which cost me $50, but none of them were able to cure me. I suffered intensely from the irritation and pain, and I thought I should never get relief, until one day a friend told me about Zam-Buk and I started using it right away. From the very first application I felt better. Zam-Buk relieved the irritation and seemed to cool and soothe the sores. Gradually the sores began to heal and, with perseverance, Zam-Buk completely rid me of the disease.

"I would like to be able to tell all sufferers from eczema to stop experimenting with useless remedies and use Zam-Buk. By using this balm in the first place they would save themselves needless suffering and expense."

Zam-Buk should be in every home, not only for skin troubles, boils, rashes, pimples, abscesses and ulcers, but also for cuts, burns, and scalds, for which it is indispensable. Get a box to-day. It will keep indefinitely and still retain its strength and purity. All dealers, 50c. box.

BANK WORRIES.

How One Clerk Fretted a Whole Year All For Nothing.

An ex-bank official said that during his career in the banking business he had known more than one employee of a bank to get into trouble on account of carelessness in handling money.

One collector, who was a light hearted fellow, was going along the street in high water season flipping up a twenty dollar piece with his thumb and finger and catching it as it came down. Finally it slipped and fell through a grating on the sidewalk into about two feet of water. He made some efforts to recover it, but finally decided to wait till the water was gone, and then it was found that the coin was also gone. Another time the same fellow was coming up the street with $10,000 in twenty dollar pieces on his shoulder. In some way he lost his hold on the sack, and in striking the sidewalk it burst, and the coins rolled in all directions. A number of people rushed to his assistance, but he described a large circle around the sack and, waving his arms wildly, ordered everybody to "stand back." He recovered most of the coin, but decided to get out of the banking business.

Another time a Chinaman came into the bank and deposited $200 and took a certificate of deposit. The clerk who made out the certificate was preoccupied and wrote $2,000 on it and on the stub. When he made up his cash at night he was $1,800 short. He knew where the mistake was and tried to hunt up the Chinaman; but, although he got a clew, he could never find him, and he remained $1,800 short on the books. He had a notice of the date of the certificate, amount, etc., pasted in his desk and was always on the lookout to catch the certificate as it came in. Just a year from the day the deposit was made the Chinaman walked into the bank and presented the certificate to be cashed. When asked how much he wanted he said all—$200. He had never noticed the mistake in the amount of the certificate, and he has never found it out, and the clerk suffered the worry of being short in his mind for a whole year all for nothing.

WISDOM OF NOVELISTS.

There are only three men of whom it may safely be predicted that they will make their mark in the world—the man who cannot write, the miller and the chimney sweep.—Frankfort Moore.

The life of every man is a diary in which he means to write one story and writes another, and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as it is with that he vowed to make it.—J. M. Barrie.

Soothing His Last Moments.

Speaking of unpleasant surprises, an Englishman told of the one Jonathan Rochell got upon his deathbed:

"Jonathan, feeling that the end was near, gave a few words of parting advice to his young wife. He had a bachelor friend named Howard, a steady fellow, and the thought came to his mind as he was concluding his farewell talk that if Kate, after he was gone, would marry Howard it would be a good thing. He told her this.

"'Kate, woman,' he said, 'it would please me dearly if ye was to promise to take up wi' Howard when I'm gone.'

"'Don't ye worry about that, Jonty,' says Kate in a soothing way. 'Me and Howard have already settled it betwixt us.'"

Taking It in Good Part.

An absurd caricature of James Russell Lowell appeared in a Harvard paper soon after he had accepted his professorship. Some one ventured to ask him how he liked it, to which he replied that he was glad to see that the artist had kindly permitted him to wear plaid trousers, an innocent fancy of his to which Mrs. Lowell most strongly objected.

THE DESPISED TOAD.

POPULAR HATRED OF THE ANIMAL IS OF GREAT ANTIQUITY.

In Legendary as Well as in Superstitious Lore the Uncouth and Misshapen Creature Plays No Small Part—The Belief in Toad Stones.

The unfortunate toad has from time immemorial been an object of distrust and aversion, especially among the common people. A pleasing tale runs that a gentleman, walking along a country lane, came suddenly upon a village boy belaboring the crushed body of a toad with a heavy stick and exclaiming at each blow, "I'll larn 'e to be a toad!" whereat the indignant newcomer, seizing the miscreant by his collar, vigorously applied a cane to his legs, remarking, "I'll larn you to be a boy!" The popular hatred of the toad, indeed, is of such antiquity and is still so general as to seem ineradicable. That the creature is not dangerously poisonous it is hopeless to attempt to convince the ordinary rustic. Doubtless this belief has its origin in the acrid secretion which the toad has the power of emitting when disturbed or annoyed unduly and which will cause a dog that has incautiously picked up a toad to foam at the mouth. Again, the uncouth appearance of the creature has had much to do with the feeling of repulsion with which it has always been regarded. "Squat like a toad" is the phrase by which Milton describes the evil one essaying to reach the ear of Eve.

Superstition, in truth, has laid a firm hold on the toad's misshapen figure. The belief, not only in the existence of "toad stones," but in their efficacy as a sovereign remedy for certain ills, which is still common in parts of the country, is of very ancient date. "There is to be found in the heads of old and great toads," says Fenton, writing in 1569, "a stone they call borax, or stelon, which, being used as rings, gives forewarning of venom." In the Londesborough collection is a silver ring of the fifteenth century in which one of these toad stones is set. They were supposed always to bear on their surface a figure resembling a toad, being somewhat similar trinkets, one may imagine, to the scarabæus ornament of the Egyptians. Another early writer remarks, "A toad stone called 'crepandia,' touching any part envenomed by the bite of rat, wasp, spider or other venomous beast, ceases the pain and swelling thereof." It was believed that when brought near to poison the stone sweated and changed color, thus conveying to its wearers a timely warning of danger.

It is to these peculiar amulets that Shakespeare is supposed to refer in "As You Like It:"

Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.

Is it not probable, however, that the poet, being a poet, is here alluding to the eye of the toad, an object, as all who are really familiar with the appearance of this humble batrachian will agree, than which there are few more beautiful in nature?

Perhaps the most familiar superstition in regard to toads is that, still rife, which supposes them capable of existing for an indefinite period in the interior of rocks, stones or hermetically sealed cavities. Numberless "authentic instances" of this remarkable power have been brought forward from time to time. The following example from an old book is typical: "In 1793 Mr. George Wilson, a mason, met with a toad, which he wantonly immured in a stone wall that he was then building. In the middle of the wall he made a close cell of lime and stone, just fit for the magnitude of its body and seemingly so plastered as to prevent the admission of air. In 1809, sixteen years afterward, it was found necessary to open a gap in this wall for a passage of carts, when the poor creature was found alive in its stronghold. It seemed at first in a very torpid state, but it soon recovered animation and activity and, as if sensible of the blessings of freedom, made its way to a collection of stones and disappeared." It is known that toads can exist for a long time without food, and it is generally believed that they live to a great age, and doubtless these two peculiarities have had much to do with the superstition in regard to their supposed penchant for a hermit's life. The fallacy, however, was completely exposed by Dean Buckland, father of Frank Buckland, the great naturalist, who went to the trouble of testing the truth of the theory by an exhaustive series of experiments. It need only be remarked that none of his victims survived the incarceration.

In legendary as in superstitious lore the toad plays no small part. It may not be generally known that the fleur-de-lis of France was originally in shape a toad. Thus at least runs the tale. Clovis, king of France, bore on his banner the device of three toads or "botes," as they were called in old French. His baptism gave great umbrage to the Arians, who rebelled and assembled a large host against him under King Candat. Clovis while on his way to meet the heretics was granted a vision wherein he saw in the heavens his device of three toads wimout ugly change into three lilies "or" on a banner "azur." Such a banner he caused instantly to be made, calling it his "flambe."—London Globe.

Be Ready For the Emergency.

Good luck is desirable even when you have done your best to succeed, but remember that the most favorable circumstances or strokes of fortune are of little value unless you have prepared yourself to take advantage of them. Of what advantage would Hayne's fiery speech have been to Daniel Webster if he had not, with the instinct of genius, long before equipped himself for the assault which he repelled with such crushing energy? Had he not previously weighed and refuted in his own mind the charges of his opponent his reply, instead of ranking among the greatest masterpieces of oratory, might have only revealed his own weakness. Thousands of men had seen the prints of a horse's hoofs in the soil before Faust discovered by them the art of printing.

Woeful Lack of Confidence.

A prominent actor tells about a Chicago theatrical woman about to wed who was one day amusing herself by going over the marriage service. To a friend who discovered her, prayer book in hand, she said:

"I always make it a point to do this, for no matter how well you may have known a part in the past it should always be rehearsed before the piece is revived." Then, rather playfully, she read the words, "Till death do us part."

Whereupon her friend interrupted:

"How foolish that is, isn't it, dear? Sounds like one hasn't any confidence in the courts!"

The Doctor Had Nothing to Say.

A certain physician told some of his patients that as long as they kept their feet dry they would be safe from the attack of the grip. He was surprised to receive a letter from one of his patients in which the latter said that he had two wooden legs and yet he had the grip for five consecutive years. The letter was unanswered.

A Strong Letter of Commendation

From a Prominent Toronto Manufacturer Who Has Depended on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to Enable Him to Attend to His Daily Duties as Manager of a Large Glove Factory.

MR. HERBERT STREET COWAN, President and General Manager of the Craig-Cowan Co., Ltd., Glove Manufacturers, 154 Pearl St., Toronto, writes:

"About ten years ago, at the age of 37, I had a stroke, as a result of which I have been partially paralyzed ever since.

"For two years I lay in the house in a helpless condition in spite of all that six doctors could do to restore me. I also resorted to massage and electrical treatments, but without very much apparent benefit.

"About seven years ago I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and have used it at intervals ever since. It is only by using this restorative treatment that I have been able to attend to my large and growing business, and for this reason I feel that the least I can do is to recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to others who suffer from nervous derangements.

"In fact, it has afforded me a great deal of pleasure to recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to my friends, and to observe the way in which they have been benefited by its use. As a result of the large number of cases I have observed, as well as my own remarkable experience, I feel that I can speak with some authority."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is known and used in the best homes in the land, and is recognized by physicians and laymen alike as a most excellent means of enriching the blood and building up the nervous system. You can make no mistake in giving it a trial when occasion demands. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

How Mollie Escaped

The Escapade of a Young Nurse

By AGNES G. BROGAN

When Mollie had finished her course in social economy and domestic science and had served out a full term as settlement worker she calmly packed her trunk, prepared to repair the wear and tear of overwrought nerves in a nearby sanitarium. Nothing ever happened to Mollie exactly as it should. In the first place, people of a rebellious and adventurous disposition are correspondingly supposed to be the possessors of rebellious or straying locks, of dark eyes with mischievous glint, while saintlike natures invariably wear countenances of saintlike repose and blue eyes (preferably), wide and trusting. Mollie wore the saintlike expression, even as she openly flaunted her willfulness. Again, one would expect a creature so demure of mien to find her chief pleasure and duty in the home. Mollie might have been satisfied to display her executive ability there had mother not been so hopelessly old fashioned. Mother had her own ideas about housekeeping which quite eliminated Mollie's housemaiden system.

So the "rest cure" was the end of all her demonstrations and theories. Viciously Mollie tossed a kimono into the trunk, while her fair face maintained its usual placidity. "I'll get it over as soon as I can," she remarked, 'and cheat my relatives of the fiendish delight of saying, 'I told you so.'" So a brief note fastened to her pincushion was all that notified her enduring family of Mollie's departure. "Gone to the sanitarium," the note informed them. "Let you know when I'm ready for visitors."

Mother read it with a troubled frown, but father's face showed visible relief. "Thank heaven," he exclaimed, "for a time, at least, we will know where the girl is!"

"Dear me," sighed mother, "you don't think Mollie will try to reorganize the hospital, do you, or publicly complain of its management? I should be so embarrassed."

Father's eyes twinkled. "Don't you worry," he replied. "She will find her Waterloo there."

But whether she did or not still remains a question. Certain it is that

There are five simple ways to tell good tea.

First, by the bright copper color of the tea when steeped.

Second, by the exquisite aroma.

Third, by the delightful, refreshing flavor.

Fourth, by the satisfying richness.

Fifth, by the economical strength.

Make a brewing and you will find all these qualities combined in Red Rose.

her first act was to rearrange her room. The electric bulb had to be hanged to a more desirable though forbidden position as a reading light, and the bed was pushed into a more convenient though opposite corner. Mollie was still flushed with exertion and triumph as the nurse entered. "Dr. Watts wishes me to announce," said that person, "that the hospital is now under rigid quarantine. An outbreak of diphtheria in the building has made this precaution necessary. All patients are required to remain as closely as possible within their own precincts—until further notice."

Mollie sank in an incredulous heap on the foot of her bed. "You mean," she asked, "that I am to be kept here—me—forcibly—against my will?"

The nurse nodded. "You have been much exposed," she replied.

"Well, go back and tell Dr. Watts from me—tell all of them—that I won't stay," said Mollie, "and that's plain."

The nurse smiled in maddening superiority. "I am afraid you will have to, Miss Stillwell. We are acting in accordance with the law, and the city health officer is here now to see that law is enforced."

"And if," persisted Mollie, "this 'worthy' imagines he finds some suspicious indications—what then?"

"You will be detained—for a time."

As the door closed Mollie went over and stood looking out of the window. A moment since she had decided to remain in this pleasant, restful place as long as the spirit moved her. Now, under forcible restraint, all the antagonism of her wayward nature arose in revolt. Far below the lights of the city mocked the twinkling lights of the hospital. Wonderful things were happening there, no doubt, and youth was taking freely its rightful heritage of pleasure freely. Angry tears splashed down on Mollie's little clinched hands. She would go back this very night. She would defy them to hold her. She swung about in sudden response to one authoritative knock at the door; then it opened to admit a tall and very determined appearing young man.

"Good evening," said the young man.

"Good evening," grudgingly repeated Mollie.

"I am the doctor," he went on, "from the health department—Dr. Joyce."

"I thought you were," said Mollie.

"You have received notice, Miss"—he consulted his notes—"Miss Stillwell?"

"Yes; I have had notice," agreed Mollie.

"I must ask you, then, to be in my office upon the lower floor at precisely 8 this evening. I am leaving the hospital at 8:15."

"I shall be leaving, the hospital, too," said Mollie.

The young doctor glanced over his notes as though he had not heard aright.

"No patients are permitted to leave without a written discharge," he informed her.

"Well, I'm going without one," said Mollie.

At this surprising remark the doctor frowned; then the guileless expression of the sweet face upraised to his changed his frown to a smile. "You can't go, my dear girl, until you are released," he said. "This thing is done for your own good as much as for others'. Better face the circumstance sensibly. You are but a temporary prisoner."

"If I am a prisoner," Mollie retorted, "take warning, for I shall escape."

"That will be—impossible. My purpose here tonight is to see that quarantine is enforced."

Slowly Mollie looked into his eyes. They were fine eyes, with a true, steady light, she observed; eyes not to be coaxed or swerved from their duty: kind eyes, with regret in their depths that they must be stern. Turning from them thoughtfully, Mollie again took up her post at the window. When she looked back a smile trembled about her lips; an excited flush tinted her cheeks. "All right," she called. "Goodby until 8, Dr. Joyce."

When she had heard the last echo of his footsteps down the corridor Mollie ventured out upon a tour of investigation. Near the stairway she was met by a genial interne, ostensibly on patrol. "Oh, be good!" he admonished, and she retreated to her room.

Shortly before 8 the nurse arrived with an intolerant air of espionage. Mollie greeted her joyfully. "Now," cried she, "we will have time to look over the photographs I have wanted to show you of your 'settlement' friends. This, as you know, is the matron." In eager interest two heads bent over the views.

"Would you believe," Mollie presently reminded, "that it is now time to go downstairs?" The nurse arose directly. At the doctor's office she waited until her charge had entered the room. "I will call for you in the course of half an hour," she said.

Safely inside, Mollie heaved a sigh of relief. Yes, the moments stolen by the showing of the photographs had answered their purpose—the doctor had gone. He had spoken of leaving the hospital at 8:15, and Mollie had planned and desperately counted upon finding the room empty; then it would be but one daring dash to the "entry" and—freedom. What joy to conquer that determined young surgeon—what humiliation to suffer defeat at his hands! Suddenly Mollie's wandering gaze fell upon a fur coat thrown upon the couch. The doctor's hat and medicine case lay beside it. So he was still in the building; had stepped out perhaps to inquire of her lateness; in a moment he would return and then—Her resolve instantly made, Mollie caught up the long coat, buttoning it about her tall young figure. With a gleeful chuckle she pulled the soft hat down over her ears; then, medicine case in hand, looking neither to the right nor left, she strode across the hall, and the great, noiseless doors closed behind her.

When Dr. Joyce re-entered his sanctum a short time after he impatiently summoned the nurse. "If Miss Stillwell has changed her mind regarding that appointment she must let me know," he said. "I have already waited past the time asked to bring her here."

"I did bring her," the nurse answered perplexedly, "a little while ago."

"Then she has no doubt returned to her room. Kindly make inquiry."

But Miss Stillwell was not to be found in her room or in the corridor nor, upon a later search, in the entire hospital. When Dr. Joyce looked about for his coat preparatory to interviewing his waiting chauffeur the coat had mysteriously disappeared. So also, upon further investigation, had the doctor's car itself. Visibly perplexed, the usually calm minded doctor returned to the office. A search of the adjoining hospital grounds failed to throw any light upon her disappearance, and the doctor was about to settle down into wrathful despair when the telephone bell jangled across his troubled senses.

"Dr. Joyce," questioned a merry, mocking voice, "are you still enforcing quarantine? Because if you are you had better send back for your automobile. I had to borrow it in order to get away. The hill was very dark and very steep. This is Mollie Stillwell."

"You—got—away?" The doctor seemed incapable of grasping any other fact. "Yes," the triumphant tone continued; "your car beneath my window with me the idea. But I never should have been able to reach it unobserved without the aid of your soft hat and long cloak obligingly left upon the office couch. The medicine case helped too. You had told me that your chauffeur would expect you at 8:15, so I jumped into the car at just that time. It seemed advisable to slip out of it at your house door—so I did. But when the man had driven away it was necessary to bring your things home with me, and now, with all due apologies, how shall I get them to you?"

The question broke off in a breathless laugh, while a sudden smile twitched at the doctor's lips and grew and danced in his deep set eyes.

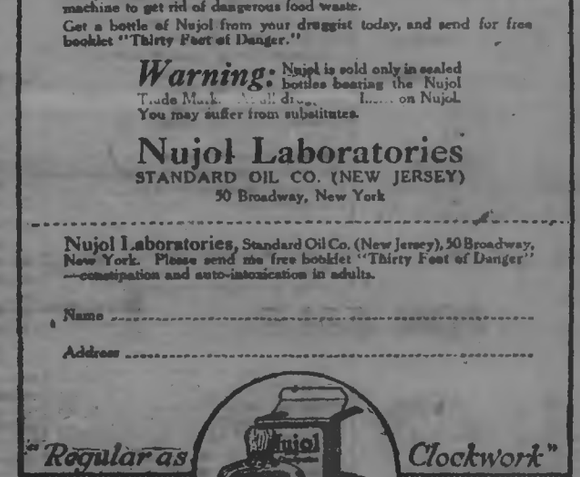
"Am I to understand that you deliberately made your escape in my coat, in my car and carrying my tools and toxins with you?"

"I did." The admission was far from regretful.

"Then under the circumstances"—he paused impressively—"there is but one thing to be done. With your permission I shall call to collect my belongings."

"Please come—at once," said Mollie.

And, while her friends agreed Mollie should have had a husband to control her wayward will, she married the surgeon who glories in it instead. But "nothing ever happened to Mollie as actly as it should."



The Hopper

But all that goes into it must pass easily through the narrow outlet at the bottom. If the man on the job goes away and leaves the mixture to harden in the hopper—he gets fired—that's all.

And the machine is put out of working order for a time.

It's easy for you to satisfy your appetite with food. But if you neglect yourself, and the food waste dries out, hardens and stagnates in your lower bowel—if you become constipated—your body machinery will suffer; and if you try to get rid of the mass by taking castor oil, pills, salts, mineral waters, etc., to force the bowels to move, you will only make matters worse.

You can't fire yourself for neglect. And you can't cure constipation by forming the habit of taking medicine every time you want your bowels to move. But you can overcome the trouble by taking Nujol.

Nujol brings about the habit of easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals, because Nujol is not a drug, does not act like any drug.

Nujol brings about a return to Nature's methods by supplying necessary lubrication of the bowel contents, by facilitating intestinal muscular action, by absorbing poisonous matter, and thus securing necessary cleansing of the intestinal canal.

Nujol makes you regular as clockwork—use it, and you'll not have to worry about the size of your appetite or the ability of your body machine to get rid of dangerous food waste.

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today, and send for free booklet "Thirty Feet of Danger."

Warning: Nujol is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Refuse all drugs [illegible] on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM MURRAY, OF BROOKLYN, ENDS HIS LIFE.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 29.—Captain William Murray, formerly in charge of the reserve officers' training camps at the University of Pennsylvania and at Notre Dame University, South Bend, Ind., committed suicide by shooting at a hotel here. He was twenty-nine years old and recently was assigned to Camp Grant for duty.

He left a note leaving his possessions to his father, said to reside at No. 435½ Classon Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. There was also a special envelope said to contain a note received by Captain Murray from a young woman of South Bend named "Mary."

Military intelligence officers who took charge of the body, said that there was nothing to denote that the suicide was due to anything in his military life.

A NEW YORK MAN LOSES $15,000 IN GEMS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 29. —Loss of a travelling bag containing jewelry valued at $15,000 while on a train en route here was reported by Abram Walters, a jeweller, of No. 12 East 118th street, New York, who said the bag was taken while he was taking a nap.

"DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR

Stop dandruff and double beauty of your hair for few cents.

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Your hair appears soft, glossy and twice as thick and abundant. Try it!

A shipbuilder tells of an Irishman who sought employment as a diver in the service of one of the shipbuilding companies.

The first job to which the Irishman was assigned was to be performed in comparatively shallow water. He was provided with a pick and told to use it on a ledge below.

Mike was put into a diver's suit, and, with his pick, was sent down to tackle the ledge. For about fifteen minutes nothing was heard from him. Then came a strong, determined, deliberate pull on the signal rope, indicating that Mike had a very decided wish to come to the top. The assistants hastily pulled him to the raft and removed his helmet.

"Take off the rist of it," said Mike.

"Why, what's the matter?" asked they.

"Take off the rist of it," doggedly reiterated Mike; "I'll wur-rk no longer on a job where I can't spit on me hands."

A NEST BUILDING FISH.

Nature Affords a Safe Asylum For the Helpless Fishes.

It is doubtful whether protective mimicry among animals is better exemplified than in the case of the fish commonly known as the marbled angler of the Sargasso sea (Pterophryne histrio). Owing to its peculiar structure it is a poor swimmer, and it therefore spends most of its life moving slowly about on the bottom among corals, seaweed, etc., which these fishes closely resemble in color and in outline. They cling, too, to the floating masses of sargassum weed with their peculiar fins, and the color markings of the fish closely resemble the weed itself. Not only does the weed thus furnish a home for this species, but the fish actually constructs a nest from it and therein deposits its eggs. One of these nests, found in connection with the Hassler expedition, was described as consisting of a round mass of sargassum about the size of two fists rolled up together. To all appearances it was made of nothing but this gulf weed, the branches and leaves of which were, however, evidently knit together and not merely tangled into a roundish mass, for, though some of the leaves and branches hung loose from the nest, it became at once visible that the bulk of the ball was held together by threads trending in every direction among the seaweed. By close observation it became apparent that this mass of seaweed was a nest, the central part of which was bound up in the form of a ball, with several loose branches extending in various directions. On still closer examination the nest above described was found to be full of eggs, which were scattered throughout the mass.

Nature has thus afforded a safe asylum for these somewhat helpless fishes, whose cutaneous filaments, which are plentifully provided on the belly, around the mouth and on the dorsal spine, so nearly resemble the weed itself that predaceous fishes doubtless fail to recognize the living animals, and thus the latter escape extermination.—Scientific American.

Flowers For London.

In Scilly and Guernsey the industry of growing early flowers for the London market has reached large proportions. From the former island as many as fifty tons of early spring blossoms are shipped to the mainland in a single day. The flower season begins in January, when the early varieties are coming into bloom. Often, when the weather is cold and cloudy, the buds are tardy in opening, and it is necessary to resort to artificial aid in order that the waiting markets may be supplied. The flower heads are picked as soon as one bud penetrates the calyx and placed in jars of water, which are ranged upon the shelves of a greenhouse kept at a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees. In a few hours the backward buds respond to the genial warmth, spread their petals, assume their glowing colors and are ready for bunching and packing.

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" IF CROSS, SICK, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

50,000 U.S. VOLUNTEERS FOR EUROPEAN SERVICE

WASHINGTON, March 29.—An immediate call for 50,000 volunteers for service in Europe has been prepared by the War Department and will be published today. As an incentive to enlistment the men will be offered early duty in France as a relief for men in the expeditionary forces who wish to return home.

Enlistment in this special force will be for three years. The men will be concentrated at Camp Meade, Maryland, and probably will be sent overseas in contingents 1,000 strong.

INCREASE POTATO CROP

How to Check Serious Diseases in Ontario.

Leaf Roll and Mosaic Are Firmly Established and Reduce Yields One-third — How to Detect Diseases and Only Way to Control Them.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE two most serious seed-borne potato diseases in Ontario are Leaf Roll and Mosaic. Other seed-borne potato diseases common in the Province are Black Leg, Rhizoctonia, Blight, Wilt and Scab. Leaf Roll and Mosaic cause a very marked reduction in the yield, and the fact that these two diseases are so prevalent in Southern Ontario accounts for the poor crop of potatoes that has been obtained in many parts of the Province for the past four years.

Leaf Roll.—The cause of this disease is unknown. Data gathered by the pathologists of the United States and Canada shows that Leaf Roll may reduce the yield to about one-third of the normal crop.

Symptoms.—Symptoms of Leaf Roll are very variable. Affected plants are always more or less dwarfed and in some varieties the leaves assume a characteristic upright, almost staring habit, instead of drooping over in the normal way. Rolling of the lower leaves is always associated with the disease. The rolled leaves on plants affected with this disease begin to die early. The harsh, leathery texture of such leaves is a constant symptom. The tubers of affected plants are small and are borne generally on very short tuber-branches (stolons) or even attached in a cluster to the stem. Tubers from affected plants invariably produce diseased plants. There is also evidence to show that the disease may spread from plant to plant in the field.

Prevention.—The only sure way of avoiding loss from Leaf Roll is to secure fresh seed from districts free from this disease. Fortunately, this is possible, as Northern Ontario and certain sections of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are comparatively free from this trouble. In experiments carried on in Old Ontario by the Agricultural Representatives with seed potatoes from South Ontario, New Brunswick and Northern Ontario, it was found that the average amount of Leaf Roll in the plants from the seed from the three different sources was as follows:—

Old Ontario	45.5%
New Brunswick	5.1
Northern Ontario	1.4

These figures strongly emphasize the desirability of obtaining northern-grown potato seed.

Mosaic.—The cause of this disease is also unknown. It has been observed in many fields in Ontario. When severe there is a very noticeable reduction in the crop. Data gathered by the pathologists of the United States and Canada shows that this disease may reduce the yield by one-half.

Symptoms.—The foliage of plants affected with Mosaic is somewhat wrinkled or corrugated and mottled with faint, light green or yellowish spots. The stalks of the diseased plants are often more bare near the ground than those of healthy ones, partly because the affected foliage does not spread out and drop down normally, and partly because the lower leaves sometimes fall off in the last stages of severe attacks. The tubers of affected plants are normal-looking and sound and their keeping or eating qualities are not impaired.

Prevention.—If Mosaic is abundant in a field the surest and quickest way of eliminating it is by obtaining fresh seed from a non-infected district. Such seed can be obtained at the present time from Northern Ontario.

General Suggestions For the Prevention of Seed-borne Potato Diseases.

In order to avoid loss from Leaf Roll and Mosaic, the source of seed is of the utmost importance. Seed potatoes free from these diseases can be obtained from Northern Ontario. Only certified seed, however, can be relied upon. For information concerning certified northern-grown potato seed write Mr. Justus Miller, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Canada.

Even certified northern-grown seed is not a panacea for all diseases. In order to avoid loss from such seed-borne potato diseases as Black Leg, Rhizoctonia, Wilt, Blight and Scab, the following precautions should be taken:

1. Select for seed smooth, sound tubers, as free as possible from scab, black, hard lumps on the surface, and abnormal discolorations of the skin or flesh.

2. Disinfect all seed before cutting with formalin or corrosive sublimate. The latter substance is the more reliable for the prevention of Rhizoctonia.

3. When cutting potatoes have at hand two or three knives and a jar containing a 20 per cent. solution of formalin. After cutting into a tuber which shows signs of rot drop the knife into the formalin, discard the diseased potato and take a fresh knife from the formalin solution for the next cutting.

4. Spray every year with Bordeaux mixture for the prevention of Late Blight and Rot. Such spraying is an insurance which it is not safe to neglect.

5. Rogue the growing crop once or twice during the summer, or at least that portion of it from which the seed is to be saved. This operation consists in the removal and destruction of any plants showing signs of such diseases as Leaf Roll, Mosaic, Black Leg, Rhizoctonia and Wilt.

6. Practice a rotation of crops and if possible plant potatoes after clover sod.—Prof. J. E. Howett, O. A. College, Guelph.

WHY HIS MARRIAGE FAILED.

He regarded children as a nuisance.

He did all his courting before marriage.

He doled out money to his wife as if to a beggar.

He never dreamed that there were two sides to marriage.

He never dreamed that a wife needs praise or compliments.

He thought his wife should spend all her time doing housework.

He treated his wife as he would not have dared to treat another woman.

He never dreamed that his wife needed a vacation, recreation or change.

He never made concessions to his wife's judgment, even in unimportant matters.

He thought the marriage vow had made him his wife's master instead of her partner.

He took all the little attentions lavished on him by his wife as his by "divine right" and not as favors.—Success.

NO CONSTIPATION NO PILES

We think, without a doubt, that constipation is the most prevalent, and at the same time, one of the greatest troubles human nature is afflicted with, and causes more sickness than anything else.

Unless a free action of the bowels occurs at least once a day, constipation is sure to ensue, then comes the sore and uncomfortable piles, sick and bilious headaches, coated tongue, obnoxious breath, sour stomach, heartburn, water brash, and many other ailments.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, thus removing the constipation and its allied troubles.

Mr. Dan Doucette, Eel River Crossing, N.B., writes: — "Having been troubled for years with constipation and trying everything I know of, a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I used four vials and am completely cured. I can gladly recommend them to anyone who suffers from constipation."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have been on the market for the past 35 years, and have been used with the best results by thousands of people in that time, and we have yet to hear of a complaint as to their curative powers.

PLAINT OF A NOISE HATER.

This Rich Man Would Like to Kill a Whole Lot of People.

As a public protest against shrieking motor horns and yelping dogs a retired Manchester merchant has canceled a bequest of £30,000 to the local hospitals. Writing to the London Mail, he says:

"I have become so disgusted by the stupidity of the authorities who allow the health of the people to be ruined by fiendish noises from motorcars, yelping dogs, etc., that I have made up my mind as a protest to cancel a bequest in my will of £30,000 to Manchester hospitals. I shall divert the money to other channels, where I hope it will be put to better use than patching up people who do not appear to have sense enough to protest against these brutal and unnecessary nuisances, which are destroying the health of thousands of people, including myself.

"I am suffering from nervous irritation, and for seven years I have been seeking some place where I can be quiet. I have lived in London, Manchester, Southport and St. Anne-on-the-Sea. They are all bad. Now I am going to live in Cheltenham. The town clerk there assures me they have bylaws against yelping dogs, bawling hawkers, shrieking motorcar horns and crowing fowls. If these bylaws are not properly enforced at Cheltenham I shall go to live in the Hartz mountains under a sensible government. I have not definitely decided what I shall do with my money. I would like to spend it all on powder and shot for the people who make and encourage unnecessary noise."

No Cure For Cancer Yet.

In his annual report Dr. E. E. Bashford, general superintendent of research in the laboratories of the imperial cancer research fund, told the members of the society that during the past year there had been twelve claims to the discovery of a cure for cancer. All of these had been investigated and no justification for any one of these claims had been obtained. Dr. Bashford also said women were more liable to cancer than men. In England and Wales in 1910 the death rate from cancer was 858 per million for men and 1,070 for women.

As the London Times says editorially in commenting upon this report, "The only reasonable expectation of curing cancer still rests upon its complete removal by the surgeon at the earliest possible time after it is discovered."

PICTURES UNDER GLASS.

A Scheme That Is Ruining Valuable Paintings in the Louvre.

The Louvre museum has been unfortunate with its Leonardo da Vinci paintings. The "Mona Lisa" was stolen some time ago, and now a picture of St. Anne by the same artist has been attacked by parasitical growths attributed to the dampness that collects between the glass and the canvass. It will be recalled that after several pictures had been slashed by maniacs the Louvre authorities decided to cover the most valuable paintings with glass. This innovation brought forth a storm of protest. An ingenious reporter stationed himself in front of one masterpiece and proceeded to shave himself, and when an attendant interfered he explained that he wished to show that the pictures were still of use. The authorities, however, refused to give way and the glass has remained for almost four years.

The Louvre experts have now discovered that this innovation has been disastrous in that the glass retains the humidity and this humidity, under the effect of heat, evaporates and disintegrates the paint.

The technical service of the museum proposes to try a new method of covering the pictures with glass which will allow the air to circulate freely.

Meanwhile the glass has been removed from many of the pictures, especially those that are not within reach of visitors to the museum. The Louvre's latest acquisition, Van der Weyden's triptych, for which $160,000 was paid, is under glass, and as it is placed opposite a window, it is often impossible to see more than a reflection of the window curtains.—New York Sun.

Tenders For Hunter Street Bridge Range From Sum of $250,000 to $300,000

Exact Statement is Withheld By Committee Until the Tenders Have Been Carefully Examined and Doubtful Points Made Clear —Some Bids Received for Steel Bridge.

TOTAL OF 13 TENDERS

Thirteen tenders for the Hunter street bridge were received by the Board of Works last night. Some of them were clear, concise and explicit, but the phraseology of others was confusing not only to the Committee but also to Mr. Frank Barber, the Council's consulting engineer and to City Engineer Parsons. As the easiest way out of the difficulty of interpreting the uncertain and beclouded tenders, the Board took a leaf from the League of Nations handbook and appointed its own Big Four, Mayor Duncan, Ald. Phelan, Mr. Barber and Mr. Parsons to scrutinize and collate all the tenders, if necessary to call in the contractors and engineers, who are assembled at at the Empress in numbers that suggest a convention, for their explanations upon the points that appeared fog-bound last night. By this means it is expected that a unanimous report will be prepared and presented to the Board this afternoon if possible.

There was no definite statement for publication this morning, and Ald. Phelan told the reporters last night that their presence was not desired while the momentous event of opening the tenders was in progress. Whether the entire committee indorsed this dictum or not was not announced. Ald. Phelan's instructions after all caused little disappointment for long typewritten letters embodying the tenders were more or less puzzling, and at twelve o'clock when the last bulky envelope had yielded its bid, the Board had anything but a clear understanding of exact prices quoted in the tenders.

Will Translate Tenders

This morning the sub-committee devoted three hours to the work of translating the communications into aldermanic language and of reducing them to terms and figures that can be easily compared.

It was expected that a definite report might be ready by three o'clock this afternoon. The Board was advised to call at the Committee rooms at that hour, when questions would be answered and explanations made.

One of the Aldermen last night expressed his impression of the tenders in a statement that some of the bids were low enough to warrant the Council proceeding at once with the construction of a concrete bridge following the Barber plans, without any eliminations or alterations.

Some of the tenders were for a steel bridge, several of them offered an alternative quotation on the proposed reduction in width, but the most of them were based on the plans and specifications as advertised.

Two Peterboro contractors, R. Sheehy and Son and David Conroy, submitted tenders. It is understood that the bids for concrete range from approximately $250,000 to slightly more than $300,000

Squabble of Party Leaders

"General Ludendorff Saved Germany From Russian Invasion."

(United Press.)

BERNE, April 2. — What the Vossische Zeitung calls a "Scheidemann-Ludendorff duel," is now raging throughout Germany, with political parties of the right and left lining up against each other.

"The time has come to defend the organisers of the revolution," declares the Vorwaerts. "We do not fear a battle against reaction."

The Vorwaerts praises Chancellor Scheidemann's attack on General Ludendorff.

"It was due to Ludendorff that Germany was preserved from the Czar's steam roller," says that newspaper. "It is now inadmissable to make such a manifestation against a leader who served his country with all the forces at his command for four years."

SITUATION IN RUSSIA

Premier Lenine Has Submitted a Proposal to the Peace Conference—Internal Conditions.

TYPHUS PLAGUE

By Lowell Mallet.
(United Press.)

PARIS, April 2.—There is now before the Peace Conference a definite and concrete proposal from the Russian government for a cessation of hostilities bearing Premier Lenine's signature.

There is also authoritative information that Karl Kautsky, a German radical, is now in Moscow, trying to arrange a formal alliance between Germany and Russia. In the light of these two facts, the peace delegates are giving more thought to Russia than official comuniques indicate.

The reports made by William Bullit, special agent of the American delegation, and Lincoln Steffens, writer and private investigator, are undergoing the gravest consideration, as they represent not only the latest, but the most detailed and best information on actual conditions in Russia as well as the actions of Russia's leaders.

Secrecy Maintained.

The greatest secrecy surrounds the Lenine document, but it is known that it offers a way to end hostilities between the Russian and British governments.

The willingness of the delegates to give thoughtful consideration to the new proposition is believed to be the outgrowth of various considerations, the most important of which is that it presents an apparent opportunity to break at the outset the rapidly forming Bolshevik front—Russia and Hungary, and with Germany, Roumania and Serbia in the ... The conferees frankly admit ... the prospect of facing a real alignment of those five countries. With Russia eliminated it is felt that the keystone of the structure will be gone.

Typhus Epidemic.

Another important factor is that medical men are becoming greatly alarmed at the possible spread of the typhus epidemic westward from Russia, emphasizing the fact that disease recognizes no national boundaries. It is learned from an authoritative source that information based on the report of the Director of Health in Petrograd, shows the following conditions there:

Thirty or forty thousand of the estimated population of a million are now in hospitals. Seventy thousand are seriously ill in their homes, to whom it is impossible to give more than a tenth of the amount of food they need. In addition there are 100,000 who are ill, but who are able to go to the city kitchens. Most of them have swollen limbs and other ailments brought on by lack of food.

The Death Rate.

The death rate in Petrograd is 195 a day. There are 4,000 cases of spotted typhus in the city, with 18 deaths daily. Typhus is increasing, and cholera and bubonic plague are expected to make their appearance this spring.

Thirty-five hundred houses have broken sewers and water pipes, which it is impossible to repair because of lack of materials, adding to the menace of health.

Children are the only part of the population who are not hungry. The children are fed in the schools or in private homes. During the nine months thirty thousand children have been placed in small groups in requisitioned homes and arrangements have been made to care for more than 10,000 others by this system in the next three months.

Milk is difficult to get. There is no canned milk in the city. The government has discontinued passenger traffic until April 10 to enable 60 to 100 carload of food to be brought into Petrograd daily.

Self Government.

Beyond the written document Lenine is said to be ready to assure self-government for all former Russian territories which desire to break away from the Soviet government. It is understood he will also promise the Allies to abstain from propaganda work in the Allied countries taking the view that the best propaganda will be the actual success of the Soviet system of government.

Information now before the Peace Conference shows the Russian government is really functioning, that railroads are running and that good order prevails in the interior. The Red army is now said to number more than a million well organized men, under competent officers, who accept the same hardships as the ... citizens, the greatest of which is insufficient food.

Peterboro Board of Trade Got Away to Good Start At Last Night's Meeting

Large and Representative Body of Citizens Present at the Annual Meeting—Ald. J. J. Turner Was Re-elected President—Stirring Address by Mr. Ryerson Ritchie—Membership Fee Fixed at Ten Dollars.

MEMBERS FAVOUR GOOD ROADS

The oft repeated statement that Peterboro is a good city to live in and possesses innumerable natural advantages, was reiterated last night at the annual meeting of the Board of Trade held in the new quarters above the Dominion Bank. Representatives from every mercantile, industrial and professional activity in the city were present and Pres. J. J. Turner stated that it was the largest meeting of the Board of Trade held since he has been associated with the Board. Well over 150 were present representing almost every walk of life and in the words of Mr. J. J. Hartley, "The Board of Trade has just begun."

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

President—Mr. J. J. Turner.
Vice-President—Mr. Thomas Barrie.
Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. Basil D. Hall.

Mr. J. J. Turner, who has been the moving spirit of the Board of Trade for three years was accorded an acclamation as executive head of the Board of 1919. Mr. W. R. Breyfogle was nominated for the Presidency, but declined to stand. He also withdrew, but with much opposition by Mr. J. J. Hartley and others, from his nomination of Vice-President. Mr. Frank Whitehouse, Vice-President for 1918, and Mr. Thomas Barrie were also nominated and both wished to withdraw in favour of Mr. Breyfogle. Mr. Breyfogle contended that the retail merchants who form such a large part of the Board should be represented on the executive. He was a representative of the manufacturers and the incumbent of the presidential chair was a scion of that branch of the Board. Mr. Barrie finally reluctantly accepted the nomination and was elected by acclamation. Mr. B. D. Hall was re-elected Secretary-Treasurer until a permanent officer for that position can be secured.

THE MEMBERSHIP FEE

Heretofore Two Dollars has been the annual fee for membership on the Board, but the meeting felt this sum was inadequate. Mr. G. N. Gordon, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, owing to his absence from the city, was unable to present a report to be submitted to the Board regarding the question of fees. Mr. J. W. Fraser, a member of the committee outlined the report of the committee in this regard. The sum of $10,000 was needed by the Board for work which they intended to undertake and to raise this amount they asked that $10 per annum be made the general membership fee. The committee was also of the opinion that different bodies of the Board would contribute lump sums to the common treasury. Mr. Fraser spoke at length on the service membership which he submitted to the Board for approval. This membership would cost $25 per annum and would entitle the member to consult a credit bureau which would be established by the Board which would give the standing of every citizen. He thought that it would mean a big saving to the retail men and would tend to eliminate all bad debts. He submitted an idea that the rate of $25 should not be a flat rate but made according to the size and importance of the business to which the member belonged.

INDUSTRIAL COMPETITION

President Turner—"The merchants in the city, there are over 300 of them, would be glad of the plan. If 100 merchants joined it would mean $2500 to the treasury. We should be independent of the City Council for funds. It is not our intention to compete for industries but to show manufacturers that Peterboro is the one place to establish and to convince him that our arguments are sound and also that it would be detrimental to him to establish in any other place.

"The credit bureau would be for the use of doctors, merchants and everybody who deal with the public."

The discussion veered back to the fixing of $10 as a general fee for one year. Dr. E. E. Harvey was heartily in favour of $10 a year. Mr. F. D. Kerr suggested that a sliding scale be made. He thought that some people of the city should be members of the Board who could not afford $10 a year.

Mr. G. O. Cameron—"We've had a Board of Trade since the wet year of '42 at $2 a year and what has it been? We need the money. If we even made it higher than $10 then we may be able to do something."

Mr. Reg. Turner—"I would like to see the membership open to the man who can't afford $10."

Mr. J. W. Worth was in favour of a regular membership of $10 and an associate membership of $2. Mr. C. E. Canfield wanted an associate membership at $5 a year.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, figuratively speaking, settled the matter when he said he was not much in favour of degrees. "If a man is a $5 member he won't care to let people know about it. Whatever you do you should have only one fee. A sliding fee would throw a reflection on a certain class of people."

Mr. Vincent Eastwood—"We will have to make a campaign for membership. Five dollars isn't worth going for."

Dr. Harvey created a laugh when speaking of the whirlwind campaign which netted Goderich Board of Trade such a large membership. "I lived in Goderich some years ago and the cemetery was the only live spot in the town."

Somebody from the rear—"Mr. Harvey being a doctor we can still live in hope."

Ten dollars per annum was finally decided upon.

GOOD ROADS

Good Roads came up for discussion and all present were in favour of it. Following in the footsteps of the City Council on Monday night a resolution moved by Mr. W. H. Bradburn and seconded by Mr. R. B. Rogers, was passed, asking the Government to take over the Peterboro-Port Hope road as a Provincial Highway.

FINANCE REPORT

Mr. B. D. Hall submitted the following financial report:—Assets $8.30, Liabilities $40.00.

Mr. J. Barrie, chairman of the committee appointed to furnish the new Board of Trade rooms, read a report which showed that it cost between $500 and $550 for furniture.

At the conclusion of the meeting President Turner acted as host and light refreshments were served.

"In reviewing, as it is my duty to do, the activities of our Board, since the last annual meeting held about a year ago," said Mr. J. J. Turner, "I desire you to remember that during the greater part of that time our country, and in fact all the great nations of the world, were engaged in the most stupendous conflict that has ever been waged on this planet, and as our enemies were putting forth their greatest effort the world was struck with awe as it contemplated the consequences of success of the movement. Commercial conditions and public policy were not thoroughly understood and appreciated, and, naturally enough, our organization was hampered by doubts as to the best course to pursue.

Complete Success

"Our aims have met with absolute success. We stand on ... of a new era. Despite ... for sacrifice. ... past four and a half years and partly also because of them I have every expectation that Canada will show in the reconstruction period that we are now passing through the ability to adapt itself to the new conditions that confront the world and to become a very important factor in establishing a sound commercial fabric that will establish industry, and commerce, and protect national and individual wealth.

"In the ancient times when nation conquered nation it subjected the defeated to heavy toll in wealth and manhood and created a vassal state. Canada has shown the world the folly of such a course. We, as a free, independent unit in the British Empire have fully justified the confidence reposed in the fathers of Confederation in giving them control of the destiny of this great inheritance ... is ours.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Germany is More in Mood to Sign Treaty Than She Was Several Days Ago.

THE SAAR VALLEY

By William Phillip Simms.
(United Press.)

PARIS, April 2.— Final decisions upon the most important questions before the Peace Conference will be reached before Saturday, according to the belief expressed in crtain official quarters to-day.

Meanwhile, Marshal Foch is expected to make plain to Mathias Erzberger at the Spa to-morrow that the Allies will stand for no trickery of any sort at Danzig or any other place.

In the light of recent events, the peace delegates apparently are imbued with the necessity for speeding up their work to prevent further loss of prestige, which would facilitate German attempts at haggling and sidestepping in Versailles.

The "Big Four."

Foch, it is believed, has won over the "big four" to his ideas of settling the Rhine question, along lines recently forecast by the United Press —elimination of all military works on the left bank and within a zone of fifty kilometres (31 miles) on the right bank. An agreement seems to have been reached that France shall have the right to exploit the entire Saar valley, as compensation for destruction of mines in Northern France. The Saar region probably will be controlled under special regulations to be incorporated in the final treaty.

Information received here in official circles indicates that Germany is more in the mood to sign the treaty than she was even four days ago. It is believed Foch will increase this inclination.

The Literature of Canada and the United States

Last evening in the studio in the Public Library Building, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Langley addressed the members of the local branch of the Women's Art Association and their friends. "The Pioneer Literature of Canada and the United States" was very ably dealt with and the addresses were much enjoyed by those present.

Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, president of the W.A.A., occupied the chair.

A vote of appreciation was moved by Mrs. A. Stevenson, seconded by Miss Helen Denison, and tendered Mr. and Mrs. Langley.

FRANK JENNE says:

"Public ownership and operation by Federal Provincial and municipal governments seems to be disastrous. 'Other People's Money' doesn't seem to keep the caretakers awake when the burglarious-minded lobbyist gets busy.

"Since 1914—with Government ownership of railways, freight and passenger rates have gone up, and the Government at Ottawa is now arguing with itself as to whether it can cover C.N.R. and G.T.P. and I. C.R. deficits with an increase in express rates.

"Every municipal street railway in Canada is losing money; Beck's hydro-power schemes will just about wreck our rich province.

"Still, we continue to pay the excess freight and sell Semi-Ready suits at the same price West as East—the label's in the pocket."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2ND, 1919.

A TECHNICAL POINT

It is stated that the proprietors of some of the groceries in the outlying sections of the city have decided that they will not use the Daylight Saving time so far as the closing of their stores in the evening is concerned. In this decision they are within their legal rights because the City Council's request that summer time be adopted in Peterboro carries no compulsion with it and citizens are at liberty to do as they see fit in regard to what time they shall use. The grocers, however, who decide to remain loyal to the solar time in closing their stores, should be consistent in their policy. If they are opposed to Daylight Saving they should open their places of business in the morning according to the old time, if they are going to use that time in determining the hour for closing. But on the other hand, if they intend to begin business under the new time and close according to the old time they will be laying themselves open to the suspicion that they are not so much interested in maintaining solar time as they are in taking advantage of a technicality to keep their stores open an hour longer than usual. With the system now generally in force it would be better for all concerned if the citizens united in "playing the game," and used the Daylight time.

THE BOARD OF TRADE

If the people of Peterboro rally around the organization and give it the loyal support and encouragement that its aims and ideals merit, the local Board of Trade promises to speedily enter upon a new era of progress and advancement. The reports presented at the annual meeting last night, the enthusiasm shown by those in atendance, the announcement of important plans for the future all indicate that the Board of Trade will be a splendid power for good in the community.

Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board in his splendd address struck the nail squarely on the head when he emphasized the responsibility of the individual citizen.

"It is our earnest wish and our expectation that from these rooms will come ideas, plans, help, co-operation and works that will be of great benefit to the City of Peterboro and to mankind in general," said the president. "To accomplish this result it is necessary for every member and every citizen to take the Board of Trade seriously. The officers and executive take it seriously and are willing to devote their time, talents and money without stint to make it a success. Will you all fall in line now, when it means more than perhaps at any time in Canada's history and resolve and pledge yourselves when a call is made to attend a meeting you will be there, sharp on time, to pay your annual dues you will send them to the treasurer instead of waiting to be called upon personally, to give your opinion you will do so if you have one, to be a booster you will not knock and to improve conditions you will do your part? With the co-operation of the citizens the Board of Trade can do anything it sets out to do for the city of Peterboro. If all the work is left to one or two or ten the effort required is too great."

Mr. Turner is quite right. No matter how perfect may be the plans adopted and how well organized the Board of Trade, the results desired cannot be accomplished unless there is whole hearted support from the people of Peterboro. The Board is now splendidly ready for the problems that it is undertaking. Rooms have been rented in the Dominion Bank Building as headquarters. They were needed—little could be accomplished without a meeting place. The organization of the Board is as Mr. Turner pointed out in his address, "well formed and well manned." There is a central executive composed of three representatives of each section comprising the Board's members. These sections include the manufacturers, the merchants, the clearing house, the lawyers, the Trades and Labor Council, representing organized labor, the physic-

by its President, Vice-president and Secretary, while in addition the central council includes in its members the President, Vice President and Secretary of the Board of Trade with the Mayor of the City as an ex-officio member. This seems like a business-like and representative alignment of the different elements in the business life of the community and the possibilities before such an organization, if the people of Peterboro do their share in supporting the efforts of the Board are manifestly great.

Mr. Turner did well to point out to the residents of the city their individual responsibility as acting as publicity agents for Peterboro on every possible occasion. "A little appreciation of the advantages enjoyed by us here," he remarked, "may be the means of securing a new resident, a distributing house, a factory or a public institution."

The advice is good. If our people will get in behind the Board of Trade and boost Peterboro, wherever the chance arises the development of the city will be fast enough to surprise the most optimistic citizen.

CITY BUILDING.

One of the outstanding features of last evening's meeting of the Board of Trade was Mr. Ryerson Ritchie's carefully prepared and most inspiring address upon City Building. Peterborough is fortunate to claim as a citizen an expert of Mr. Ritchie's continental reputation. His services as an organizer of Chambers of Commerce have been profitably utilized by a number of big American cities and his career along these lines has been a most successful one. His views, therefore, on the subject of the progress of Peterboro, based as they are on a life-time experience in studying the factors that must necessarily enter into the development of any city, are of unusual importance and interest and will lead, it is hoped, to the adoption by the Board of Trade of a plan that will meet the needs of the situation.

Mr. Ritchie reminded his hearers that if Peterboro's problems are to be left to the individual or to little groups of individuals, this city will necessarily lag behind in the coming race for position. "The prosperity of the future and the future of the city will be in the hands of the many, not of the few," remarked Mr. Ritchie. "The trend toward that condition imposes a new and patriotic responsibility upon those men and women who are especially fitted for leadership. It is of very great importance as we plan our city's future, that all the parts forming the community, shall work smoothly and in unison, each carrying its fair share of the load—no more, no less."

The responsibility for organizing the city for the effort that is considered essential, Mr. Ritchie believed should be assumed by the Board of Trade which the speaker suggested was composed of the leading associations that represent trade, industry and the professions, and which should set out to devise and work upon a comprehensive plan of city building. The aims which the Board should endeavour to attain were set forth as follows: the expansion of industry, the acquirement and improvement of parks and public grounds, improved and more practical moral, physical and manual education and the better conduct and administration of public affairs.

These are all objects for which the people of Peterboro should be anxious to strive and it is encouraging to note that the Board of Trade, following Mr. Ritchie's needed address has already taken steps to put his suggestions into practice.

TIMELY ACTION

The despatch of General Mangin to Eastern Europe, with a view to possible operations on the Hungarian fronties and in Southwestern Russia, is as timely as it is essential. It will demonstrate to Germany and her accomplices that the Entente Allies are in no mood to be trifled with, and that the attempt to jockey and intimidate the conference into a German peace is recognized and is not going to be permitted. It is now fully understood that the transfer of authority by Count Karolyi to a so-called Soviet government is part of a conspiracy between himself and the real leaders in Germany, that the Hungarian "revolution" is a fake and the "declaration of war" against the Entente Allies a piece of colossal impudence.

But that sort of thing cannot be tolerated, for it is encouraging forces of disorder which if let loose will hinder the work of reconstruction in Europe and spread to other countries. It will stand in the way of sending relief to distressed peoples and prevent the Czechoslovaks from setting up a firm administration and securing control over territories to which they are entitled. Hungary should not be slow to profit by the plain warning she has received of the consequences of her disorderly action and of entering into further complots with the country which has go further in her desperate policy of fomenting trouble, not only in her own midst but in adjacent countries, the only thing to do will be to "finish the job" with what a French military critic has termed "a thunder stroke" and for an Allied army to march through the country and occupy Berlin.

Meanwhile the despatch of General Mangin on his particular mission, with, it may be presumed, adequate forces, is an act of resolution which can have only the best effect. While it will convince the Huns and the Hungarians that the Allies are not to be intimidated but are sternly in earnest, it will also satisfy the Czechoslovaks and the Roumanians that they are not forgotten and will tend to prevent the spread of Bolshevist ideas in those countries. It may even persuade Lenine, who admits his failure, that the Entente are determined ultimately to relieve Russia from its present bugbear and that the best thing he can do is to hand over the government of the country to those who can be trusted to lead it back to the paths of peace and prosperity.—New York Herald.

Canada's Largest Factories Use Dominion Friction Surface Belting

In practically every first class factory in Canadian industry, Dominion Friction Surface Belting is a satisfactory and efficient part of its equipment. Some of the largest users of transmission belting specify it exclusively.

The reason for this preference is obvious—it will out-serve at lower cost per horse power any belt made. It will conserve power and labor and speed up production.

A broad statement, yes, but our belting experts are ready to convince you that it is more than a statement.

The knowledge and experience of these experts are largely responsible for the "plus service" rendered by Dominion Friction Surface Belting because it is their business to see that the correct type of belt is specified for a given purpose.

Many of Canada's largest manufacturers have found this service so profitable that they have made our experts responsible for the efficiency of all belting equipment in their plants.

This same service of efficiency is open to you, without charge, through any of our Service Branches.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

BENEVOLENCE.

Queen of virtues and lovely star in the crown of life, it is a bright and glorious image of Him who is love. How beautiful it is in a woman's heart. A woman without benevolence is not a woman, she is simply a deformed personality of womanhood. In every heart there are many tendencies to selfishness, but the spirit of benevolence counteracts them all. A hollow, cold, graceless, ungodly thing is a heart without benevolence. In a world like this where we are all so needy and dependent, where our interests are all so interlocked, where our hearts and lives overlap each other and often grow together, we can't live without a great deal of benevolence. Our true earth life is a benevolent one and our highest interests are in the path of benevolence. We do most for ourselves when we do most for others. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Good deeds double in the doing and the larger half comes back to the doer. A large heart of charity is a noble thing. The most benevolent soul lives nearest to God. Selfishness is the root of evil, and benevolence is its cure. In no heart is benevolence more beautiful than in the heart of a youthful woman, and in no heart is selfishness more ugly. To do good is noble but to be good is nobler. This should be the aim of all young men. The poor and needy should occupy a large place in their hearts. The sick and suffering should move on their sympathies. The sinful and criminal should awaken their deepest pity. The oppressed and down trodden should find a place in their compassion.

✧ ✧ ✧

A BRAWLING WOMAN.

A brawling woman can make more contention than any other created thing unless it is a guinea hen or a peacock. A brutal word hurts more than a blow. You can heal a physical hurt there is no balm for a heart bruise. A word is not like a kite. You can't draw it back with a string, once spoken it is like a bird let loose from a cage, it will never come back and be locked behind the bars of forgetfulness again. Would it not be a good idea then, so much as possible, to forego idle gossip about troubles that cant' be helped and to resolve to be mute where we can't say pleasant things. Sympathy is necessary to us all but sympathy carried to an excess is like an overdose of opium; it weakens the fibre and dulls the spirits. Too much chattering about troubles that must be endured rather than cured, will end in making weaklings of us. The way to get along in this world is to keep our breath and our strength for the battlefield, and not waste it in idle chat about the campfire. The man who talks is not the man who does. The time the gallant Sheridan put in in riding down to Winchester would never have immortalized his name had he descended from his horse and talked the situation over with every straggler he met.

✧ ✧ ✧

It's ten thousand times harder to be generous. It is easy enough to give a poor woman a dollar, but when it comes to following a straight line, being just in all things, just to God, to your family, to your children, to all men, it is a different thing. Some men are never just to their wives. They pay their cook $5 very willingly Saturday night but when the hard working, economical, painstaking wife asks for a little money on Monday, the brute will say, "Oh, wife, what do you want with money?"

Is it right for us to complain so much of our hardships and our disappointments? Can we expect to hear a "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" when we are doing so little with the talents given us? Is it reasonable we should expect to be given a world that is full of beauty and of richness if we spend our time here in lamenting the crosses of life? Must a fairer home than this be given us if we close our eyes to all the pictures which nature has drawn to please them, turn a deaf ear to the strains of music that are vibrating the air about us, and murmur of hunger when rare fruits but need the gathering? Can't we do our part a little better? Can't we help others about us to raise the thin curtain of ignorance, doubt or despondency, which is shutting out the light of joy which shines for all? "Thou has been faithful over one city. I will make thee ruler over many." It is not likely that you or I were made to rule cities but we have been given our work to do. Will we be faithful to the trust?

The mother heart does not need soft satin and lace and embroidered linens and rose-hooded candles to make itself felt. It beats just as devotedly and happily under cheap cottons as under silken folds; it watches in the silence of the night by the lowly, humble couch of some little sufferer as tenderly as it does by the side of some other little patient in the splendid mansion; it reaches out to the convict behind the prison doors with the same love that glories in the success of a renowned statesman. Mother love in its countless combination furnishes a theme as old as the hills, perhaps but one from which the noblest of inspirations are drawn. In nearly all relations of life, from those of blood to those of friendship, wonderful combinations can be made—combinations which illustrate to the world the great heights which a pure love can attain, combinations which act as gigantic reflectors which not only send light into dark places but which draw all within reach into the circle of their brightness.

Fill your soul with richness, then when sorrow comes to you her black shadows will be parted into golden rifts by your gathered sunshine.

WAR COST $60,000,000,000.

Crammond Includes Indirect Losses —Predicts Unprecedented Trade.

LONDON,—Edgar Crammond, a prominent British financial writer, estimates the direct cost of the war to the Allies at £28,360,000,000. and to the Central European Powers at £13,675,000,000. He estimates the total cost of the war, including indirect losses, at £52,000,000,000.

There has been nothing, he says, approaching this destruction of capital wealth in the history of the world. The immediate result of the upheaval is to be found in the high cost of living and universal increase of wages. Judging from past experience, he concludes that the fall in the price of commodities and wages will take place slowly and gradually.

The war has enormously increased the power of production in Great Britain, and Mr. Crammond is convinced that this, at the present time, is at least 50 per cent. over the production of 1913.

Through all the economic records of the past, Mr. Crammond says, it is possible to trace an advance in the standard of living for the masses concurrently with an increase in the amount of money in circulation and a decline in the purchasing power of money.

In the light of these conclusions, he is unable to see any real grounds for depression and anxiety about Great Britain's economic future, and he predicts that the nations are on the eve of a period of intense activity in trade such as the world has never known.

Heart Palpitated
Could Count Every Beat

When the heart begins to palpitate, it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells.

When the heart gets into this condition, you become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to either social, business or household duties.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief to all sufferers from any heart weakness or nerve derangements.

Mrs. Walter Greives, Apsley, Ont., writes:—"I had been run down, and doctors told me I was anaemic, but did not help me with their medicines. I could not sleep nights, my heart palpitated so, and I could count every beat.

I used to have such dizzy spells I would have to go to bed. I was not able to do any work for eight months. A cousin of mine had taken Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and told me what they had done for her. I took eight boxes of them, and now I am able to help every day with the work. I am so thankful to tell others what they have done for me, so that they may try this great and wonderful remedy. I hope this may prove good to some one who is suffering the way I did."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Judge Scathingly Condemns Fraud

Orders President of Oil Concern to Return $870,000.

PORT ARTHUR, March 29.—"Conceived in iniquity and born in sin, the defendants in this case are guilty of the worst kind of fraud," was the comment of Mr. Justice Logie after hearing the evidence in the case of McCormack v. F. C. Carman, President of the Ontario Petroleum Company, operating in Bothwell, Middlesex county, Ont., at the Spring Assizes of the Supreme Court here.

The case arose out of the sale of stock in the oil concern to a number of local people and a subsequent alleged attempt to freeze them out after a big find of oil made the stock very valuable. Carman, as President of the company, acquired $750,000 worth of stock from the treasury and also appropriated over $60,000 in dividends. Action was instituted by the small shareholders. The Judge ordered Carman to return the $750,000 of stock and also the $60,000 dividends.

AMERICAN BOASTED; EXPLOITS LED TO A COURT-MARTIAL

Capt. Chamberlain Charged With "Scandalous Conduct."

MEDAL WAS RECOMMENDED

British Air Ministry Doubted Truth of Stories of Destruction of Boche Machines.

LONDON, March.—The court martial in the case of Captain Edmund G. Chamberlain, of San Antonio, Texas, an officer of the United States Marine Corps, the story of whose exploits in bringing down a number of German machines in an air battle while he was on a visit to the British front last July, has been under investigation for some time, was begun at American navy headquarters here. Captain Chamberlain was formally charged with "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morale," and with "falsehood."

Captain Chamberlain pleaded not guilty to the charges and specifications in each case.

Captain H. W. Harrison of the navy presided over the court, which was composed of naval and marine officers. The defendant officer was represented by a civilian lawyer, D. Harger, and assisted by Major S. Williams, of the Marine Corps.

The day was spent largely in jockeying on the admission of reports of Chamberlain's alleged exploits, and recommendations for distinctions. Donald Harper objected to the manner in which the judge advocate planned to get them into the record.

Doubted by British.

Lieut.-Commander W. A. Edwards, Vice-Admiral Sims' aide for aviation, told of receiving alleged official reports of the exploits as they were widely published and of preparing a letter for Admiral Sims, recommending Chamberlain for the medal of honour and promotion in rank. The letter was forwarded to Washington. He said the British Air Ministry began to doubt the truth of the exploits and investigated the matter last fall.

Mr. Harper tried to prove by Commander Edwards that a letter had been received at naval headquarters saying that Chamberlain flew with the British squadron from June 20 to July 13 of last year. But Edwards did not remember such a letter.

It is understood that several members of the [illegible] are returning to London on Thursday, and the defence expects to call some of these in an attempt to prove that Captain Chamberlain was attached to that squadron during the time mentioned by Mr. Harper.

The only other witness was Captain F. T. Evans, in command of the Poliac Air Station, who said that when the House naval affairs committee was at Poliac, Captain H. I. Cone, commanding United States naval aviation in France, instructed Captain Evans to get Chamberlain's then untold story. Captain Evans said that Chamberlain was too reluctant to give a comprehensive verbal report, whereupon he asked him to write a report. He submitted a report virtually the same as that which had been published. Captain Evans gave Chamberlain high praise as an aviator.

More than forty witnesses have been summoned to testify, but the number is likely to be extended. It may be necessary to hold a session ed. CaptainEvans gave Chamberlain France.

THE SITUATION

(Edmonton Bulletin)

If no one works, none can eat.

That is a condition of human life!

The less work is done, the less there will be to eat.

Canada owes more money as a nation than she ever did before.

She has to carry obligations of honor arising out of the war of a kind and to an amount never before dreamed of.

War conditions have been accompanied by a roit of expenditure.

The money was first borrowed before it could be spent. Now the interest must be earned if it is to be paid.

Production must pay all bills—whether for interest, wages, or further expenditure.

The volume of before-the-war production cannot carry the load of after-the-war burdens.

Production must be increased or the country cannot pay interest and wages and provide for necessary expenditures.

Production must be relieved of all possible burdens, and must be expanded by the more efficient application of industry or Canada will cease to be a country.

Canada can only be saved by the increased industry and better directed efficiency of her citizens.

Why Corns Hurt

Note this diagram picture of a corn. Note its conical shape. The cause of the corn is pressure. And pressure makes it hurt. The point of the corn is pushed into the nerves. Applying a Blue-jay plaster instantly removes the pressure. Note the felt ring (A) in the picture below. The ring gives barefoot comfort in the tightest shoe.

But that is temporary. One should not continue a ring. The corn should be quickly ended.

The bit of B&B wax in the center of the ring does that (marked B in illustration below). In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. It stops the pain, then ends the corn. And it wraps the corn so the action is undisturbed.

Then the action of the B&B wax is centered on the corn. Held there by the rubber coated adhesive tape (C) which wraps comfortably around the toe. Healthy tissue is not affected.

These are the reasons why millions of people have adopted the Blue-jay method. Keeping corns is folly when this easy way can end them. Treating them in cruder ways is inexcusable.

Fryatt Case Is Reviewed By Huns

Case of British Captain Murdered by the Huns, Heard in Berlin.

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, April 2.—An investigation was begun this morning before an Imperial military court into the case of Captain Charles Fryatt, the British mercantile marine commander, who was executed by the Germans in 1916, after his conviction by a German court martial of having attempted to ram a submarine with his vessel, the Great Eastern Railway steamer "Brussels." A large number of witnesses appeared for examination.

WOMAN SAVED MUCH SUFFERING

Following Friend's Advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

West Plains, Mo.—"I was all run down in health, had indigestion and terrible cramps every month so I was unable to do anything. I had tried every doctor in West Plains, also every remedy I could think of, without relief. One day when I was suffering greatly a friend was at my house and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' So I did, and through it, I found relief from my suffering and I really believe it saved my life. It does not seem as though I can say enough in praise of this wonderful medicine for the health it has brought me."—Miss CORA LEE HALL, West Plains, Mo.

Perhaps it may seem an extravagant statement to say that this great remedy saved a life; but women like Mrs. Hall, to whom it has brought health, appreciate the danger and suffering they have escaped too well to doubt it! All who suffer should try it. Why risk life and health without it?

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatism twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

West End Residents Threaten Law Suits For Faulty Drainage

Cellar Flooding Has Become a Too Frequent Occurrence—Applications for Sidewalks and Permission to Remove Trees—Garages Instal Gasoline Tanks.

ROUTINE OF BUSINESS

Four aldermen were absent from last night's meeting of the Board of Works. Aldermen Turner and Hamilton were at the Board of Trade meeting, although the latter arrived when the bridge tenders were being opened. Ald. Garside was out of the city, and Ald. Murray was prevented by illness from attending. Ald. Phelan presided.

Messrs. J. A. Sharpe and W. J. Henry complained of the damage their property had suffered from the recent floods and requested that proper drainage be provided for that section of the west end as soon as possible.

"I came before you last July," said Mr. Sharpe, "and protested then against the trouble I had been put to by the flooding of my cellar as the result of the choking of the drain traps with weeds during the heavy rain on July 1st. It cost me $200 damages then, and on March 17th my cellars were again flooded by the spring freshets. This is entirely the fault of the city. I don't like to have trouble, but I couldn't use my furnace for a week. It has simply come to this that I will have to take action against the city if this is repeated.

"I am in the same position as Mr. Sharpe," Mr. Henry remarked. "The difficulty was caused when the city put in a culvert several years ago at the corner of Monaghan road and Homewood avenue, turning all the water down Homewood. When the city diverts this water it should be responsible for disposing of it without flooding the neighbourhood."

Ald. Phelan promised that the Board would try to meet the wishes of the Homewood avenue residents without delay.

Two Gasoline Tanks.

Permission to install gasoline tanks to supply automobiles at the curb was granted Leo Fontaine and Fitzgerald & Company. Both tanks will be set up in the garages. Fitzgerald and Company, at the corner of Brock and Water streets, will have a pump at the sidewalk and Mr. Fontaine will use a swivel pipe, seven feet above the sidewalk, which will be drawn in against the building when not in use. He assured the Board that there would be very little dripping of gasoline.

Ald. Edgar suggested that both garages should be reminded that under the Council's resolution of last year tanks and pumps in the sidewalk have an uncertain tenure. The city may order their removal at the end of the year.

"When is that?" asked Ald. Edgar.

"We might as well settle it now," remarked Ald. Phelan.

City Clerk Armstrong defined an armistice as the suspension of hostilities, and the Board concluded that the Bowser pumps' lease of the sidewalks shall expire when peace is signed.

Olive Avenue Heard From.

Thomas Price, John Elliott and other residents of Olive avenue, a private street off Perry street, asked the Board to provide them with a sidewalk.

Ald. Taylor—We should apply to the Railway Board to take this street over.

Mayor Duncan—They have asked us this before; we ought to help them if we can.

Ald. Taylor moved, seconded by Ald Morrison, that the request be granted. A temporary board walk will be laid.

Sidewalk For Elias Avenue.

R. W. Knox, 515 Elias avenue, urged that a sidewalk be built on the west side of that street. It lies between King and Charlotte streets. The Board acceded to this petition, but the usual notice will be withheld until other streets have been listed. This is the first concrete sidewalk on City Engineer Parsons' programme for this year.

On a motion by Ald. Morrison, seconded by Ald. Gainey, Mr. J. J. Stewart was given permission to use the unopened street west of the Bonner-Worth factory this summer on the same terms as last year, and with the proviso that he must vacate it if the company needs it for extensions to their factory this year.

McDonnel Street Sewer By-law.

City Solicitor Widdifield wrote that Mr. G. W. Hatton's motion to quash the McDonnel street sewer by-law would be heard on April 14th, and asked the Board that arrangements be made whereby he could meet the members of last year's Council.

"We can hold a re-union whenever the chairman decides," said the Mayor.

Ald. McIntyre suggested that legal assistance be obtained for Mr. Widdifield in this case.

The question was asked as to who would pay the extra expense.

"The city will lose the case anyway," commented Ald. Edgar.

"That's only your opinion," retorted Ald. McIntyre. "How do you know?"

"The City Solicitor told me," said Ald. Edgar.

"That's all the more reason why we should get another," was Ald. McIntyre's reply.

"I'd like to see the Solicitor get any help he requires," Ald. Morrison observed.

The point was dropped, upon an intimation that outside counsel would probably represent Mount St. Joseph.

A Cinder Walk.

Cinders offered the city without cost by the Auburn Woollen Mills were accepted and on a motion by Ald. Gainey, seconded by Ald. Taylor, they will be used as a footpath on the west side of Concession street, north of Smith street.

More Trees to Go.

The removal of trees continues. The following were doomed last night, one in front of 299 Boswell avenue, one on Stewart street, opposite the Hurley residence, one in front of D. Ronco's house, 553 Bolivar street, and two on Albert street, at Joe Farnell's house.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR HAIR BEAUTIFUL

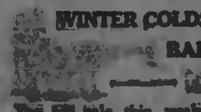
Ten Minutes Home Treatment Works Wonders, Stops Falling Hair and Dandruff and makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy.

Better than all the so-called "hair-tonics" in the world is a simple, old-fashioned home recipe consisting of plain Bay Rum, Lavona (de Composee) and a little Menthol Crystals. These three mixed at home in a few minutes work wonders with any scalp. Try it just one night and see. Get from your druggist 2 oz. Lavona, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ½ drachm Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in 8 oz. bottle. Then add the Lavona, shake it well and let it stand for an hour before using. Apply it by putting a little of the mixture on a soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair, delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days' use and you will not find a single loose or straggling hair. They will be locked on your head as tight as a vise. The dandruff will disappear. You will find downy, new hairs sprouting up all over your scalp and this new hair will grow with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The prescription is very inexpensive and we know of nothing so effective and certain in its results.

AFTER INFLUENZA—

WINTER COLDS—BAD BLOOD



You are pale, thin, weak—with little vitality. Your liver is sluggish and the bad blood causes your stomach muscles to lose their elasticity and become flabby and weak—then indigestion.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made from wild roots and barks, and free from alcohol or narcotics, is the great and powerful blood purifier of to-day. Ingredients printed on wrapper. This tonic, in liquid or tablet form, is just what you need to give you vim, vigor and vitality.

Take it as directed and it will search out impure and poisonous matter throughout the system and eliminate it through the natural channels.

SHELBURNE, SASK.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for liver trouble, and found it excellent, and would not be without it. I suffered from congestion of the liver about six years ago and I always say that this medicine cured me. I have also given it to my family for colds and it cured them in a very short time. We must have had about 4 dozen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"—MRS. ERNEST MITCHELL, Box 130.

KITCHENER, ONT.—"I had become all run-down, was weak and nervous. My blood was bad also. I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and was completely restored to good health. I am always recommending this medicine to my friends, many of whom have had equally as good results."—MRS. EPH. KETTYLE, 64 Breithaupt Street.

President Wilson Removes His Coat

By Robt. J. Bender.
(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 2.—President Wilson has started to shake the lethargy out of the peace conference. He has the support of Lloyd George in his effort.

With this information available today, it is possible to state that the President is determined to get action and results now even if it is found necessary to shock some of the European chancelleries.

He has tried soft words, compliments, the well known "salve" and wheedling. He was applying these in abundance as early as last July, but they have proved unavailing. To-day finds Europe more divided than ever and there is genuine despair of a successful termination of the peace conference in many countries.

For the first time the voice is heard here expressing doubt that the conference still has the power to make peace. Authoritative advices show plainly that the presence of Lenine and the Spartacan leaders is felt with increasing force at the peace table. And it is the view of those close to the President here that, with continued indecision in Paris, real authority will soon pass from the Allied chiefetains to the growing masses in Europe who are over-riding order.

A Report of Farm Conditions

Maple Sap Has Not Been Running Freely—Live Stock in Demand.

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The young fall wheat is looking well although it has been exposed more than usual during the winter. The next two or three weeks, however, are regarded as the most trying times for the young plants, and at the time of reporting, strong, raw winds were prevailing.

Considerable spring plowing has been done in some of the south-western counties. In Lambton and Kent some spring wheat and oats have been sown already. Wellington and Lincoln predict a large acreage of spring wheat, but Halton states that mixed grains will be preferred in that county.

Clover does not look so promising as fall wheat, as it has suffered more from heaving. Where top-dressed the fall red clover is said to be in excellent condition.

Little or no winter injury to orchards has been reported. Fruit buds are very far advanced for the season.

Live stock are more or less in demand, excepting horses. But while the horse market generally is dull, several car-loads were shipped from the northern part of Huron during the month. At a recent fair in Wellington about fifty animals were sold to dealers for outside points, and about as many more to local farmers.

Beef Cattle

Beef cattle are being marketed more freely, but there is a scarcity of well finished animals offering. Good grade cows are in great request. At a recent sale in Lambton grade Shorthorns averaged $155; two brought $181 and one $191. Waterloo reports the average price paid for fourteen grade Holstein cows was $165.75. In Dundas dairy cows have changed hands at from $100 to $140. Hogs are being turned off in fair numbers, and more are likely to be fed than were counted on recently. Young pigs are again in brisk demand, since weeks old animals being snatched up at from $11 to $13 each.

Hay is scarce, and is selling at from $20 to $25 a ton. Other fodders, more especially roughage, are more than sufficient for all calls.

Beans are in good supply, and buyers are more active.

Farmers' Clubs are active in buying and selling. Wellington reports that ten clubs in that County are shipping live stock co-operatively, and are buying seed grain for its members. Waterloo also states that its club are doing similar work.

Maple sap has not been running so freely as in the average season.

Few Changes in the Meat Market

Canadian Mills Will Meet New Price List.

There is a wide diversity of opinion regarding the cuts that have been made in steel and iron prices at the U. S. mills, says Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News. At best the new prices are plainly a compromise arrangement brought out to try and satisfy the extremists in each group. To get a fair idea of what the new prices are, when compared to war-time and pre-war figures, take a survey of the ten-year pre-war period. Excluding rail tonnage, the levels are as follows: Average for ten years before the war, 1904 to 1913, $36; Government limit under war-time control $76; after the reductions of December, 1918, $72; after last week's reductions, $65. Thus the prices on an average are 81 per cent. above the pre-war average, and only about 14 per cent. below the war-time level. The extremists took the following positions; There should be no cut at all, or there should have been much greater cuts.

New Prices.

Whatever may be the ultimate effect of the new prices, there is a feeling in Canadian trade that it will open the way for more buying than has been done for some time past. Canadian mills were quick to notify the trade that they would meet the new price list announced by the American producers, and the benefit will be immediately passed on to the consumer.

Fair Trade.

Machinery dealers report that they are handling a fair volume of trade. Although it cannot be called large, it is much more than they had expected during the first three or four months following the war. In some circles it is still contended that the actual signing of peace is needed to put things on a right basis for good business. As long as matters stand as they are at present there is room for an unsettling influence to get in its work in a way that is very hard to meet or combat.

Good Demand

There is still a good demand for used equipment; in fact, the bulk of the business being done is in this class of goods.

Makers of tubes, chains, wire ropes, and other lines have hastened to announce that they will not reduce prices, following the cuts in the steel market. Tubes are still in demand, especially the two-inch kind. There is a feeling that there will have to be reductions in a good many of these lines, now that the pace has been set by the steel group. There are cases where present prices are 200 per cent. over the pre-war levels.

PAY up the doctor,—cheat the undertaker,—let's live out of doors. Get a bicycle, if you haven't one already,—ride to work or school,—then home to a warm noon lunch. Protect your health,—eat proper foods,—take plenty of open air exercise.—keep good natured.

Happy contented people are strong in mind and body. Bicycle riding in the open air is a pleasure,—not a dreaded duty,—forget your cares and worries,—ride a wheel.

To enjoy life or win success,—good health is a necessity.

Nothing has done so much to insure good health as the bicycle,—get the idea!—buy one,—use it. It is the acme of pleasure and profit.

The Cleveland

Just as well get the best,—it costs no more.

C. R. Banks,

Charlotte Street.

Making Circles

The war ends.

A shell plant decides to make hairpins, but cannot change all its machinery over-night.

Demobilized soldiers cannot at once find work. Some of them are unfitted by war for their former jobs. It takes time and thought to find places for them.

Meanwhile the unemployed talk.

The unemployable talk.

Professional agitators talk.

The more asinine the talk the bigger the headlines in some newspapers, and the more distinct the impression made on the unthinking.

The talk is discontented, and it rouses discontent.

The talk is of strikes, sympathetic strikes, a general strike, of seizing by force the property of others.

What happens then?

Men who have capital to invest won't risk it.

They will not built the house they planned.

They refuse to bid on the contract that is offered.

They decide to buy Omaha debentures or Brazil power.

The money that should have been set to work in Canada gets busy in Omaha or Brazil.

The result?

Canadian lime-kilns lose an order.

Canadian nail machines slow down.

Canadian planing mills lay off men.

More men are unemployed.

More talk ensues.

More capital is tied up.

And so the circle goes round and round.

The cause?

Too much talk.

The remedy?

Let Labor and Capital trust one another.

"Please Pass the Milk"

It's the Best Food we have—provided it has been Clarified and Pasteurized.

Use more of it in your foods and in your cooking. There are many ways of using more milk such as the following:—

CEREALS COOKED IN MILK. Corn meal, oatmeal, and rice are delicious cooked in milk or skim milk. Use the same amount of milk as you would water for oatmeal and corn meal. For rice, you can well use a good deal more milk—four or even more cups of milk to one of rice. Cook for an hour in a double boiler. This makes a delicious creamy cereal. For milk cereal puddings add sugar or syrup and raisins.

CORNSTARCH PUDDING. Mix the cornstarch with 2 cups of milk and proceed as usual.

CREAMED DISHES. Milk toast, cream soups, creamed vegetables, creamed fish, and scalloped dishes are all good ways of putting more milk into the daily food of the family.

Milk gives your children lime and other salts which you and they need for the bones and the teeth and blood and other parts of the body.

Major McGregor Says Men Had a Grievance

Officer Was Referred to by Lieut.-Col. A. C. Pratt in Recent Disclosures.

HALIFAX, April 2.— Major James McGregor, of the Canadian Railway Troops, who formerly was an engineer at Halifax, and to whose case reference was recently made by Lieut. Col. A. C. Pratt, M.P.P. for South Norfolk, arrived at Halifax to-day. Sick and tired of the delays in regard to returning the Canadian Railway Troops back to the Dominion, Major McGregor took up his case with the officer commanding the Nova Scotia wing at Rhyl camp. This officer commanding, who also carried the rank of Major, showed very little sympathy with Major McGregor, and taking what many considered to be high-handed action, had Major McGregor removed from Rhyl camp. As a result of this Major McGregor, who had been kicking his heels around England for two months, was taken off the draft which came back on the Cretic and only arrived in Canada on the Empress of Britain yesterday.

Interviewed by the Examiner, Major McGregor showed very little disposition to speak of his own case. Being still a soldier he said he preferred not to make any comment.

Men Had a Grievance.

The idea got into their heads that they could not get anything without a riot, said the Major, in discussing the general situation. I have no sympathy for the Bolshevik element, but the men certainly had a grievance. I am safe in saying that fifty per cent. of the troops at Rhyl had either business or farms of their own which needed immediate attention. This was particularly true of the men from Western Canada. If they did not get home at once it meant that a whole season was lost to them. Then again they got the idea into their heads that American troops were getting home ahead of them. So far as my own case is concerned I am not making any kick. I took up the matter with Argyle House and they fixed up everything satisfactorily.

Peterboro Board of Trade

been taken in this war and are the legitimate prizes and spoils of the victor. Statesmen know through experience of Canada that to give the inhabitants of these colonies some control over their own affairs is the part of wisdom and our example will be followed in government and institutions and natural inquiries will be made regarding the organization for the development and assistance of trade and commerce.

Board of Trade

"This is where the Board of Trade comes in. For the past two years your officiers and committees have been at work on a scheme to make the Board of Trade and the City of Peterboro a fully representative body, and as such to render to our city and district the greatest service that has ever been done for it. Large operations of this kind meet with many obstacles and this has been no exception. However, just as the new day dawns for Canada industrially and commercially, we find ourselves here in Peterboro ready to take up our share of the increasing effort with an organization that is well formed, well named, but unfortunately not very well lubricated as yet. This organization consists of a central executive or council composed of three representatives of each section of our Board. These representatives are the President, Vice-President and Secretary of the constituent associations and are therefore fully conversant with the affairs of their own bodies. The executive council has also for members the President, Vice-President and Secretary of the Board and ex-officio, the Mayor of the City for time being. The affiliated bodies or sections are as follows: Manufacturers, Merchants, The Clearing House, Trades & Labour Council, Lawyers, Physicians, Commercial Travellers and Contractors. Thus nearly all elements in the business life of the community are represented, and meet and discuss matters of importance in harmony, for in an association of this kind all members are actuated by a desire to serve without thought of gain to the individual or class.

To Be Of Service

"An organization to be of service must be permanent and therefore must have a home. Here you see the home of the Board of Trade. We have secured offices, which we consider adequate for our present needs. It is our earnest wish and our expectation that from these rooms will come ideas, plans, help, co-operation and works that will be of great benefit to the City of Peterooro, and to mankind in general. To accomplish this result it is necessary for every member and every citizen to take the Board of Trade seriously. The officiers and executive take it seriously, and are willing to devote their time, talents and money without stint to make it a complete success. What will you do? What should every citizen of this City do? Will you all fall in line now when it means more than perhaps at any time in Canada's history, and resolve and pledge yourselves that when a call is made to attend a meeting you will be there, sharp on time, to pay your annual dues you will send them to the treasurer instead of waiting to be called upon personally, to give your opinion you will do so if you have one, to be a booster you will not knock, and to improve conditions you will do your part. With co-operation of the citizens the Board of Trade can do anything it sets out to do for the City of Peterboro. If all the work is left to one or two or ten the effort required is too great.

The Past Year

Now what has been done during the past year. As I said previously, our organization has been materially improved. These rooms have been rented and partially furnished and decorated. Supplies have been ordered and we are about ready to get down to business.

"Despite our disadvantages in having no meeting place we have held eight council meetings, all of which have been well attended by the representatives of the various bodies and some good work has been accomplished as a result, among which may be cited the publishing of correspondence on the question of good roads, which is apparently about to bear fruit, a deputation to Toronto, in September, 1918, for improvement of the C.P.R. train service to Montreal, and subsequent correspondence which terminated in a meeting here with officials of the Company, when several improvements were promised, the election of two members to the City Council, and the introduction of the question of establishing a vocational training school here, and a deputation to Ottawa to endeavor to secure employment for local labor.

Employment Situation

"While just at the moment the employment situation is unfortunately acute, the outlook for the future is decidedly promising. Our factories manufacture essential articles and products and will in common with other Canadian industries soon be operating to capacity and with the addition of new industries, which I expect we shall procure in the near future. I look for greatly increased activity in industrial and commercial affairs here. Inquiries are being received from United States firms desiring locations in Canada, and Peterboro has the advantages of most communities for manufacturing concerns, and I may here point out that every citizen has a duty placed upon him through his citizenship to act as a publicity agent for his home town whenever the opportunity arises. Peterboro is the best place in the world to live in and there's lots of room for the city to grow. A little appreciatin of the advantages enjoyed by us here may be the means of securing a new resident, a distributing house, a factory or a public institution.

"BOOST your BOARD OF TRADE and CITY and COUNTRY and I have no fear for the future as far as this City is concerned, and as our boys have advertised Canada to the world, so will we follow up their good work by doing our full share in reconstruction and in the activities that are sure to follow," said Mr. Turner, in conclusion.

BOY'S EYE DESTROYED

STRATFORD April 2.—Neil Reynolds, aged nine years, will lose the sight of one eye as a result of an accident. With other boys he was throwing stones at a bottle. For some reason or other he went up to the bottle and just as he reached it, a stone thrown by a playmate shattered the bottle. A piece of glass lodged in his eye.

Thrift Clubs Suggested For Public Schools of Peterboro

Truant Officer Had a Busy Month— Regular Monthly Meeting of the Board of Education.

The formation of Thrift Clubs in the Public Schools was suggested at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education last evening by Inspector A. Mowat. After a brief discussion, in which some of the Board stated their objection to such a scheme on account of the fact that many of the children would be financially unable to enter into the venture, the matter was left to the Finance Committee and the Inspector to make inquiries.

Truant Officer's Report

The Truant Officer reported an active month during which he dealt with a large number of absentees. In one family he found the children to be suffering from a disgusting rash, while the father who drove a bread wagon was at liberty to handle the bread he delivered. This was immediately reported to the proper authorities and the matter remedied.

Use of Hall

On receipt of a letter from Mr. W. T. Morris, Secretary of the Navy League, asking for the use of the Collegiate Institute Hall for a lecture to be given in April by Peter Wright, the Board referred the request to the Supervision Committee.

School Attendance

The attendance at the Public Schools was as follows for March:

	On Roll	Aver
Central	473	451
Queen Alexandra	292	273
King Edward	504	457
Queen Mary	510	465

AT a Standstill

Mr. E. G. Patterson reported that as far as the Building Committee went things are necessarily at a standstill at present.

To Level School Ground

The City Engineer reported an investigation of the grounds at the King George School and stated that the removal of some 20,000 cubic feet of earth could be done from the east side of the school, benefiting the school as well as the proposed Hunter Street Bridge, where the soil could be used for filling in purposes. The Property Commission was detailed to make investigations of the proposed removal of soil and bring in a report.

Highly Dramatic Role For Geraldine Farrar

"Shadows" is Geraldine Farrar's new Goldwyn Picture. It comes to the Grand Theatre, starting next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Pitched in a high dramatic key it tells the story of a woman who has found happiness out of misery and who fights for that happiness when disaster seems about to overtake her. Her life in Alaska, where she was known as Cora Lamont, the plaything of genial Jack McGoff, is almost forgotten in her life as the honoured wife of Judson Barnes, a conservative New Yorker.

Her house of cards comes tumbling down, however, when she is recognised by a man who tries to induce her husband to enter a spurious mining proposition. She warns her husband against him, whereupon the fellow telephones her that she must persuade him to invest or the full story of Alaska will come out. Just how terrible that part of her life was Mrs. Barnes knows too well.

It all comes back to her as she sits, dry-eyed, clasping her child to her. She forms a daring plan whereby McGoff, who is coming to the house to claim her, shall have the tables turned on him. What this plan is and how strangely it works out—this comprises the play.

CELEBRATED GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Interesting Event at the Home of Mr. Joshua Smithson.

A very pleasant family re-union took place on March 31st., at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Smithson, Otonabee, on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

All of the members of the family are still living and were present at the anniversary. They include the following: Howard and Morley of Otonabee, Fred of South Monaghan, John of Toronto, Sydney and Ada, (Mrs. J. P. Weir) Kitchener and Laura of Bowmanville.

Mr. Smithson, who is a son of the late Richard Smithson of South Monaghan, is one of the pioneer residents of Otonabee and probably one of the best known in the county, having taken an active part in nearly all leading movements during the last half century. He is still strong and active in his eightieth year thus proving that a life of hard work and vigorous activity does not always shorten life.

Mrs. Smithson is the only daughter of the late James Armstrong, who settled on the present family homestead. The ceremony of fifty years ago was performed March 31st, 1869 by the Rev. Samuel Wilson, in the same house in which the present reunion was held.

The bridesmaid was Miss Katherine English of Omemee and Mr. Samuel Smithson of Bailliboro, was the groomsman, both of whom were unfortunately unable to be present on account of the unusually severe weather.

A large number of relatives, many from a distance and some old friends were present and expressed their best wishes for continued health and happiness for Mr. and Mrs. Smithson.

Appendicitis Prevented Life Lengthened Health Maintained

Thousands Finding Wonderful Benefit in a Simple Home Remedy That Costs But a Quarter.

Doctors say if people kept their bowels in proper order there would be no such disease on record as appendicitis. It is due solely to neglect, and is therefore preventable.

If you have constipation, bad breath or headache you need medicine right away.

The moment you suspect your bowels are clogged you should take Dr. Hamilton's Pills, the smoothest regulator of them all. They move the bowels and cleanse the liver so smoothly you scarcely notice the effect. But you can get the action just the same. Taken at night you wake up next morning, clear-headed, hungry, rested, energetic, feeling like a different man.

Why don't you spend a quarter today and try Dr. Hamilton's Pills They work so easy, just as nature would order, never gripe or cause headache. Finest thing for folks that are out of sorts, depressed, lacking in color and spirits.

Folks that use Dr. Hamilton's Pills are never sick, never an ache or a pain—feel good all the time simply because their system is clean, regulated and healthy. This you can easily prove yourself.

You Need a Bicycle

Yes, you need a bicycle no matter who you are you can't afford to be without one. It is the healthiest, cheapest and most convenient means of travel of the day. No matter where you live or how far you have to go you need a bicycle. If you have a lot of walking you need one because it is "twice as easy and three times as fast" and if you have only a little walking, you need it for the healthful sport you can derive from it. But, mind you, you want a good bicycle. You don't want one that is made to sell. You want one that will take you there and bring you back whenever you want to go and look just as good in five or six years as it does when you buy it. In short you want a MASSEY. Remember the Massey bicycle was originally made in 1896 by the Massey Harris Co. and sold for $95.00. It has been made in Canada continuously since then, so if it isn't perfect now it never will be. Horticultural Society Will Make Canvass For Members

This Year's Options Are Attractive and Should Appeal to Many Citizens — Special Opportunity for a Few Members to Secure Cheap Seeds.

CANON DAVIDSON'S COMPLIMENT

The Horticultural Society has divided the city into fifteen districts for its membership campaign which will be completed by April 25th. The canvassing teams will be appointed by a committee composed of Mr. Alex. Weddell, Dr. Middleton and E. Brunnell, and with the attractive options that are offered this year and the opportunities of assisting in the work of beautifying the city's homes it is expected that the new enrollment will establish a record.

Dr. Middleton presided last night in the absence of Mr. Weddell. Rev. Canon Davidson was among those present, and in a very acceptable address congratulated the Society for its efforts, and warmly commended it to the citizens.

Mr. R. M. Glover was appointed the Society's representative on the Board of Trade. Steps were taken to guarantee to every member satisfaction in the delivery and condition of their option which include the usual Spring selection and a distribution of bulbs in the autumn.

A Special Offer.

The Society has procured from the Ontario Department of Agriculture thirty packages of assorted seeds which were tested and used in last year's production campaign. With few exceptions they showed a high percentage of germination. While this supply lasts it is offered to members at 50 cents a package. The variety and quantity of seeds in the bargain "grab-bag" are as follows:—

Beans, Green Refugee—4 oz.
Beans, Golden Wax—4 oz.
Beans, Field, Marrow-Fat—1½ lbs.
Beets, Detroit Dark Red—½ oz.
Cabbage, Early Copenhagen Market—1-20 oz.
Cabbage, Late Danish Ballhead—1-20 oz.
Corn, Golden Bantam—3 oz.
Cucumber—Improved Long Green—12 seed.
Lettuce, Non Pareil—¼ oz.
Onion Seed, Yellow Globe Danvers—¼ oz.
Parsnips, Hollow Crown—¼ oz.
Peas, American Wonder—3 oz.
Radish, Scarlet White Tip Turnip—¼ oz.
Spinach—¼ oz.
Squash, Green Hubbard—10 seeds.
Swiss Chard, Silver—½ oz.

Next Revolution Will Be the Worst

Will Be Worse Than Two Preceding Outbreaks.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, April 2.—Describing the outlook in Germany the Berlin correspondent of the Mail says the crisis, which is rapidly approaching, seems certain to be graver than either the January or March outbreaks.

Thousands of people, including many women, attend mass meetings at which unadulterated Bolshevism is advocated and demands are made for abolishing parliament.

Seat Sale For "Flo-Flo" Opens To-morrow

To-morrow seats will be put on sale at the box office of the Grand Opera House, for "Flo-Flo", John Cort's musical comedy success, which will be the attraction on Saturday matinee and evening, and judging by the many inquiries and mail orders already received a record by making breaking attendance would seem assured.

Since its opening night "Flo-Flo" which has to its credit a full season's run at the Cort Theatre, New York has been one of the greatest musical hits presented in many years. It is John Cort's "war bride" comedy, or so it is known along Broadway. It is credited with sparkling lines, catchy lyrics, a "perfect 36" chorus and the most striking array of fashions ever seen on the American stage.

Important in the cast excellent of "Flo-Flo" are Louise Kelly, Jere Delaney, Carl L. George, William Cummings, Rose Southern, Mildred Beverly, Augustus Buell, Rhea Norton, William Burton Burns, Edward Lynn and other metropolitan favorites, and the "Perfect Thirty-six" Chorus. The special "Flo-Flo" orchestra is a feature of Mr. Cort's organization.

PROHIBITION AGENTS CHARGED WITH MURDER

Two Alleged Liquor Violators Killed —Refused to Stop Automobiles.

(Special to Examiner.)

WOODSTOCK, Virginia, April 2. — With a company of state militia closely guarding the jail and the court house, the preliminary hearing of four agents of the Prohibition Commission, charged with murder, as the result of the killing of Lawrence D. Hudson and Raymond Shackleford, alleged liquor law violators, was begun here this morning.

The prohibition agents, Harry F. Sweet, W. C. Hall, W. B. Dunleavy, and J. P. Sullivan, were brought here last night from Fredericksburg, where they were arrested. They were accompanied by the military company from Richmond, which had been ordered by the government to proceed to Fredericksburg, and escort them to Woodstock.

Intense feeling has been aroused. Shackleford and Hudson were killed a month ago when they refused to stop their automobiles to be searched for liquor.

Thompson Re-elected Mayor of Chicago

Republican Candidate is Windy City's Chief Magistrate—Vote Against Prohibition.

(Canadian Press.)

CHICAGO, April 2. —Complete returns to-day from yesterday's municipal election showed that William Hale Thompson (Republican) was re-elected Mayor for a term of four years by a plurality of 17,000 over Robert M. Sweitzer (Democrat), his nearest competitor, and that city voted "wet" by a majority of 247,288 in protest against the nation going dry.

Scheme Would Lead to Numerous Wars

French Indemnity should be Calculated Say the French Newspapers.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 2.—The proposal that the French indemnity from Germany be merely defined instead of calculated in the preliminary peace treaty, is attacked by several of the newspapers. Some of them declare that this method would raise endless difficulties between the financiers and between France and Germany. The Journal even fears that such a settlement would pave the pay to a new war rather than peace.

Big Circus Coming to Peterboro

Performers Come From All Parts of the World—City May Claim Damages.

The Y.M.C.A. are planning to have one of the biggest circuses next Thursday and Friday which ever camped in Peterboro. It is not yet known whether the city will make a claim for damages done the roads by the elephants and heavy waggons. The circus have decided to put up the big top in the opera house so that the actors and actresses gathered at great expense from Egypt, India, Africa and far-off Borneo will have advantage of the warm dressing room. The subjects since crossing the line complain greatly of the cold. The one exception is the polar bear which is served a pitcher of ice water every morning before breakfast. Some of the Canadian nobility from Montreal will arrive on the Montreal train and do some funny stunts with the coin of the realm—an act which every body knows they are proficient in. It will be a big three-ringed circus and everything will be shown from the minstrel troupe from Minstrelville, a conglomeration of comical minstrels consummated with conviviality correlated with conferrumenation in convulsingly credulous comedy down to the little elephants who through the local contagion of dancing are able to do the latest fox-trot on an inverted tea cup. Then there is Teddy the trick lion, Charlie, the performing bear, Jumbo, the trained Giraffe beside the Bronx Zoo transported on a special train from New York city for the occasion. The British Museum has also been pilfered for the latest in curios.

JUST WHAT I NEEDED SAYS J. A. McKEITH

Has Improved Wonderfully Ever Since He Began Taking Tanlac.

"Tanlac proved to be just what I had been needing for the past five years," said Jas. A. McKeith, of 1889 Davenport Road, Weston, near Toronto, Ont.

"Everything I would eat," he continued, "seemed to lodge right in the pit of my stomach and I suffered terribly with indigestion and I felt bloated with gas for three or four hours after every meal. I would just drag myself off to work without eating a bit of breakfast and tried all sorts of medicines without getting any better.

"I have been improving ever since I began taking Tanlac. The indigestion has about left me, and I can eat with more satisfaction than I could before in a long time. Indigestion and gas on my stomach don't bother me at all and from the way Tanlac has fixed me up I am glad to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Took a Pot Shot at Mason

Shooting Case Will Be Tried at June Court.

Yesterday a preliminary investigation was made by County Magistrate Langley at Havelock into a charge laid by Arnold Mason who claimed that while walking along the road Henry Hughes of Norwood shot at him from a fence, missing him but sending the shots through a basket Mason was carrying. The reason given by Mason for the attempted injury dates back to a quarrel over some timber. The accused elected to be tried by a jury and his case will come up before the June sittings.

Mr. Wearing appeared for the defence and Mr. Hatton for the prosecution.

Hungarian Bankers Now Figureheads

Clerks Conduct the Business—Estates Seized by the Government.

VIENNA.—Following the practice put into effect by the Russian Soviet Government at Moscow, bank Presidents in Budapest have become mere figureheads while Soviet clerks administer the business. Rents no longer are paid to landlords, but to the Government, which is represented by the janitors. The stores have been nationalized and the heads of factories have been replaced by those elected by the workmen.

The banking business is being handicapped under the new regulations. No one is allowed to draw out more than $100 except in the payment of salaries. A check must be signed by all the trustees before it is submitted to a bank where it is honored on the condition that the trustees of the institution are shown to be employees.

During the period in which inventories are being taken all stores are closed except for the sale of food and drugs.

Thousands of refugees are traveling toward Vienna. All are deprived of their belongings at the frontier if they attempt to pass the border without being searched.

Members of the wealthy class have resolved to tarry in Budapest and await events. Countess Mary Karolyi a cousin of Count Karolyi, who recently resigned as Provisional President of Hungary, is quoted as saying:

"We have been reduced to fifteen acres of land and one horse. It is better to have that than roam over the world homeless. We have got to live somewhere, so it will be here."

There are but two classes in Hungary—aristocrats and peasants. The republic seemingly is more Russian than German.

All estates have been appropriated by the Government.

American officials are being well treated by the Hungarian officials and American couriers are allowed to pass in and out of Budapest without hindrance. Telegraphic service is restricted and slow.

Count Karolyi's position has not been damaged by the new regime, according to political observers, who say he cleverly vacated his position as Provisional President by shifting responsibility for the course of events to the Allies and then urging resistance against the Entente which resulted in a union of the Social Democrats and the Communists.

The railway strike in Hungary was followed by the engineers leaving their trains at whatever place they happened to be when the strike was called. Trains loaded with hundreds of passengers were left standing in the lonliest places.

In Czechoslovakia it is reported that uprisings have occurred. News of the Hungarian Bolshevism has spread rapidly, and the revolutionary spirit in West Ukraine and Rumania is said to be increasing.

As a woman sews, so shall her husband rip.

External and Internal

External eyestrain is strain of the muscles, on the outside of the eyeball which move it around in its socket. Internal eyestrain is the strain of those muscles on the inside of the eyeball and which help the eye to focus clearly.

Where glasses are needed to relieve eyestrain they must be ground for the individual using them—otherwise instead of relieving the strain they will increase it.

You Need More Than A Laxative

To correct constipation, all organs of digestion and elimination should be helped. Try NR and see how much better you feel.

NR Today—Keeps the Doctor Away

To live and be healthy, your body mechanism must properly digest your food, extract all the nourishment from it and promptly throw off the waste that is left. This is accomplished by the processes of digestion, assimilation and elimination—the work of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

The failure of any of the vital organs to do its work properly affects the action of all the others. A forced bowel movement does not help constipation; it only relieves for a few hours the condition that constipation brings about.

Now if you are used to taking so-called laxative pills, oil, purges and the like, you know mighty well you've got to be taking them all the time. Moreover, if you stick to any one laxative, you've got to be increasing the dose all the time. That can do you a lot of harm.

Stop doing yourself with such things just long enough to give Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) a trial, and let the results show the difference. NR Tablets are not mere bowel movers, their purpose is to correct the condition that [illegible]

NR

To correct constipation, to improve your digestion and assimilation, give you a good hearty appetite, regulate your liver and bowels, tone up kidney action and give your poison-clogged body a good cleaning out.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is not harsh; it is mild, easy, pleasant in action; no griping or pain ever follows its use; but it is thorough and sure.

By its action on the digestive organs it promotes assimilation, which means extraction of full nourishment from your food, and thereby gives you new strength, energy, better blood, better appetite. By toning, not stirring your lazy liver, NR sends bile into the intestines, improving intestinal digestion. Lastly, by gently encouraging more vigorous bowel and kidney action, NR drives poisonous impurities out of and cleans up your body.

Try Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and just see how much better you feel in every way. Get a 25c box today and take one each night for a week. You'll say you never felt better in your life. NR is sold, guaranteed and [illegible]

No Real Check on Liquor Seized By the Department

The Preliminary Canter of the Dewart-Ayearst Investigation

J. D. Flavelle on Stand.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, April 2.— The opening session of the Public Accounts committee to-day marked the preliminary canter in the much-talked-of Dewart-Ayearst charges, relative to the administration of the Ontario Temperance Act. Ostensibly, public accounts were to be under investigation, but in the preliminary stages little or nothing was said relative to accounts.

Col. H. A. C. Machin, K.C., began with the examination of J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the License Board. His interrogation, while of a searching character, was frequently punctuated with humorous sallies, and was designed to show that there had been lax administration in regard to the employment of "spotters" and other provincial detective officers. It elicited the fact that the license commissioners had appointed no license vendors in Northern Ontario, because it was thought that, with a country so sparsely populated there would be a temptation for vendor and doctor to act in collusion for the purpose of making it pay.

The examination disclosed the fact that the department had taken special precautions during the flu epidemic, even to the extent of permitting technical breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act in order that the public should not be permitted to suffer.

Had Fallen Down.

It was admitted by Mr. Flavelle that the licensed vendors had fallen down badly in Toronto in the matter of supplying liquor when it was most urgently needed.

The startling fact that probably over half a million prescriptions has been issued by the doctors since the Ontario Temperance Act came into force, was disclosed by Mr. Flavelle and it was admitted that until three weeks ago there was no real check on the liquor which was seized by the department.

Full Investigation.

T. Magladery, Temiskaming, took exception to the line the examination was taking, but was told there was to be the fullest investigation and the chairman ruled that Col. Machin was in order.

Following the close of the commission granted Sir William Meredith yesterday for the investigation of the Dewart charges, official announcement was made by the Chief Justice to-day that the inquiry will open at eleven o'clock on Friday morning of this week in Osgoode Hall.

J. A. Ayearst, the suspended chief license inspector of the department, maintaind his customary silence on the subject this morning. In company with other officials of the License Board, he was in attendance at the meeting of the Public Accounts committee.

REVOLUTION BREAKS OUT

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, April 2.—Reports that a revolution against the Soviet government has broken out in Petrograd are supported by an official wireless despatch received here, which says there is a serious strike of railway men in the Petrograd region. The strike, it is said, was prompted by the Menshevikl and the Social Revolutionaries.

Fire Destroys Farmer's Barn

South Monaghan Farmer Suffers Heavy Loss.

A fire broke out Monday morning March 31st on the farm of Harry Clements, South Monaghan, destroying the stables and contents. Three valuable horses, two cows, hens, geese and ducks, were burned as well as the vehicles in the adjoining shed.

The fire was first seen by Mr. Clements' little daughter, who was awakened by the reflection on the window. She at once gave the alarm but the fire was beyond control and nothing could be saved.

The cause of the fire is yet unknown.

Republic Has Been Proclaimed

Crown Prince Has Been Deposed.

Rural Members Appeared Before Railway Commission

Opposition to the Daylight Saving Measure.

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, April 2. — Rural members appeared unexpectedly before the Railway Commission this morning in opposition to the adoption of Daylight Saving by the railway companies. Sir Henry Drayton said that although the case was closed yesterday the commission was ready to hear application to give new evidence.

W. A. Boys, Simcoe South, and Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, were the principal speakers against the Daylight Savings. They pointed out that the rural population was greater than the urban, and their views should be consulted in such measures. They reiterated arguments given in Parliament against the measure, but Sir Henry Drayton pointed out that the Railway Commission's business was not to decide whether the country should adopt daylight saving but whether the railways should adopt it, and on this, it appeared that the Commission had pretty well made up its mind.

Secured Liquor Valued at $10,000

TORONTO, April 1. — Approximately $10,000 worth of alcohol and whiskey, one of the biggest seizures of liquor made since the advent of prohibition, was seized by Plain-clothesmen Forbes and Dunn, of Claremont Street Police Station, at a house on Palmerston avenue and Jacob Krasnow, Palmerston avenue, a junk dealer, was taken into custody on a charge of selling. Samuel Martin, Huron street; Samuel Smalack, Phoebe street, and H. Meyers, Markham street, were arrested on a charge of violating the Ontario Temperance Act. Jacob Seigel, of Niagara Falls, Ont., is held on a charge of shipping liquor into the city. All are out on $1,000 bail each.

According to the police, the men have been suspected for some stime. Information showed that liquor was being stored in large quantities in the downtown section of the city, and retailed surreptitiously. Matters came to a head Sunday, and about six o'clock Sunday evening the police raided Krasnow's junk yards on Palmerston avenue, and at Front and Portland streets, and found the liquor concealed in a number of bales of rags. Axes were requisitioned to burst the bales, when the bottles and other receptacles were disclosed, wrapped carefully to prevent breakage. In all, 121 gallons of alcohol and 114 cases of whiskey were seized. It is understood that the men got away a five-ton truck of liquor before the seizure was made. Several rigs were required to haul the liquor to the police station. It is alleged that Krasnow, when he saw discovery and subsequent arrest inevitable, attempted to bribe the police to take away sufficient liquor to make the case an ordinary B.O.T.A. It is said that he offered Forbes and Dunn $500 each.

THROUGHOUT RHINELAND.

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, April 2. — Violent outbreaks and sabotage throughout the Rhineland and Westphalia districts, were reported in a Berlin despatch to the Times to-day.

PETERBORO COUNTY'S DEMAND FOR "AUTO" TAX FINDS SUPPORT

Reinforcements are coming to the support of the Peterboro County Council in its contention and demand that the revenue from automobile licenses should be expended upon the roads in the localities from which it is collected. The Hamilton Council has even a broader claim than this. They want not only the automobile license money but also the fines that speeders and other motor offenders pay into the police court. London has a little grievance all its own. It objects to the Highway Legislation that places the towns and cities at the mercy of the rural municipalities. For instance, if Peterboro county or any sections thereof adjoining the city were to adopt the Good Roads policy, Peterboro would have to pay a large share of the construction and maintenance of so-called suburban roads, but would have no right or privilege of objecting.

London has had to contribute its share to good roads radiating from it, but is now protesting against the levy, which in a sense contravenes a city's Magna Charta. London demands equal power and authority with the county. It is also circulating a petition requesting that twenty-five per cent. of the automobile tax collected in the towns be returned to the municipalities, one-half that sum to be spent on urban and the other half on suburban roads.

Ald. Phelan informed the Board of Works last night of a meeting on Saturday next with the County Council to discuss local road questions, and it was decided to bring up the Hamilton and London communications at that session.

Col. William McLean Found Dead in Bed

A Prominent Citizen of Port Hope Passes Away at Huntsville.

PORT HOPE, April 2. — Colonel William McLean, one of Port Hope's most prominent citizens, was found dead in bed at the Dominion Hotel, Huntsville, yesterday morning. He was a member of the Ideal Clothing Factory here, and left yesterday morning on a business trip to the north. He was apparently in his usual good health and spent the day calling on his different customers. As he did not come down stairs at the usual hour this morning the proprietor of the hotel investigated, and it was found that Mr. McLean had passed away during the night, heart failure being the cause.

Mr. McLean took an active part in municipal affairs and served on the council board for several years. He was Port Hope's representative on the Counties Council, and also held the office of Warden. He was active in military circles and was in command of the Durham Field Battery for many years.

In addition to his wife, he leaves two daughters, Elizabeth, at home, and Ella, a nursing sister, overseas, and six sons, Stanley, of the Harris Abattoir, Toronto, Lt. Norman, Toronto, Ernest, Bert and Wilfrid in Montreal, and Howard in Calgary.

All one has to do to start a riot in New Brunswick now is to mention the word "Potatoes."

Barbarous Murder Near Port Hope

Crazed Man Kills His Mother and Tries to Burn Body.

BOWMANVILLE, April 2.—This community was terribly shocked yesterday to learn that a telephone message had come to Richard Jarvis, High County Constable, to hasten to Newtonville to arrest a man named Herbert Copeland, who had murdered his mother. Mr. Jarvis was quickly motored to that village, ten miles from this town, and found the body of the victim of her only son's awful work lying in the back yard of the Copeland residence, on the hill top by the cemetery overlooking the village from the northwest. Chief Jarvis told The Globe representative that the condition of the body presented the most gruesome sight he ever beheld in his long experience as a police officer.

Hannah Copeland, daughter of the late George Copeland, one of the early settlers of Clarke township, had lived all her lifetime in and near the village of Newtonville. The family consisted of one son and one daughter, the latter's whereabouts being unknown. The story as told to The Globe's representative is:

Quarreled Over Handkerchief

Yesterday morning about 9 o'clock Herbert started a quarrel with his mother over a pocket handkerchief of his which he declared she had. The story told to Chief Jarvis was that when the son failed to get the handkerchief he made a vicious attack on his mother with a long and sharp-bladed pocket knife, and slashed her abdomen. She attempted to run out of the house, when he seized an axe and struck her on the head, felling her to the floor. He then proceeded to mutilate the body in a horrible manner, which he placed beside the stove, cuting some boards into kindling wood and placing it round the body, set it on fire. Soon the odor of burning flesh became too offensive and he threw water over the fire and extinguished it. He then dragged the mutilated body out into the back yard. Some neighbors happened to see the man hauling the woman's body out of the house, and going to the Copeland home and seeing the horrifying sight, immediately telephoned to Chief Jarvis.

Told Officer of His Crime

When the high constable arrived after visiting the scene of the tragedy he went to the place of the nearest neighbor, W. J. Ovens, where he arrested Copeland, who offered no resistance. He was brought to Bowmanville and lodged in the lock-up. He conversed freely with the constable and told him much of the story of his crime. He will appear before William Horsey, Police Magistrate, tomorrow at 10 o'clock, charged with matricide.

Herbert Copeland has been a farm hand and worked all his life among the farmers around Newtonville. He was known to possess a violent temper, but was a good worker. He had not lived with his mother, regularly making his home with an uncle, Patrick Cotter, whose wife is a sister of the dead woman, and he went home to stay only a few days ago.

Woman Highly Regarded

Mr. Copeland was an exceedingly kind and generous-hearted neighbor and never happier than when doing a good turn for some of the farmers. She was a hard worker, and had spent much of her time working in the homes in and near the village. She was seventy years of age, but still active and quite vigorous. The people all have nothing but appreciative words to say of the unfortunate woman.

Dr. M. M. Tucker of Orono, County Coroner, has empaneled a jury, and after viewing the remains adjourned to Monday evening at eight o'clock.

Have You Heard Frank Bessenger At the Royal?

The Treat of the Season—See Charlie Chaplin To-night—A Great Programme.

One of the best programmes the Royal Theatre has given to the public of Peterborough will be seen for the last time to-night.

William Farnham as Jean Valjean, in Les Miserables, is the feature picture. The fourteenth episode of the serial, 'The Iron Test,' is one of the best episodes of this picture. The Boy Scout picture is creating a good impression, and for the comedy, Charlie Chaplin will be on hand to-day and to-morrow.

In addition to this great picture programme, Mr. Frank Bessenger, the silver tenor, is worth more than the admission alone. He spent twelve weeks at the Regent in Toronto, and is going to return on special request.

Don't fail to attend the Royal to-night.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. W. J. Hopwood left for Toronto to-day. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will occupy her apartment while she is away.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Jones, Rutherford avenue, when about thirty of their friends gathered to welcome Pte. B. R. Wetherup, brother of Mrs. Jones, who has recently returned from overseas, having spent two years in active service in France. The evening was spent in progressive euchre and dancing. The prizes were won by Miss V. Murduff and Mr. F. Hartman, after which a dainty lunch was served. Among the friends present was Pte. D. Darrah, brother of Mrs. A. Hatton, Rutherford avenue, who also returned home last week. About three o'clock the party broke up with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Jones for the pleasant evening.

Corporal A. R. Olver of the Railway Construction Battalion, 256th, arrived home on Monday, 31st, having spent two years in overseas service. His home is in Smith township.

Mr. C. B. Routley is in Montreal for the week on business.

Gunner Ormond Cavanah arrived home yesterday. Gunner Cavanah went overseas as a sergeant in the 33rd Battery and has been away over three and a half years.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Welsh, and little son, Simcoe street, have returned home after a two weeks visit with their daughter at Picton, Ont.

Adjutant Buntin of the local Salvation Army Corps, left for Toronto this afternoon to be at the bedside of his mother, who is ill.

Miss Cahill has returned from a visit in Florida.

Sapper George Barrell has returned to Peterboro from overseas. His home is at 171 River Road.

Mr. J. C. Taylor, of the Dominion Bank staff has been transferred to the Brampton branch.

Miss Nina Borradaile who has been visiting Miss Eileen Fair left yesterday for Toronto to visit her brother, Mr. Leo Borradaile.

Miss Ruby Crawford and Miss Gange spent the week end in Lindsay with Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott.

Miss Bertha Smith and Miss Edith Simpson spent a few days this week with Mrs. Archie Barjarow, Lindsay.

Gunner W. Begley, of Peterboro who recently returned from three years' service overseas spent the week end in Lindsay.

Mrs. Marling, Mrs. Langley and Mrs. Stuart are in the city today from Lakefield.

Post Office Clock Is An Hour Behind

LETTER CARRIERS GO TO WORK AN HOUR EARLIER.

The Peterboro Normal School, a government institution, is still under the old time and will continue to be until the Ontario government falls into line with the cities, who nearly all have adopted it.

The post office clock lags an hour behind the town clock in spite of the fact that the letter carriers rise an hour earlier than heretofore in the morning.

Brantford is practically the only city in Western Ontario which has not adopted Daylight Saving. The city council decided to continue under "farmers' time" until the new time was general throughout the province.

Trial Lasts Eight Hours

James Goodman Was Fined $200 and Costs.

Claiming to have been threatened with a prison sentence if he did not tell where he procured his liquor "Happy Heels" formerly a night operator at Havelock, who was fined for being drunk last week, admitted that he got his liquor from James Goodman. On the charge of breach of the Ontario Temperance following Heels admission, Goodman yesterday was fined $200 and costs by County Magistrate Langley. At the trial which lasted from 4 o'clock until midnight twelve witnesses were called and the defence tried to prove an alibi. After a hard fight the Magistrate finally convicted him.

Mr. Joseph Wering appeared for the prosecution, Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defence.

Do You Want a Little Golden Hair Bride in Your Home?

Here's your Chance, Rich Romeo's of the Twenty-Seventh, but she Lives in Arkansas.

NEW YORK, March 29. — When Horace Foster, secretary to District Attorney Swann, began work by reading the hundreds of letters on his desk, his gaze was attracted to a pale pink envelope at the bottom of the heap. As he opened it fragrance from within suggested an interesting message. Here is what he read:

"Dear Sir — Please publish this in your leading newspapers. I presume you will think it strange that a girl from Arkansas should be writing you asking your assistance in finding her a husband. But the truth is, I am, and more, want a very rich husband.

"I have been raised in the lap of luxury, and now at the age of eighteen, I find I can no longer keep my present position in life without help, and therefore I want a husband.

"I was born and raised in New Mexico and came to Arkansas a few years ago. I am five feet three and one-quarter inches tall, and weigh one hundred pounds. Have golden brown hair and large brown eyes. I have a kind and loving disposition, with just enough temper to make me interesting. I am not boasting, but a large number of my acquaintances say I am pretty. However, that is not for me to say.

"I hate the big out of doors. I love to do, see and hear everything worth while. I wonder if I'll receive my answer.

400 RAG-PICKERS ARE MILLIONAIRES IN U.S.

WASHINGTON,—Now comes the "rag-picking millionaire".

Estimates compiled from Government reports on 'waste reclamation" in the United States indicate that over four hundred millionaires have been developed from pursuit of "any rags, any bones, any bottles, to-day?

Rag-picking and collection of tin cans, scrapiron, old paper, wire, rubber and all discarded materials represent an annual turnover of $2,000,000,000 according to incomplete estimates.

And all kinds and classes are "getting into the rag game," because of its monetary attractions. The Waste Reclamation Service of the commerce department has discovered one Harvard man, who gave up a $10,000 a year "rag-picking' job to enter war work—and now he's going back to his original work again.

This year is expected to be one of the biggest in the history of the business.

More than two hundred collection and sorting plants, in operation in big cities alone, average a turn-over of $2,000,000 worth of business annually. Here the rags and paper are separated, baled and sold to manufacturing plants.

Steel regained its place as the market leader last Friday, when the new schedule of prices was announced.

Stirring Address Was Given at Annual Meeting Board of Trade by Mr. Ryerson Ritchie

"We are in council together tonight to plan our future course as a city; to see how we may adapt and adjust the several functions and resources at our command in a broad co-operative plan of development," said Mr. Ryerson Ritchie. The world over cities are doing the same thing. Commissions and specialists are at work studying and planning how to correct physical, industrial and social faults so as to make each city fit for a worthier place in the great reconstructive activities just ahead. We fully realize that Peterboro's future is in the making and if the problems of the community are left to the individual or to little groups of individuals, as they have too often been left in the past, Peterboro would lag behind in the coming race for position.

Business Corporation

"Gradually we have come to see that our city is in reality a great business corporation, of which we are shareholders, and it is up to us to see that its management, functions and agencies work efficiently and in union like a highly organized railway or manufactory. And we see rather clearly now that our communities actually have the power to make or break or regulate any interest or combination of interests that does not contribute, directly or indirectly to the human wellbeing individually or collectively.

"The history of Peterboro is like that of other cities. Public affairs have been ostensibly in the hands of the few. As time passed "money-making" became more and more the occupation of the far-sighted, enterprising individual or group. Wealth became cumulative and, as everywhere else, filtered into the pockets of the few.

Full Contribute

"As a city we have surely paid our full contribute to private enterprise and private wealth. The prosperity of the future and the future of the city will be in the hands of the many not of the few. The trend toward that condition imposes a new and patriotic responsibility upon those men and women who are especially fitted for leadership. It is of very great importance, as we plan our city's future, that all the parts forming the community shall work smoothly and in unison, each carrying its fair share of the load—no more, no less. Peterboro is a constituted democracy with entire freedom to make its own laws and ordinances and conduct its own affairs as it sees fit, consonant of course, with the statutes of the province and Dominion.

Facing the Future

"Facing the future, therefore, it seems proper that the Board of Trade, composed as it is of the leading associations that represent trade, industry and the professions, should set out to devise, agree upon and work to a definite, comprehensive, and constructive plan of City Building: first for the substantial expansion of industry; second, for the acquirement and improvement of parks and public grounds; third, for better building, housing and neighborhood conditions; fourth, for improved and more practical moral, physical and manual education; and fifth, for the better conduct and administration of public affairs.

Industrial Expansion

"The Board of Trade may and should become the centre of action, the agency, if you like, by means of which the city shall plan and build. The city can literally mould its own character and shape its own destiny; it can have its own industrial standards, its social and civic ideals. One of the chief functions of the Board of Trade is to investigate, plan for and locate industries. If we shall mass the better intelligencies of the city and apply these in the work of industrial promotion we shall discriminate between those industries that have or have not substantial value to us. We can actually foresee and define our own industrial development. The industrial centres of the future are to be economic centres. It is not difficult to ascertain what our material, mechanical and economical advantages are and what industries can prosper here at this population centre of Canada.

Specific Plan

"When we have a specific industrial plan we shall then establish a selling agency that can do business on business lines with business men in Canada, the United States, England, France or Italy. We shall find that the baits we have heretofore used, such as free land and freedom from taxation, are petty inducements when compared with primary and continuing manufacturing advantages.

"There is another element that touches the problem of industrial growth. I refer to the co-operation of the mechanic and artisan in the work of City Building. Workmen seem to realize that obligation but I often think that in their allegiance to unionism they lose sight of the greater social objects just beyond the point of self-seeking. They know quite well that as capital is necessary to industry, so management and labor are necessary to industrial proficiency, and that these three are of necessity interdependent. Capital is timid—whether it amounts to one hundred or one hundred thousand dollars—active only when confident of fair play.

Organized Labor

"Organized labor is not troubled with over-much timidity in fact it is inclined to be restive, fractious and dictatorial, "Said Mr. Ritchie. "None of these three human factors can escape or evade their responsibility to the community for their interests become more and more a part of it. If the workers and managers and owners shall co-operate and zealously strive to specialize and elevate the standards of Industrial Production in Peterboro, they shall all benefit, and the city will become attractive to those industries that regard "quality" as of primary importance.

City Building

"When it shall become known to the outside world that Peterboro has a definite plan of City Building, based on the principle that benefit to one interest is the benefit of all, and that we have a common ideal and ambition, we shall get much free and profitable advertising. But, after all, it is more important that Peterboro shall not only seem great to the outside world, but that it shall be greater than it seems. Our power of accomplishment should be a real power—economic, effective. One thing you may depend upon, the great world expansion of trade and industry—the greatest in human history—shall profit the cities according to their ability to get into the fighting lines. If Peterboro has a fixed determination to excell and is thoroughly equipped for the industrial contest she should grow and grow rapidly. Once in the fighting lines we shall be all right.

Real Distinction

"What is it that gives a city real distinction, power, prosperity? It is its public spirit; the spirit that drives all interests and all people to labor intelligently and continuously for better abilities and constantly improving conditions in the city's evolution.

"I wonder if we see the force and pertinency of that assertion. Unless we do see it and act upon it, much in the same way that we would see and act upon a vital question touching upon our career our own solvency, we shall fall short in our duty to ourselves as citizens.

"Peterboro has exceptional natural and acquired advantages. It occupies a strategic position as the centre of population for the Dominion. It has colossal water powers. It is served by the two great railways and may now ship for export from our factory docks to tidewater via the Trent Canal. Soon our canal boats may carry freight to and from the Northern ports of the Great Lakes. The great industries already established here by local, American and English capital give the city industrial prestige. All the city now needs to insure its rapid growth is public spirit and staying quality. If you make a sound base for the city's expansion, creative and business skill will do the rest. Our men of genius, enterprise and courage shall lead us and we shall unite to back them up. That is one reason why you now propose to establish and support your Board of Trade. Here the several sections and committees may meet to blaze the way to new and productive industrial fields.

Parks and Public Grounds

"Let us turn to another feature of the city's need and put another plank in our platform. I do not believe there is anywhere on this continent a more beautiful bit of land and water formation than that within a radius of thirty miles of Peterboro. It is a great natural park of forest and plain, hill and field, lake and river. Nature has been lavish in her gifts to this particular section and has especially favored the site upon which our city is built. What have we, as a city, done to help Nature? What have we done to preserve or reserve and open up for the enjoyment of our people the woods and grass-grown fields? What have we done to improve the watersides or the long stretches of natural parkway beside the river, the stream of placid lakes? To our shame it may be said that we have destroyed and are destroying some of God's rich gifts to our people; this may not have been done intentionally, but because we do not keep the welfare of the common people in our democratic minds.

Peterboro's Parks

"Peterboro has three parks and four public squares, aggregating less than a hundred acre farm. There are no drive-ways, park-ways or boulevards.

In a little pamphlet issued by the city it is said "The parks are large, well laid out, convenient and admirably adapted for rest and recreation." In another published some years ago by the Board of Trade it is stated that "seventy-eight and one half acres of parks have been retained . . for the children." The parks are advertised as among Peterboro's conspicuous attractions. One would think that these parks resulted from the enterprise, foresight and public spirit of the city itself, when in fact the city did nothing. It has not provided a single park. Our three parks were gifts to our people. All are in the north end. There are none within the half mile circle, and none in the east, west and south.

Other Cities

"So far as I know there is not a single city of equal population or importance in North America that is as barren of public parks and recreation ground as the city of Peterboro. I know of one city, younger, though now more populous than Peterboro, that has twelve parks and many squares aggregating more than eleven hundred acres. In our tense anxiety to promote business we have given away to railways and other corporations lands and water frontages of priceless value to our people. We haven't even safeguarded what nature did for us. We know now what we have lost by not having had foresight. Peterboro is far behind the modern progressive city and yet Nature has laid at our feet, so to speak, an unrivalled opportunity; with this glorious gift of nature, we can, with a little art and industry and at negligable cost, make Peterboro one of the most attractive cities in the Dominion if not on this continent.

A Strange Condition

"The name Nicholls is the most honored name in Peterboro. Why? Because to the benefactions of Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls, to her public spirit, and to her human interest in the welfare and enjoyment of the people among whom she lived in this city, owes its greatest debt of gratitude. To her bentficence we owe Nicholls Hospital and Nicholls, Inverlea and Jackson Parks. Is it not strange that this noble example of Mrs. Nicholls has not been followed by many rich men and women to whose prosperity and fortune this city contributed?

"I am sure that intelligent, well directed efforts on the part of the Board of Trade will hasten the acquirement of a network of parks and parkways, of playgrounds and the beaches for this city where children may romp and have a sense of joyous life and freedom.

Housing and Neighborhoods

"Better building, better housing and better neighborhood conditions is another section in our plan of City Building. We must make it worth while for people to live in Peterboro not merely to earn a living but to live comfortably, contentedly and happily. We must assure them an interest in our community and a share in our enjoyment of and loyalty to it. We must make it easy for them to acquire homes and live in congenial surroundings. The contractors and workmen in the building trades can do much by way of suggestion and co-operation under a plan that shall have the interest and ambition of the community at heart.

Civic Education

"I wonder if our excellent system of education touches intimately the problem of the higher citizenship. Is the child led to understand character building—trained to acquire propriety of language, manners and deportment? Are the theories of sound business and sound government taught in the finishing grades. Are individual culture, personal character and civic responsibility in the curriculum? Are our young people trained from the primary grades to the high school in order that they may take their places in the social and civic life of the city—and lead the city onward?

"What are we doing to regulate the influences that help to mould the character of our men and women of to-morrow? What of the liberty of the theatre or "movie" to play upon and profit by sensationalism? Their chief patrons are our young people. Immoralism, crimes, dare-devil ex-

To Arouse Interest in Pulleys

People know vaguely that pulleys are used to convey power, but they don't realize that pulleys can be a source of money wasted.

Yet it is a fact that any metal pulley running on the same load at the same speed costs about $8.00 per year more to operate than does a Dodge Wood-Split Pulley.

The light weight, sturdy construction and adhesive surface of the Dodge Wood-Split Pulley insures this greater efficiency.

Our local stockers carry standard sizes, and will wire orders for pulleys of special dimensions.

OFFICERS' WIVES AS LOOTERS.

Were Brought From Germany to Help Sack French Homes.

PARIS.—The Senate considered today the report of a commission which was sent to investigate conditions in portions of France which were occupied by the Germans during the war.

M. Reynald, reporting for the commission, said that the Germans methodically destroyed property, and that many German officers brought their wives to the occupied regions to help them carry away goods taken from French homes. In describing the systematic pillage of St. Quentin and Rheims, M. Reynald said:

"The Germans did not understand the soul of France and did not realize that by their methods they but strengthened our resistance."

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAYBE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises, or are growing hard of hearing, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

ploits, low and highway robberies, mawkish lovemaking and whatnot are the stock in trade of the "movies." The "movies" have the right to entertain the public but should not have unrestrained freedom—at all events not in Peterboro—to demoralize the rising generation. Do we need a federal or provincial law to permit this city to regulate its character-forming influences? Certainly not! We are entirely capable of regulating the "movies" or any other institution that effects the public mind, young or old. When the City Council does not act the public can act through its Board of Trade, which should be so constructed and equipped as to be able to put positive forces at work to safeguard the public welfare.

Public Affairs

"We hear a lot nowadays about various systems of Government but usually we hear it from those cities that have failed to successfully manage themselves, cities under the heel of some party or class or interest. Only such cities have sought relief by changing their system of Government. If a city has been incompetently managed under one system, it isn't likely that it will suddenly become competent by merely changing its system.

Good Government

"Of course, the city must have a system but whether it works or not, depends not only upon the intelligence and fitness of those who serve under it, but upon the concern, ability, and spirit of the people who are actually responsible for its workableness. The most carefully devised system will not function without the vital elements that make efficiency. The only excuse for a change from the good old democratic system of municipal management established in England and generally adopted by the cities of North America, is not efficiency of that system but the incompetency of the people themselves. However, an excuse isn't a reason. If the people are indifferent about the increase of taxes, willing to let the affairs of the city be conducted in a happy-go-lucky fashion, or ready to leave it to those who represent some particular interest, they alone are to blame. When the public debt and cost of Government increase so as to pinch we yell about it and go on yelling, quite insensible of our own accountability.

Main Defect

"The main defect in the management of our cities is that we do not really seem to care how our civic business is done. We delegate all our responsibilities as citizens to those who volunteer for, or who openly seek the offices and "electioneer" for our vote. We don't bother ourselves much as to whether they are fitter men for the jobs; we go on hearsay or impressions, for the most part we go on what the men say of themselves. We do not seriously investigate, carefully consider nor weigh the respective merits of the candidates. The fact is we trifle with our civic responsibility. One of the results of such a state of things is a growing dislike on the part of our better informed and more useful men for public offices.

City is Fortunate

"Peterboro is fortunate in having many men of high character and ability in its councils and boards, as well as in official positions. But that should always be so. The fitness of our city's legislature, administrations and executives is of paramount importance if Peterboro is to realize its ambition, not only to become a fast growing industrial centre, but a city of superior character and distinction. The common sense people of this city know that the better men among them are those they should choose to represent them and conduct their business, and if they have such men in their service, they can trust them to see, as far as the city is concerned, that the legitimate "rights" of all classes are neither injured nor favored.

"It doesn't take much "readin' and writin'" for us to know that the city will never be successfully conducted by any self-seeking class, nor by a combination of such classes on a basis of rights or representation, because some one interest is certain to gain the ascendancy and then it will be inclined to become a stealthy or outspoken manipulator for its class; moreover the government of the city, under such a charter as that of Peterboro must not be one of class; the city is a democracy governed by the people.

Personal Fitness

"It is not, of course, the business of the Board of Trade to pass upon the personal fitness of candidates for public office, but it is its business to advocate sound business principles and methods in conducting city business. The city needs an intermediary association of citizens that on one hand represents the advanced thought and public opinion of the city, and, on the other is in frank and friendly relation with the city's managers: as such it will receive the unreserved support of every worthy citizen.

"It is often said that the City Council is jealous of its prerogatives—jealous to the point of resenting any interest on the part of the Board of Trade, or, for that matter, anybody else. Well, if that was even true it was probably long ago when the Board of Trade was like the gun that went off "half cocked" or the bull in the china shop that butted in without examining or knowing about the delicate things it was butting into. But let me say that resentment on the part of any Board of Aldermen against any body of citizens that is intelligently, sincerely and judically seeking the common good, is as much of an absurdity as an inconsequent Board of Trade. But now these bodies, one authoritive and the other voluntary, are both of a new order and must realize as never before that they are creatures of the public and servants of the public welfare. We want Boards of Aldermen big enough and democratic enough to safeguard the public interest in small things as well as big things. We want a Board of Trade that will co-ordinate the various interests; one that will not only voice public opinion, but see to it that public opinion is a dominant influence in City Government. The Board of Aldermen need such a civic organization to council with and aid it. At all events the City needs a Board of Trade strong enough and fearless enough to see to it that one interest does not impose upon any other; intelligent enough to know that the health and prosperity of each group of citizens makes the health and prosperity of the city as a whole. No one need make a mistake about that, the people of Peterboro will have confidence in and will stand by such a Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade

"When the Greater Peterboro Organization was organized two years ago it did seem to give promise. Mayor Duffas wrote me about it and may I venture to read what I then said in a letter to him?

The Letter

"'Since writing you on the 3rd, I have read the published reports of your first and second meetings and I now have your letter of the 5th inst. Nothing that I have read leads me to believe that the movement you have inaugurated ensures efficient methods. Two serious faults have marked every associated movement in Peterboro: first, they have started with exaggerated promise and on temporary impulse; and second not one of them has had in view a definite far reaching plan of City Building. What you want and what every earnest citizen wants is an efficient and constructive plan that will outlast the month, the year, or the decade. We must have the better informed and more useful men in the city's service if it is to get ahead in the race for position. And I say that with all due respect for and much appreciation for the men, who, like yourself, have tried to serve. We are not short of good and capable men in Peterboro; what we need is to make the right use of their talents and helpfulness in retual co-operative work. Let me urge you to be careful of one thing—the organization of an association of which too much will be expected, both in time and results. What it will need least in what it will get most of—criticism. Its name, constitution or by-laws will not in themselves make it worth

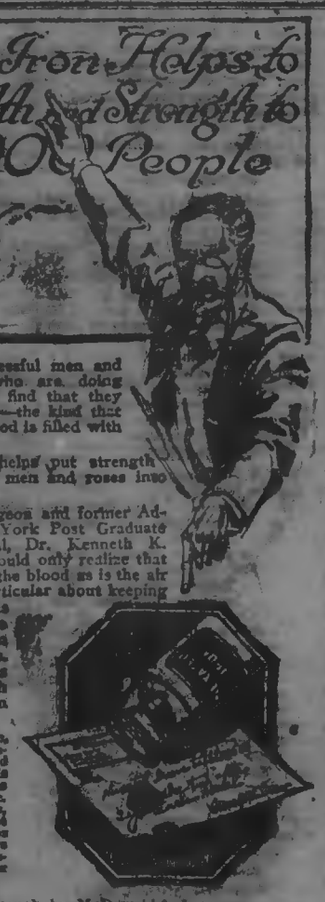
Nuxated Iron Helps to Spread Health and Strength to 3,000,000 People Annually—Get Your Share!



When you think of the successful men and women you know—people who are doing things worth while—you will find that they possess force, vim and energy—the kind that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron.

Iron is red blood food—it helps put strength and energy into the veins of men and roses into the cheeks of women.

A prominent New York Surgeon and former Adjunct Professor of the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine, says: "If people would only realize that iron is just as indispensable to the blood as is the air to the lungs and be just as particular about keeping up a sufficient supply at all times there would, in my opinion, be far less disease resulting from anaemic, weakened conditions. In my opinion, Nuxated Iron is the most valuable tonic, strength and blood builder any physician can prescribe."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which has been prescribed and recommended by physicians and which is used by over three million people annually is not a secret remedy, but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money.

THEY ACTED IN TIME

During 1917, twenty men all hale and hearty insured their lives in the Sun Life of Canada. All paid the first premium, none lived to pay the second.

They paid a total of $5076.26 and their beneficiaries received $74,212.60.

The records for 1918, owing to the ravages of the "Flu" will show the above record repeated many times, and all such acted in time.

What are you going to do about it? Act in time or be forever too late.

The Sun Life of Canada paid these claims willingly and promptly and will do the same for your loved ones if you act in time.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AMARYLLIS.

An Explanation That Reconciled the Sweethearts.

By MARTHA McC.-WILLIAMS.

Outside it was raw and gusty, with white, high lying clouds scudding so thickly across a pale sky that only wan and watery sunshine strained through the breaks between. Inside there was the balm of May, especially in the south parlor, where I knew I should find Myrtilla.

Myrtilla is tall and twenty, with a child's foot and a turn of the head and neck that would become an empress. She has coral red lips, a fine, straight nose, olive skin, dark almond eyes, heavily lashed and lidded, and a low, straight brow, deeply shadowed by dusky flow silk hair. In virtue of all this she reigns as a queen over most men. We had been engaged until two weeks ago—to be exact, until the date of the Verinews' ball and the episode of the Grantley girl.

The ball is ancient history now. Besides, it has really nothing to do with the case. I left off dancing with the Grantley girl at 4 a. m. to fling myself into tweeds and set forth upon a week's journey. Coming home from it, I found my table cumbered with my letters to Myrtilla down to the most fragmentary note—those of the last week unopened—my rings, my books, a bracelet of two, the locket with my picture and a litter of those idiotic things one sends at Christmas and Easter and on birthdays. It was this litter that saved me from utter despair. I reasoned that if Myrtilla had cared enough for me to keep it all this time she could not give up caring for me in a moment.

Still, I knew there was a tough job ahead. But I did not dream she would go to the length of refusing to see or hear me or even to listen to my side of the case through Aunt Bab, most tactful of her people back-bone and all but Dicky. Dicky is fifteen and owns the distinction of being the only chap in trousers Myrtilla has found herself unable to subjugate. I cannot flatter myself that Dicky's advocacy of my cause was wholly disinterested. Dicky has a fine nose for terrier pups and a relish for stolen gallops on my hunters. At home he is allowed nothing more hazardous than a steady going cob. However that may be, it meant a lot to have any sort of friend at court. Otherwise how should the hall door have swung open at my approach? The servants had strict orders to shut it civilly in my face.

"She's in there. It beats me why you want her, why you want any girl, when you've got heaps of dogs and horses." Dicky said, grinning, as I shot past him. "She's been real hateful polite; no good for even a fight this whole week.", Dicky's voice pursued me down the hall.

The south parlor is a square jut, open upon three sides to the sun, with walls more than half windows, iron barred outside and full of green growing things within. There is a big fireplace.

Myrtilla stood in front of it, her eyes intently fixed upon the smoldering logs. At my entrance she started ever so little, turned her head the least bit and kept on staring in the fire.

"Myrtilla," I ventured irresolutely, my hand still on the doorknob.

She sat down and took up her embroidery, her face still further averted. Then I knew I had won half a point. If she had been as angry as she believed herself to be she would have marched away with her nose in the air.

I began again formally, "Miss Grey," but stopped short. She had begun to whistle over her work softly, meditatively, as though she knew herself to be alone.

Something happened then. I am neither poet nor romancer, but my ranging eye saw in the south window a creature of tropic charm, slim and tall, green gowned as a wood nymph, with wonderful golden tawny eyes and a crown still more wonderfully red. As I went to her she shivered and set all her green gown fluttering defensively, but I paid no heed to it, only said joyously, baring my head:

"Amaryllis! You are a real godsend. I was never so glad to see any one in all my life."

Myrtilla's head came around so that I saw her profile out of the tail of my eye. I fancied she stared, but dared not make sure of it. My wood nymph barely nodded; her tremors were all at rest. I bent toward her low enough to look into her golden tawny eyes and ran on:

"What have you done to yourself? You are so beautiful, so strangely, so rarely beautiful, it makes me desperate that I did not keep my heart for you, or, rather, it would make me desperate if hearts were things that could be given or kept at will."

Certainly the wood nymph stared. The golden tawny eyes looked at me unwinking. Myrtilla's head had turned a little more. Her lips were the least bit parted, as though her breath came hard. I straightened and stuck a hand in my pocket as I added:

"The pity of it! There's a true heart gone to waste! True hearts are none so plenty, Amaryllis."

"Certainly they are not," came scornfully from the fireside. I affected not to hear and went on manfully:

"I've played and lost—lost so miserably. Listen—then tell me if you think I quite deserve what I am getting."

"I am going away," came faintly from Myrtilla's chair, but Myrtilla herself sat still and even made a pretense of putting stitches into her work. Finding me silent through a long minute, she sat very straight and added:

"Naturally one is nervous at finding oneself alone with a lunatic. Only lunatics talk to things as though they were people."

"Don't mind her, Amaryllis," I said softly. "Poor creature, she is jealous. She thinks you are no more than a lily blooming in a pot. We know better, of course."

"Really I did not dream you had so much imagination," Myrtilla said outright, snipping her thread as she spoke.

I stirred harder than ever at Amaryllis, saying: "Imagination is a fearful thing sometimes. I am glad, Amaryllis, you altogether lack it. You would never see in ordinary civilities to a pretty girl anything to turn your lovely golden tawny eyes green."

"Dancing or sitting out every other number, I suppose, comes under the head of 'ordinary civilities,'" Myrtilla said, her lip curling.

I kept on quietly: "And even if you felt like you would let me explain. The Verinews have hearts as big as their fortune. Thus it happens I owe them what money can never pay. Not so many years back there was a big flurry in the street that put my governor in the worst sort of hole. It needed a cool million to get him out, and a Verinew million did it. Yet the governor was hardly an acquaintance. Verinew learned his extremity by chance and came to his help because, as he phrased it, he didn't think the other side was putting up a square deal. It does not lessen the obligation that he got his million back, plus a good profit. Eventually the Grantley girl will have it with several millions more. She is a granddaughter—unacknowledged because lime. Verinew wishes to seem as young as their fortune—but the very apple of the Verinew eye. They wanted her to be the belle of the ball. She was shy and sensitive and frightened half out of her wits. Somehow she trusted me"—

"I don't at all wonder at that," said a voice from the fireplace.

I bowed gravely and resumed: "When she is not frightened she is pretty, Armaryllis. Her head is splendidly red—not quite so red as yours. She is light on her feet, too, and loves to dance as well as the Sowers do. The trouble is she has not yet quite caught the rhythms she must move to so needs must lean heavily upon her partner. I understood some of the others did not. Occasionally one was flurried, still more occasionally one impertinent. And a single cad let her see he was ashamed of dancing with her in spite of the millions. At her first ball—think of it! I had to take away the sting of it somehow. Perhaps I did seem devoted, but she didn't understand. I told her about Myrtilla in our very first waltz."

A little inarticulate cry from the fireplace here. Covertly I saw tears on Myrtilla's cheeks. She made as though to rise, but sank back, turned away her head and resumed the furious stabbing with her needle. I gathered the greenery of Armaryllis in my hands, laid my cheek against it and said dreamily:

"Amaryllis, tell me why I am fated to love dusky hair. All the painters and poets agree that red is ever so much more beautiful."

"Are you sure, quite sure, you do love it?" Myrtilla asked tremulously. She was not answered in words.

Five minutes later Dicky, bursting in upon us, found us side by side, looking down at Amaryllis through sunshine grown suddenly and magically warm and golden. After a long look Dicky whistled, turned on his heel and said from the door over his shoulder: "So you two have made it up. McGuffers said you would 'cause that red lily bloomed so far ahead of time. But I don't care about that. All I want is to know what you're goin' to give me when you get mar-

Come Mother, This Castor Oil Is What You Need---Don't Cry!

If you, mother, had to swallow the awful dose---Think back to your childhood days---Ugh!

Give your children Cascarets instead. Cascarets taste like candy. Every child loves to take a Cascaret. Besides Cascarets act better on the little liver and bowels when the child is bilious, constipated, feverish and sick. Cascarets are delightful---harmless---cheap!

Each 10 cent box of Cascarets, the pleasant candy cathartic, contains directions and dosage for children aged one year old and upwards. When the little one's tongue turns white, breath feverish, stomach sour, there is nothing better to "work" the nasty bile, souring food and constipation poison from the child's system. Give Cascarets, then never worry.

The Ram's-horn—able assistant to the Hot Spot, which makes Chalmers a great car

THERE has been so much favorable comment on the Hot Spot device of the Chalmers that often the Ram's-horn of this great car is overlooked.

The Ram's-horn completes the magnificent work of the Hot Spot, the main purpose of which is to fletcherize or "crack up" and heat the gas coming from the carburetor.

Having done its work the Hot Spot passes the 100% conditioned gas on to the Ram's-horn. Now here is where an important job begins.

Gas is a peculiar thing. It "sticks in corners," "collects at any angle," goes back to its raw state unless it is handled quickly and scientifically.

So the Ram's-horn, as one might gather from the name, is without sharp corners, has easy bends and entices the gas smoothly into each cylinder. The inside of it is not a rough casting. It is as smooth as glass.

Note the drawing above. See that the distance from the Hot Spot to each cylinder is the same. That is the great secret of the Ram's-horn.

Most cars have a manifold that feeds gas into one cylinder, whatever is left over goes on into number two, the residue to number three and so on.

Cylinder number six is usually "starved" or gets "raw gas."

Thus you see why the Chalmers engine runs so smoothly, why it gets every last bit of power out of gas, why cold weather does not affect its starting, and why it runs cool on a warm day.

If you have not looked over a present day Chalmers you have an incomplete education on the modern motor car. For Chalmers now is considered one of the few great cars of the world.

Eyes Inflamed?

If your eyes are inflamed, weak tired or overworked; if they ache; if picture shows make them feel dry and strained, get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets from your druggist, dissolve one in a fourth of a glass of water and use as an eye bath from two to four times a day. Bon-Opto allays inflammation, invigorates, tones up the eyes.

Note: Doctors say Bon-Opto strengthens eye sight 50% in a week's time in many instances

New in Beauty, Old in Virtues, This Maxwell Has Stirred Canada

MEN buying cars today are giving this present day Maxwell searching consideration. For where, this moment, can you get a car, like a Maxwell, the chassis of which has had a 300,000 manufacturing run and the beauty of which has been improved to an astonishing degree?

They're weighing the soundness of the 300,000-all-alike-for-five-years logic and they translate that into reliability supreme.

They know in their own business what changes in plan, in program, mean—how serious the losses in good will and profits—the dissatisfied customers.

Many of them have been "burned" by "new models" in days gone by, and have joined the "never again" club.

So this present day Maxwell has a deep appeal to them; and thousands since January 1 have reached for their check books as soon as they laid eyes on this new Maxwell.

Perhaps it is unfair to say "new" because the chassis is five years old in design. When we say "new" we mean its vastly improved appearance.

There are twenty-four things done to the Maxwell to make it better looking. Sharp angles have been removed; lines straightened; certain corners eliminated; bonnet vents increased in number; three more coats of paint added; fenders lowered; seats thickened three inches; a circassian dash installed; gas tank put in the rear, etc.

while unless the men behind it stop talking and do something. In my opinion you want an association that is more than in-"dustrial"—you want a League to be composed of various groups of workers which form an organized unit. The local situation would then have to be studied and a plan made. What we have to do cannot be done quickly. I think You'll find your real aides among those who say least.'

Move Forward

"At last we now have the basis of an organization to begin with. What we shall build upon that basis is our affair. It is up to you and me individually whether Peterboro shall move forward energetically and steadily, or jog along with an occasional spasm and spurt as of old.

"The Greater Peterboro Association rendered a very real service for it has made us search for the reasons why we have failed and how we should now proceed. Our chief need just now is to be sure of our footing, sure of our power, sure of our staying quality.

"The greatest audience we could assemble in Peterboro, addressed by a great orator upon a great cause, might be carried "off its feet" for a "Greater Peterboro" campaign, but it would literally "get nowhere" without an organization or agency that would quietly and purposely carry its wishes into effect. Our men in the fighting lines "Over There" stuck to their job. Beside that the job of City Building looks like a pin spot. But really it is another fight—a fight against tradition, ignorance and selfishness in our city's life. It is a fight for the young men and young women who shall presently succeed us. We all believe in enthusiasm and also in the "get there" spirit; one supplements the other and both are necessary. We were sad when our boys left for overseas, and we are happy to welcome them home.

Show Our Pride

"We show our pride in their victory by our shouts of welcome, our cheers, our enthusiasm. But the memory of those brave spirits whose broken bodies lie where the poppies grow in Flanders, some marked by little crosses and some unnamed; that memory makes our boisterous welcome seem somehow inadequate. Some of those who come back to us crippled and halt and blind might speak to us in the exquisite lines of W. B. France:

"We are the maimed! Death did deny
Its solace. Crippled, blind, we try
To find on earth the peace we know
In Flanders Fields.

Forget us not! As years go by,
On your remembrance we rely;
For love that sees the hearts below,
Our broken bodies. Else we grow
To crave our peace with those who lie
In Flanders Fields."

"As our boys pass us on the street or in parade we note many sad and serious faces; mayhap their thoughts are with their brave comrades "Over There." Well may we ask what our enthusiastic welcome signifies. Shall it outlast the day of homecoming? Shall any of us ever forget? Do we fail in any degree to make our welcome good? Is our enthusiasm the index, the outward expression of what we shall do for these men? Do we back it up by our acts to-day, to-morrow—as long as they and we shall live? These victorious soldiers of ours are men whose aspirations for a better civilization are very real and lasting. Shall we commemorate the war by dedicating our city as a living memorial to the great principles for which the British Empire and her Allies fought, and to our men among the living and the honored dead? Thus we would make our city worthy of the best traditions and aspirations of the British Empire."

COUNCIL OF FOUR MET THIS MORNING.

PARIS, March 31. — Premier Lloyd George and President Wilson conferred privately for an hour this forenoon before the council of four met at the President's residence. It is understood that the purpose of the conference was to expedite the peace proceedings.

"Bill" Schotov, Once Of New York, is Chief of Petrograd Police

Socialist Agitator, Known in Labour Circles Here, Gets Bolshevist Post.

STOCKHOLM, May 29.—The present Chief of Police in Petrograd, it has been learned here, is William Schotov, more frequently called "Bill" Schotov, said to be widely known in New York labour circles, where he was formerly active as a socialist leader.

William Schotov, who has been made Chief of Police in Petrograd, was a machinist here and is said to have been a member of the International Machinists' Union. While he was not prominent in labour circles here, he always took an active interest in matters pertaining to labour.

Schotov was one of the first Russians to return to Russia from New York after the government of the Tsar was overthrown. He aligned himself with Kerensky. But after the Kerensky government fell he turned to the side of Lenine and Trotsky. In Russia he has been doing considerable work along lines of transportation, particularly along the lines of railway construction, it is said.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of his old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Broadsides Fired At Long Distance

Latter Day Saints and Baptist Leaders Clash at St. Thomas.

ST. THOMAS, April 1.—The famous controversy between Elder Daniel McGregor of the Latter Day Saints and Rev. Patrick Dennison of the Baptist church over the merits of the Latter Day Saints and its connections with Mormonism was brought to head here when at the same hour that Mr. Dennison was replying to Mr. McGregor in his church, Mr. McGregor was telling his congregation at the Columbia Theatre that Mr. Dennison gave his "little side show on Mormonism as a cheap stunt for the purpose of securing a Wild Bill notoriety."

Mr. Dennison's defence is that he used for his address a few weeks ago nothing but quotations from standard Mormonism publications. He declared that he has no apology to offer; nothing to take back, and he adds that if Mr. McGregor is not a Mormon, then he is a "butter in."

"My only statement regarding the Latter Day Saints," says that Mr. Dennison, "was made when I procured a copy of the 'Book of Mormon.' I said that 'I know this to be a genuine copy, for it was presented to the St. Thomas library by the St. Thomas branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints.'"

Mr. Dennison suggests that Mr. McGregor challenge ex-Bishop Evans, who knows the inner workings of the church and would be "bigger game." "Beware, as Paul has warned us of those 'Angel revelations which contradict the Gospel'," says Mr. Dennison in conclusion.

Mr. McGregor, on the other hand, declared in his address that he was unmasking Rev. Mr. Dennison as he had never been unmasked before. His sayings, he declared, are unworthy of credence, and he should be made to publicly apologize to the Latter Day Saints' church.

ALMOST BLIND FROM HEADACHES.

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time. Headache seems habitual with many people; indeed, some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief.

In nine cases out of ten, persistent headaches are due to poisoned blood, the blood being rendered impure through some derangement of the stomach, liver or bowels.

The reason Burdock Blood Bitters makes permanent cures of all cases of headache, is because it starts the organs of elimination acting freely, and the poisons and impurities are carried off from the system, purified blood circulates in the brain cells, and instead of pains and aches there is revived mentality and bodily vigor.

Mrs. Geo. Monck, Arden, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled a great deal with sick headaches, and at times would almost go blind, and have to go to bed. I tried different kinds of medicine without any benefit until I was advised to use Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking it, I have not been troubled since."

B. B. B. is a purley vegetable remedy, and has been manufactured for the last forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

YOU CAN'T FIND ANY DANDRUFF, AND HAIR STOPS COMING OUT

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair, and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A small trial bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

THE CO-INSURANCE CLAUSE

What is a Co-Insurance Clause?

It is a promise by an Insured to the Insurance Company carrying his risk, that he will insure his property for an agreed amount, usually four-fifths of the value.

What happens if a loss occurs?

If the promise has been kept nothing happens but if the promise has been broken, then the Insured loses just to the extent that the promise has not been kept.

For instance, if the agreement was to insure for four-fifths of the value, and insurance was taken only for three-fifths, then the Insured loses in the proportion of the difference between the four-fifths promised and the three-fifths done. That is, he kept only three-fourths of his promise, and if his loss was $10,000, instead of collecting that sum from the Insurance Company, he collects just three-fourths of that sum, except in the case mentioned in the second succeeding paragraph.

If he had kept only one-half of his promise, he could collect only one-half, and on the other hand, if he had kept nine-tenths of his promise, he would collect nine-tenths of his loss while if he had kept his promise he could collect in full.

If, however, his loss equals or exceeds the proportion of value for which he agreed to insure, he collects the full amount of any policy he holds, because if the value be $10,000 and loss $8,000 or over, even if he kept only half his promise which was to insure for $8,000, and had only $4,000, insurance then, while he would only collect half his loss, that half equals the whole amount of the insurance carried.

On the other hand, if he has more than kept his promise, that is, has insured for say $8,500 on a property worth $10,000 and which he had promised to insure for $8,000, then he can collect the full amount of his insurance of $8,500 if his loss equals or exceeds $8,500.

How can an Insured comply with the clause?

The Insured should know the value of his property better than anyone else, and if he does not know it, should ascertain it. If the value of his property has increased through advance in market prices or from other causes he should increase his insurance. He will expect to be paid the present values and should insure on that basis.

Some insured write down the value of their buildings or machinery in their books or in their balance sheet. The real value is not affected by such a writing down, and the Insurance requires to be based on the real value, not on the book value.

Now, if a loss occurs, how is the value settled?

The appraisers appointed to settle the loss, decide not only on the amount of damage, but also the value but the appraiser appointed by the Insurance Company cannot force the Insured to admit an incorrect valuation, any more than he can force him to accept $1,000 of loss when he has really lost $2,000. Both of the value of the property and the loss sustained are settled by appraisers mutually chosen, and if the Insured is not satisfied he can always appeal to Courts, which are not usually sympathetic toward a defending Insurance Company.

Now, why do Insurance Companies desire to place a Co-Insurance Clause in their policies?

Because it is only in that way that they can charge a fair rate, which does not discriminate between one insured and another, and against themselves.

The rate is a measure of contribution towards a fund to pay losses, just as a rate of taxation in a City is levied on all property to pay the City's expenses.

If, however, instead of a City assessing all property equally, it were left to one man to put his assessment at two-tenths of the value and so on, only the remaining few assessing themselves for the usual amount of three-fourths of the value, it will be at once seen not only that there would be gross discrimination, but that as the total assessment of the City would only be about one-half the sum it would have been had all been assessed to the proper amount, therefore the tax rate instead of being, say twenty mills, would have to be forty mills to raise the necessary revenue.

The same holds true of Insurance. In Great Britain practically every policy has a Co-Insurance clause and to be absolutely fair, every policy should contain such a clause. The Insurance Companies, however, do not say an Insured must, but that if he is willing to promise that he will carry a proper amount of insurance, they will allow a substantial reduction in the rate.

Most prudent men, and practically all successful men, insure for the amount desired by the Insurance Companies, and generally for more.

In short, the Co-Insurance is merely a promise, for the making of which, the Insured receives a payment by reduction in rate, that he will do the fair and proper thing, with the promise to agree to lose something if the promise be not kept

BOLSHEVISM HAS KILLED PETROGRAD

Grim Starved Faces Striking Illustration of Fanaticism's End.

TERRIBLE SIGHTS

HELSINGFORS, April 3. — Alas, Petrograd is no more. It is slowly dying. On Friday, Feb. 14, as I went across the city from station to station on a cart with my things I was horrified to see the emaciated faces of the inhabitants. They could scarcely drag their legs along, or they stood for hours waiting to get on a tram. To ride on a tram, it is true, costs a rouble (normally 50 cents) a journey now. Still this is not 50 roubles, the price of a cab, and so the unhappy inhabitant patiently waits for the order to scramble on board somehow.

But woe to those whose work finishes late. The trams run only until 6 o'clock in the evening and do not run at all on Sundays. One day as I was walking along the Zagorodni Prospect, I saw a young lady standing with her eyes closed, body pressed against a wall and holding fast to a waterpipe. I ran to her and discovered she had been at work since 9 o'clock in the morning in another part of the town and had had nothing to eat. She had missed the last tram and was so weak she could walk no further, but she still had a long distance to go. How many such tragedies are happening every day everywhere in the streets and houses.

Happening to walk into the Nevsky Prospect I was horrified at the sight of an old woman. She proved to be the widow of a Russian general who was mechanically holding out her hands repeating: "Give me a piece of bread." You may think I ought at once to have jumped up and given her something to eat, but also that was out of the question.

Finish Other Man's Dinner.

Nothing can be brought anywhere especially by me, a visitor. Once a porter in a public kitchen took pity on me and lent me his food card, so I got into the dining room. For 3 1-2 roubles I was given a muddy broth with lentils for a soup and as a second dish I was given salted herring with beet root. Opposite me sat an emaciated man with a gaunt face who literally watched every morsel I ate. When I pushed away my soup unfinished he asked me in perfect French to allow him to finish it. You will confess from this, of course, that I pushed across to him the herring with beet-root. Also, it appears, a large number of people sit at the public kitchen in the hope of finishing other peoples' leavings.

How does the poor Intelligencia live these days? What does it do? The answer is simple. It sells out. When the late Grand Duke, Paul Alexandrovitch, was examined he was asked on what means he was living. He replied, "On proceeds from the selling of valuables." When he was given a form to fill he wrote down in the space for his occupation: "Vendor of antiquities."

You now find the most select society at the markets. They are selling clothes, linen and all sorts of things. Then they rush off to buy something to eat. Often my children said to me: "Mamma what shall we have to eat to-morrow?" "Well, dears, I'll sell this tablecloth in the market and buy you something."

Such dialogues are heard everywhere. All my furniture, carpets and my mirrors, all have been bought by peasants who are fitting up their huts sumptuously. I went to a village two miles away for a bottle of milk. It costs 10 roubles, and I found in the cow shed where I bought it my beloved mahogany dressing table, for which the new owners had not been able to find room in their hut.

GRAIN MARKET

All grain markets exceedingly strong and active. Corn advanced 5c. to 6c. on the options in Chicago market yesterday, following Tuesday's holiday. Cash markets were three to four cents higher. Oats and barley followed corn, each making advances of 2c. to 3c. Rye is quoted one cent. higher. The bull factors at the moment seem to be the general advance in hog prices, and the big reductions in grain stocks at terminal points. In the fodder feeds, hay advances another $1 per ton.

A LOVER OF CHILDREN

SOME ANECDOTES CONCERNING SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

Although the Liberal Chieftain Had No Family of His Own He Was Always Devoted to the Little Ones, and Many Characteristic Tales Are Told of How He Showed His Interest In Them.

THE story of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's life has been told many times in recent weeks, but one aspect of it has not received as much emphasis as should be accorded to it. Although the Old Chieftain had no children of his own, he was a great lover of little folks. Those who knew him best said that Sir Wilfrid was in a very real sense passionately fond of children. He relaxed to them, he loved them, and they loved him. Many are the stories told of his interest in them. Children seemed to get closer to "the Chief" than anyone else. There were times, in the stress of big events, when matters of policy were to be determined, when situations had to be gauged and met, when Sir Wilfrid seemed to shut himself behind an expressionless face to do his thinking. His friends and lieutenants sought counsel from him then without success. No premature intimations were forthcoming. He became to all associated with him a seeker—not a giver—of information. One left his presence, having gone for guidance, with the conviction that he had laid bare his whole mind and thought at the delicate prompting of the Chief's skilful interrogations, but realizing that the latter had communicated nothing.

For the little folk he always had an open door and an instant relaxation.

At the time of the long naval debate and Parliamentary embroglio, when the threat of closure was in the air and all the strategy of statecraft was being brought into play by both parties, a Liberal caucus waited anxiously one winter morning for the advent of the leader. Newspapermen who proceeded to the main entrance eagerly watching for his coming witnessed the septuagenarian spending the valuable moments prodding in the snow with his walking-stick and seeking to locate a "lost mit" of an all-alone baby girl, who was crying pathetically at her loss and the cold. It was only when the missing mitten was found and restored and the child had been comforted that Sir Wilfrid turned his attention to the waiting caucus and the problems of the moment.

Those who accompanied the then Prime Minister on his memorable tour of the west in the summer of 1910 will never forget an incident while he was speaking at Edmonton. So great was the crowd that had assembled in Alberta's capital that hot August afternoon to hear his message that all attempts to hold an indoor meeting were abandoned. Sir Wilfrid spoke from a balcony at the central corner of the main thoroughfare, and windows, balconies and streets were peopled with spectators. Suddenly in the midst of his speech he paused, and gazing over the seething mass of humanity, pointed to one of the upper windows in a block diagonally opposite to the balcony from which he spoke. A midget was seated alone on the ledge, swinging her feet over the street far below. Anxiously he inquired: "Is that little one safe?" Amid all the display and acclaim Sir Wilfrid's eye was on the child in danger.

One of the most charming revelations of Sir Wilfrid's thought for children and his understanding of them occurred on the same tour during a public reception at a temporary stand built upon a Manitoba prairie. An eight-year-old maid of the harvest field, with unadorned straw hat and bare feet, stood, like the publican of old, afar off. She looked on with wide, wondering eyes while a more fortunate little lady, in the fluffy, beribboned, spotless daintiness so dear to all daughters of Eve, be they big or little, gave the great man a beautiful bouquet of roses. She had seen him stoop and kiss her. Then she separated herself from the cheering crowd. She strayed to a spot on the prairie where she knew they grew. She gathered them herself, a little ill-assorted bunch of wild weed blossoms. Then she edged her way back through the throng. She had almost reached him as he was moving on, when a badged committeeman stopped her, and taking her by the sleeve of her patched print dress thrust her back. Tears sprang to her eyes.

For an instant the procession wavered. There was a break in the line. Sir Wilfrid turned. Unwittingly the little one found herself almost confronting him. Feverishly now she sought to squirm back into the oblivion of the crowd. But he had seen her. He stepped toward her, and the committeeman released his hold.

"Were you good enough to mean those flowers for me, little girl?" he asked, with a smile. She thrust them toward him, now half-frightened.

He bowed and took them. He kissed her. Then he drew a sprig from the bunch and fastened it upon the lapel of his coat. And when the great man mounted his car and waved his hat to the cheering hundreds there was one happy little girl who feasted her eyes upon a faded wild weed blossom still drooping on his breast.

Sir Wilfrid never lost a chance to "make up" to the little folk. He travelled on the first passenger train over the National Transcontinental from Fort William to Winnipeg when construction gangs were still at work and the primitive condition of the country caused the workmen to be housed in log and frame shanties along the line, and took a remarkable interest in the several children who had accompanied their pioneer parents to the wild and picturesque outposts of coming civilization. He was the earliest riser on the train, and one morning, when the call for breakfast found him missing, there was some anxiety as to whether he had lost his way in an early morning walk through the bush. "No need for worry," volunteered Mr. Fred F. Pardee, the Chief Liberal Whip, who knew his Chief well; "you'll likely find him outside somewhere with the youngsters," and Mr. Pardee was right. Sir Wilfrid was "playing catch" with a sturdy four-year-old behind a nearby shanty.

One day as the train lay in a switch near Humboldt a boy mounted the steps with a new birthday present, and explained that he wanted to take his first picture of "Mister Laurier." A few moments later the tall figure was standing patiently on the track till the juvenile photographer "got it right." The little fellow secured first-hand what scores of correspondents and local photographers had for weeks been struggling with crowds and erecting pedestals to obtain.

The devotion of the habitant of rural Quebec to Sir Wilfrid Laurier was well illustrated by an incident during the campaign of 1911. The Liberal leader was leaving Bonaventure station, in Montreal, very early one morning to proceed, via Coteau, to accept the nomination for Soulanges. At the station he passed a little girl, the daughter of a basket-laden woman, on her way to market. He stopped to pat the child's head and exchange a greeting.

"Qui est l'homme?" (Who is the man?) asked the astonished mother of a bystander.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier," replied one of the group of newspapermen nearby.

The woman's face was a picture. "En verite?" (Is that true?) she persisted, turning from one to another for confirmation.

When she was convinced she ran after the departing figure and stroked the sleeve of his coat as if it were something holy. Sir Wilfrid turned and shook her hand, ere the poor woman fled in confusion.

During one campaign, when the Ultramontanes were bitterly attacking the Liberal leader, an excited supporter telegraphed from a remote constituency in Quebec: "Reports in circulation that you have never had any of your children baptized by church. Very damaging to party. Telegraph me if untrue."

Sir Wilfrid's reply was characteristic: "Report unfortunately quite true. I never had a child."

"Oh, You Do Look So Strong and Well"

"AND why shouldn't I ?"

"You always wrote about how well you were, but we never thought you would be so hearty-looking as you are after all the hardships of camp and trench life."

"Oh, we had our share of hardships, all right, but except on rare occasions we had plenty of good, wholesome food and lots of fresh air and exercise. That is what makes a person strong and well. But I don't think I have it much over you. What have you been doing to look so hearty ?"

"Didn't I tell you I was using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food ?"

"You don't mean to say that has made such a difference. You were so thin and pale when I went away."

"Yes, it certainly has, and after you went away I had a regular break-down, and was in a bad state for some months. I had nervous headaches, could not sleep, and grew down-hearted and discouraged. Mother got after me to try the Nerve Food, and I am so glad I did, for I did want to be well to welcome you home."

"It is a joy to me to find you so well. And now that we have such a good start surely we can keep well and enjoy life. My experience overseas has caused me to place a greater value on life and health than I ever did before, and your experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food convinces me that you women folks need not be pale and weak and nervous if you will but use it when you feel tired out and run down."

MILLBURNS' LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Act as a stimulant to the sluggish liver, clean the furred tongue, sweeten the foul, obnoxious breath, and clear away all the poisonous accumulations from the system by causing the bowels to move regularly and naturally every day, thus preventing as well as curing constipation, sick headaches, bilious headaches, water brash, heartburn, and all diseases arising from a lazy, slow or torpid liver.

They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take, and there is nothing of the griping, weakening and sickening effects of the old-fashioned purgatives.

Mrs. John Kadey, Chipman, N.B., writes: "I have been using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for some time and can recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried other remedies, but they only relieved me for a short time. I always recommend Laxa-Liver Pills to all sufferers, as I think they are a valuable remedy."

When you go to your dealer and ask for Laxa-Liver Pills, see that you get the genuine "Milburn's." Price 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

New Words For China.

One of the most curious features of the awakening of China is the necessity which has arisen for the addition of new words to the language. This does not mean merely names for such western importations as motorcars, aeroplanes, cinematographs etc., but words which have had to be invented to express ideas hitherto unknown to the Chinese mind. For instance, China had no indigenous word for "ideal." Again, "reform" had to be built up as an entirely new word, as also "to take the initiative," "protection of life" and "educate" as different from "instruct"—instances which throw a vivid light on certain aspects of the Chinese temperament.

A Prize Worth Winning.

Russia is inviting the attention of the men of letters of all countries to the fact that the most valuable literary prize ever offered is now open to competition. The subject appointed is a study of the life and work of Czar Alexander I., and the prize fund was deposited in the Bank of St. Petersburg by Alexander's minister, Arakcheef, in 1838 with directions that it should accumulate at compound interest until the year 1925. The first prize it is computed, will then amount to about £250,000, while a further sum of nearly £100,000 will be distributed in consolation prizes.—London Mail.

A CHILD GETS CROSS, SICK AND FEVERISH WHEN CONSTIPATED

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated clean little liver and bowels.

If your little one's tongue is coated, it is a sure sign the stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When your child is cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, if breath is bad, stomach sour, system full of cold, throat sore, or if feverish, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

GRIP RAVAGES ENGLAND.

Shortage of Doctors and Nurses Allows Epidemic to Grow

LONDON.— The return epidemic of influenze finds England so short of doctors and nurses that, according to reports from various parts of the country, there are not enough even to give casual attention to patients. The strain on the medical men who are trying to cope with the emergency is so severe that there is danger of many of them breaking down. This is said to be a real possibility in the north of England, where the epidemic is raging with unusual violence.

According to a statement in the House of Commons by Winston Churchill, Secretary for War, only 1,500 of the 11,000 doctors in the army last November have been demobilized so far, and of 23,000 nurses only 3,000 have been released.

Doctors emphasize the need for nurses in fighting influenza. They point out that in a large number of cases nurses are more required than physicians, and if more nurses were available the doctors would have the time they now lack to devote to the serious cases.

From early morning until far into the night the overworked physician is kept busy. A leaf from a day-book supplied by a general practitioner shows that in one day he treated 96 private patients and 100 public patients. His labors began at 7 A. M. labors began at 7 A.M. and extended well into the night.

The signing of Hooper and McInnis reduces the Red Sox important hold-outs to "Babe" Ruth, who continues to declare he will not play unless he gets the $15,000 document he has been demanding all winter.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Effective Weapon

Story of a Rescue From Italian Bandits

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Young Dr. Charles Dorrance, after being graduated from a medical college, became physician in charge of a hospital. Here he caught an infectious disease that left him much reduced. A year passed, and, since he had not improved, he concluded to take a sea voyage. So he sailed for Naples. Whether it was the effect of the climate of Italy or the beautiful surroundings of Naples, the doctor began to improve as soon as he reached that city.

Dorrance was charmed by the bay of Naples. Its beauty has been long renowned, and justly. The longer one lives on its shores the more delightful it becomes to him. A central figure is Vesuvius, whose cone is seldom, if ever, without a light smoke. From the sea the ground rises to a height that may be called hilly or mountainous. Rising out of the sea some ten or fifteen miles from shore are the volcanic islands of Ischia and Capri, usually softened by a light mist, while the crowning beauty is the ever changing color of the water through every hue from a bright silver to the darkest blue.

Quite likely it was these attractions appealing to an artistic element in the young doctor's makeup that led him to settle at Sorrento and practice medicine there. A constant flow of tourists passes through the town, and many of these are Americans. A few make it their homes. Among both tourists and residents Dr. Dorrance found patients.

There is one detraction from the pleasure of a sojourn in southern Italy. One cannot feel safe in wandering unprotected about the country. There is a town in the Alban hills, a dozen miles from Rome, of some 500 persons, all of whom are criminals. When the mounted police see strangers in this vicinity they keep a protecting watch over them.

One morning Miss Alice Townsend, an American girl staying at one of the hotels at Sorrento, situated on the high cliff overlooking the bay of Naples, asked the proprietor if it was safe for her to walk on a certain road leading out of the town. His reply was, "That road is perfectly safe." This indicated that the other roads were not safe. Miss Townsend had a fancy for going about alone and chafed at not being able to do so. She soon got tired of walking on the road mentioned and longed for a new route.

One afternoon she struck out, resolving to go to a height from which she might look down on the bay. At any rate, that is what she told a companion she intended to do, who declined to accompany her beyond the outskirts of the town. When night came Miss Townsend had not returned. Her father gathered a posse to go out to look for her, but returned in the morning without her or any news of her.

It was apparent that the girl had been kidnaped for ransom. At least this was the hope, for no one could say that she had not been murdered. The police advised Mr. Townsend to wait [illegible] demanding money for his daughter's release, when they hoped to be able to make an attempt to capture the kidnapers. The unhappy father could do nothing but wait, but he resolved that if the demand was made he would pay the amount without endangering his daughter's life.

Several days passed, and no word was heard from the missing girl. The police were urged to take action in the matter; but, whether they were inefficient or knew the enemy they had to deal with, they made no move.

One afternoon a boy called at Dr. Dorrance's office and handed him a bit of paper on which was scrawled, in a hand denoting an illiterate writer, a request to call and see a sick man living on the heights directly back of the town. The doctor, who made it a point to answer all calls at once, took up a satchel in which he carried a stock of drugs and instruments and, getting into a calash standing at the door, took in the boy and started on his quest.

He had ascended part way to the summit when he was met by a man armed with a carbine and told to halt. The boy got out of the vehicle and the man got in. Then he said:

"Doctor, I know all about you, and you may be sure that you are in no danger so long as you do what is required of you in attending a sick person. Drive on."

Dorrance, in going about the country, relied entirely on his profession for protection. Realising that to arm himself for the purpose of defense would avail nothing and believing that criminals would not molest one they might have occasion to call upon to heal them or save their lives, he made his visits without any protection whatever.

The sun went down, night came and the two men had not reached their destination. It was long past dark when the doctor's guide directed him to turn off the road and, shortly after doing so, stop at what had once been a villa, but what was now half ruin and half habitable. Before alighting his companion said to him:

"The young lady who was captured a few days ago is here. She has become so frightened that we can do nothing with her and are afraid she may die on our hands, in which case we would not get a ransom for her. You are to give her some medicine to quiet her; then you must carry back with you a demand for 50,000 lire ($10,000), on receipt of which she will be suffered to return. You have also to say that on any sign of an attempt on the part of the police to rescue her or capture us she will at once be killed."

As soon as these injunctions had been delivered the doctor was conducted into the house. He was glad to get news of Miss Townsend, whose disappearance had naturally greatly moved all persons—residents and strangers—in Sorrento. Resolving to keep his eyes open for some loophole by which to relieve her from her position without endangering her safety and if possible lead to the capture of her captors, he entered the house and was led to a room, where he found the young lady. She had worn herself out with hysterics, lying on a bed in a state bordering on collapse. Another man was in attendance.

Dorrance and his patient had not met before. When he entered the room her eyes were closed, and every few moments she gave way to a nervous twitching. He opened his satchel and, taking out a little syringe, gave her a hypodermic injection in the arm, intended to quiet her. This done, he awaited the result of his treatment. Meanwhile his brain was at work in another direction. Finally he said to the men:

"It may be necessary to save her life to send to Sorrento for medicine. Have you any one to send?"

"Tony will go," said the man who had been the doctor's conductor.

"Another person should go to the captive's father and get the ransom, for her life depends on her being freed at once."

"Cannot one person do both errands?"

"That is for you to say."

"Well, Luigi can attend to that."

"Will there be no other person than you left to assist me?"

"No. What more assistance do you want than I can give you?"

"No matter. You will do."

These questions were intended to discover how many persons were present, and it was evident that the number was three. Dorrance said nothing more, but sat looking at his patient, who was gradually getting more calm. He would have liked to attack these men and rescue the girl, but what could he do with three armed men, while he had no weapon at all? Presently an expedient occurred to him, but he gave no sign of it.

The patient opened her eyes and saw a stranger looking down upon her. She said nothing, but the doctor thought she was sufficiently calmed to notice that he was of a different class from her captors. He would have been glad to say something to her by way of encouragement, also something to assist him in carrying out an embryo plan, but there were two men in the room watching him, and he dared not. An expedient occurred to him.

"Do you feel faint?" he asked in Italian.

Miss Townsend did not understand Italian and did not reply. The doctor told the men that he must speak to his patient in English. They consulted and finally permitted him to do so.

"I am going to try to rescue you," said the doctor. "Be on your guard and ready to take advantage of what I may do."

Hope sprang into the girl's eyes, and, fearing to betray herself, she closed them and groaned. The doctor turned to his satchel and began to hunt for some drug, finally lighting on a small bottle. Though he had refrained from carrying arms, he had always kept in his satchel something that might be used in an emergency in lieu of arms. The bottle he took out of the satchel was marked "Aqua Fortis." Putting the mouth of his syringe into it, he drew up the piston, sucking up a couple of ounces of the liquid. Then, laying it down beside him, he asked for pencil and paper and wrote a request to send whatever ransom was demanded and on no account to attempt a rescue or a capture of the bandits. This paper he gave to her conductor, who read it and handed it to Tony, telling him to give it to Luigi with instructions to set out with it at once for Sorrento.

The doctor listened to hear the messenger depart, but made no move for half an hour after he had gone. He was gathering his forces for the remaining men. Presently he said:

"I must give her another injection."

Taking up his syringe, he asked one of the men to hold it for a moment, and, extending it just as the bandit was about to take it, Dorrance gave him half the contents in his eyes, and before the other had realized what had been done he received the balance in the same place.

Nothing beyond the yells of the two villains was needed to tell the captive what had been done. With marvelous recuperative strength she sprang from the bed, and both she and the doctor made a dash for the door, leaving the two men blinded, howling, groping. The doctor's calash stood at the door, and, entering it, the couple lashed the horse to the road, then down the declivity.

When soon after midnight the couple drove up to the hotel where the Townsends were stopping and her parents were informed that their daughter had arrived there followed a happy meeting, the young doctor coming in for encomiums innumerable.

What recompense Dr. Dorrance received for the rescue has not yet been decided, but rumor has it that it will be Miss Townsend.

Easy to Out-talk Men.

A woman can talk longer than a man because she uses less force in speaking than the man does. A professor has proved by delicate measurements that the baritone singer uses far more energy than the tenor, and that the bass singer uses more force than either.

The difference between the force used by the contralto and the soprano singer is marked, and the contralto who sings in deep tones uses at least ten times the force of the thrilling soprano.

The explanation is so simple that it is surprising that the investigation was not made before. It has long been known that the tenor or soprano brings the vocal cords close together and keeps the edges only vibrating by the emission of air. The bass or contralto leaves the space between the cords wider open and has to vibrate much more of the membranes, so that a considerably larger amount of air is required and much more force is expended.

Persons with high, squeaky voices often seem to be loquacious and the reason is now plain—they can talk with far less effort than those who take a deeper tone and have to use more air to utter their words. Thus, a woman can outtalk a man because she has the advantage of using from one-seventh to one-sixteenth less lung power.

An Anecdote of Pitt.

A certain Mrs. Beaumont of Bretton, England, who lived in the time of Pitt and whom the possession of lead mines made wealthy and purse proud, one day thought to impress Pitt, who was staying at Bretton, with her riches. She had a most splendid service of plate at dinner, and, waving her hand, she said, "There, Mr. Pitt; that's all from the mines."

"Indeed," answered Pitt, "if you had not told me, Mrs. Beaumont, I should have thought it was silver."

HAS ROMANTIC CAREER

MORRISON OF CHINA PAYS VISIT TO CANADA.

Brilliant Man Was Born In Australia and After Many Adventures He Is Now an Adviser of the Government of China — He Tells Some Facts About Conditions In the Oriental Republic.

"MORRISON of China," one of the advisers to the Chinese Government since the establishment of the republic, eight years ago, is one of the most romantic figures who have visited Canada for some time. His full name is George Ernest Morrison, and he used to be Chinese correspondent of the London Times.

Long before that, however, his adventures began. He was born in Australia, and as a young man, walked three thousand miles across that continent. At a later date, he walked almost a similar distance across China. He has commanded an exploring expedition to New Guinea, where two native spears pierced his body. He took a medical degree at Edinburgh, where, among other incidents, these spear-heads were removed. He took a post-graduate course in Paris under Charcot; acted as court physician to the Sheriff of Wazan in Morocco; served as assistant purser on a ship in the West Indian fruit trade, and sailed as a seaman before the mast in the South Seas to study the Kanaka question. He represented the London Times at the Portsmouth Peace Conference between Russia and Japan in 1905.

He recently passed through Canada on his way to the Peace Conference at Versailles, where he will act as adviser or counsel to the Chinese representatives, who crossed this continent on their way to Europe a few weeks ago. The delegation is headed by Lu Tseng-Tsiang.

One of the questions which is sure to be discussed at the conference is the status of Kiao-Chau, which, taken from Germany in 1914, has been held by the Japanese. It was definitely agreed at the time that Kiao-Chau was eventually to be restored to China, but no time limit was fixed. Dr. Morrison anticipates no trouble on this point. He feels that Japan will carry out her pledge.

Dr. Morrison was asked while in the Dominion about the "advice" or "complaints" which the Allied Governments presented to China last autumn, enumerating details in which China was alleged not to be co-operating fully with the Allies. Among the principal grounds of complaint was the failure to intern Germans. China's reply to this, as well as to most of the other points, was that, if she were remiss, it was not a voluntary failure, but one caused by the internal unsettlement in the country. Real efforts to carry out arrangements were being made.

"What about the complaint that China refused 'to retire the Governor-General of Hsino for supporting the enemy and the Bolsheviki in spite of the protests of the Allies?'" was also asked.

Dr. Morrison said that certain Chinese troops, in the north, had co-operated in some way with the Bolsheviki, but they had done so in ignorance of the situation. When the facts became known, the support ceased.

Dr. Morrison, however, is not pessimistic about the future. He thinks that the Japanese Government now is genuinely anxious to recover and maintain the friendship of the Chinese people, and that some readjustment will be effected.

Dr. Morrison described the President of China, Hsu-Shih-Chang, as quite an elderly man who has had much political experience. Not only had he held numerous administrative posts, but he had been viceroy of Manchuria.

Dr. Morrison was in Pekin in July, 1917, when the two weeks' restoration of the Manchu emperor occurred. It was brought about, according to Dr. Morrison, without the Emperor's knowledge, and was the idea of a single general, Chang Hsin. Pekin, for a few days, was a lively place. A "characteristic" Chinese battle took place, in which a great deal of street fighting took place and a vast quantity of ammunition was fired. The results, however, were not sanguinary. Only a few score of people were shot, and most of these were civilians who met their death accidentally. The reason for the small number of casualties is that although there was a prodigious amount of firing, the soldiers did not understand the trajectory of a bullet, and their aim was hopelessly wild. By the middle of July the whole affair was over, and the republic was running again.

Political conditions in China, however, are by no means normal. At the present moment, there are two rival Parliaments, one, officially recognised, at Pekin, in the North, and the other at Canton in the South. Both Parliaments are bi-cameral. Although the Southern organization is not recognized, delegates from it are being attached to the official Chinese Peace Mission, so that all shades of opinion may be represented.

Asked as to the franchise in the Chinese Republic, Dr. Morrison said it was generally regarded as being fairly liberal, considering the political development of the country. Manual laborers, however, didn't get a vote. Dr. Morrison thought this disability was on account of their illiteracy, rather than their occupation.

An Anecdote of Whittier.

A friend in conversation with Mr. Whittier, the poet, remarked that he was about to contract to furnish a lot of oak timber for the government gunboats and asked him if he thought it was in consistence with the peace doctrines of the Quaker denomination. Without saying anything calculated to decide the question the two arrived at their parting place, when Mr. Whittier, shaking his friend's hand, said, "Moses, if thee does furnish any of that oak timber thee spoke of, be sure that it is all sound."

Deserving of Pity.

"There goes Roxham. Every time I think of that man's financial embarrassment it makes me yearn to help him."

"Financial embarrassment?"

"Yes. He's got so much money he doesn't know what to do with it."

A Temporary Opinion.

The Fiancee—The idea of his thinking that he is unworthy of me! The Confidante—Yes, but you needn't argue the matter with him. He'll discover his error in time.

Had Hacking Cough

Couldn't Sleep Nights

Hacking coughs are very wearing on the system. The constant coughing disturbs the rest, and keeps the lungs and bronchial tubes in an irritated and inflamed conditions.

Don't neglect the hacking cough. You can get rid of it with a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup; the most prompt, pleasant tated and inflamed condition.

Miss Catherine M. McLean, Craik, Sask., writes:—"Last winter I caught a heavy cold and was laid up for some time. I had such a hacking cough I couldn't sleep at night. I didn't think I would get over it. One day a friend dropped in to see me and was surprised to see how bad my cough was. She advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. The next day I sent for a bottle, and I soon got relief, and by the time I had taken two bottles, my cough was all gone, and now I am able to do my work again. I don't think there is anything to equal it."

There are plenty of "pine" preparations on the market trying to live on the reputation of "Dr. Wood's." The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c a bottle. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Cathedral of Rheims.

The Cathedral of Rheims was a superb Gothic cathedral at Rheims, France, erected between 1212 and 1430, and famous as the place of coronation of all the kings of France (except Henry IV), from 1179 to 1774. In 496, Clovis, the first of the Merovigian line, was baptized, with 3,000 of his men, at Rheims, and owing to this fact the city became in subsequent years the place for the coronation of all the kings of France. The cathedral is now a mass of ruins from the shells of the Germans during the war.

Russian Government Not Asking For Recognition

Premier Lenine Wants to Have the Blockade Lifted—Typhus Spreading.

FOOD CONDITIONS

By Fred S. Ferguson.
(Copyright 1919, by the United Press.)

PARIS, April 3.—The Russian Soviet government is not asking for recognition by the Associated Powers, it was learned from authoritative sources to-day. The proposition recently submitted to the Peace Conference by Premier Lenine, summed up, is substantially:

"Make peace with us, enabling us to end the numerous little wars that are being waged on Russian territory.

"Lift the blockade so as to permit us to get food and materials.

"Then we will "make good" and you can recognize us if you care to."

The Russians, it is understod, are also willing to make a separate peace with the Associated Powers, that is, without including the new Hungarian Soviet government in the pact. By making peace with the Russians is naturally meant withdrawal of all Allied forces from Russia and cessation of participation in such campaigns as that in the Odessa district.

Cease Fighting.

Lenine agrees to cease fighting, it is declared, and stop propaganda work in other countries, applying his governmental machinery to purely national affairs, in which he expects to show it is possible for a system to succeed in which a rich man cannot get anything merely because he is rich.

The Russians' attitude is that such military operations as they are now carrying on are in self-defence.

It is known the Peace Conference is giving extensive consideration to the latest reports from Russia, and is becoming more impressed with the accumulating evidence that violence and bloodshed are not stopping Bolshevism.

In view of reports of serious food conditions, as well as the spread of typhus in Russia, coupled with danger of a Russo-German alliance, the Peace Conference is said to be considering whether the Associated Powers can afford to ignore the present opportunity to affect an agreement with the Lenine government.

DELEGATIONS WILL GO TO BERLIN

Special to Examiner.)

BASLE, April 3. — Two delegations representing strikers in the Rupr industrial region were at Weimar yesterday to discuss the situation with Herr Bauer, the German Minister of Labor. After the conference the delegations went to Berlin to see other members of the German cabinet.

Despatches received here place the number of strikers in the Dortmound district at fifty-six thousand.

Three Lives Were Lost

Early Morning Fire Destroys Block in Hull.

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, April 3.—Three lives were lost and property damage estimated at between thirty-five thousand and forty thousand dollars, was caused by an early morning fire at Hull which gutted what is known as the Dorion block on the corner of Main and Leduc streets, consisting of a social club and three stores in the heart of the business section of the city.

The dead are:

Misses Marie Dorion, aged 40, Gracia, aged 42, and Blanche, aged 10.

The two former are the daughters and the latter the granddaughter of Mrs. L. N. Dorion, part owner of the burned block. The girls lived alone in the top flat of the building, and it is surmised were overcome by the [illegible] As the bodies were recovered were not touched by the flames. Although the firemen knew the girls were in the building and made valiant attempts to rescue them, they were unable to enter the apartment where they were known to be owing to the intensity of the fire.

Revolt Against the Government

LONDON, April 3.—Adia Ababa Abyinia, grandson of King Johannes II, who died in 1889, has revolted and declared himself king under name of Theodore. The government has sent out a punitive expedition to put down the rebellion.

Governor Tejou of Dediazmach also has revolted against the government. The government announces that it will send a mission to Paris to apply for the admission of Abysinia to the League of Nations.

There has been more or less disorder in Abysinia since the death of the famous Emperor Menelik in 1913. He was succeeded by Lidj Jeasu, who was overthrown in 1916 by Zauditu, a daughter of Menelik, who claimed herself Empress. Lidj Jeasu, who was a nephew of Zauditu, started a revolt in August, 1917, but his effort was put down.

German Troops On the Move

Spartacan Revolt Causing Disorder in Frankfort.

(Canadian Press.)

COBLENZ, April 3.—German troops opposite the Coblenz bridgehead, began moving early Thursday toward Frankfort, where a Spartacan revolt has been causing disorder.

Before entering Frankfort, which is in the neutral zone beyond the French bridgehead based on Mayence, the German military authorities had to obtain permission from the French Tenth Army.

According to information reaching American Headquarters here the trouble in Frankfort became serious Tuesday. The workmen formed groups in the streets. The mob stormed a large warehouse and the members helped themselves to the food stored there. Hundreds filled baskets and sacks with food of various kinds.

VIEWS OF ORGANIZED LABOUR CONCERNING PEACE SETTLEMENT

(United Press.)

LONDON, April 3.—British organized labour to-day officially registered its views concerning the peace settlement and the League of Nations.

Nearly 1,000 delegates, representing between eight and nine million workers throughout the country, met in Central Hall with the invitation of the Labour party and the Trades Union Congress for the purpose of articulating their peace policy. They were called upon to ratify a programme drawn up by a joint committee of the two organizations, closely paralleling that formulated at the International Labour and Socialist Congress in Berne. The delegates were expected to pass resolutions declaring it is highly important the Peace Conference quickly show substantial progress. They were also expected to adopt regulations for amendments to the League covenant, including:

Clauses Revised.

Revision of Article XIX so that the principle of self-determination shall be extended to the colonies of all nations (which would affect Ireland, Egypt and India.)

Revision of Article VII so as to prohibit conscription and provide for general disarmament.

Revision of Articles I and II so as to provide for election of the body of delegates by Parliaments according to the country's population instead of the members being appointed by the governments.

The delegates were expected to charge the Peace Conference with reverting to the old balance of power basis in handling the Polish and Dalmatian situations. It was also believed they would make suggestions concerning settlement of the Rhine questions.

Changes in the Assessment

Will Apply to Peterboro—The Proposed Scale.

Legislation will be introduced in the Ontario Legislature this session giving municipalities the right to partially exempt the houses of people of moderate means, to totally exempt the houses of returned soldiers, and to increase by $200 the earnings of heads of families in towns and cities on which taxation is levied. The exemption to be granted on homes of people of moderate means and returned soldiers is really a local option measure; the Legislature will pass the law giving the municipalities the right to grant such exemption if they so desire, while the increase on earnings to heads of families to be taxed will be an Ontario measure. This new legislation is the outcome of the recommendations adopted by the Assessment committee of the Legislature.

Basis of Graded Scale.

The graded exemptions are on the following basis:

Houses assessed at not more than $2,000 to be taxed on 50 per cent. of their values.

Houses assessed at not more than $2,500 to be taxed on 60 per cent. of their value.

Houses assessed at not more than $3,000 to be taxed on a 70 er cent. basis.

Houses assessed at not more than $3,500 to be taxed on an 80 per cent. basis.

Houses assessed at not more than $4,000 to be taxed on a 90 per cent. basis.

All houses exceeding $4,000 in value to pay taxes upon their full valuation.

Sir William stated that it had been suggested to include this legislation in the Housing Bill and that a flat exemption be granted on all small houses; but this had been deemed unwise because in many of the urban centres taxation was on a very low basis, and to entirely remove it would have the effect of removing a large number of houses from assessment and taxation altogether.

The idea was to give this right of graded taxation to the municipalities to be exercised by them after a by-law had been approved by the ratepayers. This proposal would be extended to rural municipalities, and the right of total exemption to returned soldiers would be only for a limited time.

H. C. O. L. Considered.

Sir William explained that the basis of exemption on personal earnings was that a man should not be taxed on what it costs him to live, that he should be allowed a small margin before the tax became effective at all. The cost of living had increased so tremendously that the Government deemed this action was only a fair thing to do and the proposal was to increase the amount of personal earnings of heads of families on which taxation was levied from $1,400 to $1,700 in the cities and from $1,200 to $1,400 in other places. It would be necessary, however, to go slowly on this matter because the revenue to be derived by municipalities had to come from somewhere. This $400 exemption clause was adopted unanimously by the committee. It is also provided that the exemption on income from investments be increased from $400 to $800. The case of the London and Port Stanley Railway came before the committee and it was decided that the principle should not be departed from that railways should be assessed as any other business. It was also pointed out that this railway operated refreshment booths at Port Stanley. A motion introduced by Mr. Proudfoot that all municipal railways should be taxed, was defeated.

Daily Touch With Lenine

Budapest is Orderly—Despatches Are Censored.

BUDAPEST, April 3.—Communist Budapest is orderly and the government is putting forth every effort to stabilize conditions.

There are pessimists, however, who declare that the government will endure less than a month, it being pointed out that its success will be partially dependent upon the success of the Russian Bolshevik army to establish a corridor from Kiev to Budapest by way of Bessarabia and Bukowina.

Belkun, the Foreign Minister, receives hundreds of telegrams of an official nature every day, among them being messages from Nicolai Lenine, the Russian Bolshevik leader.

Deny Reports.

He receives newspaper men freely but has ordered that their despatches be censored for the purpose of cutting down the material to be sent over already crowded wires as well as to eliminate objectionable features. Kun, who was formerly a secretary of Lenine, is most anxious to deny reports relative to the communication of women in Hungary, which he declares to be "preposterous."

He also denies rumours of assassinations and disorders. Of the twenty-four members of the government, nineteen are Jews.

Seats Now on Sale for "Flo-Flo"

The advance sale of seats for "Flo-Flo," the musical comedy hit which remained at the Cort Theatre, New York, all last season, and which comes to the Grand Opera House here on Saturday, matinee and evening, opened at the box office of the theatre this morning, and the demand for seats for this brilliant offering points to the full house that it merits.

John Cort's newest show has a de luxe cast, lyrics that won't be forgotten, pithy lines, interesting situations, magnificent scenery, exquisite gowns, beautiful girls, a chorus which boasts that each of its members is a perfect thirty-six and a team of eccentric dancers that is rivalled by none in the country.

"Flo-Flo" runs the entire scale of comedy situations, including suspense, intrigue and romance. It boasts of more pulchritude to every square foot of stage floor space than any show presented in New York in years. Fred de Gresac's plot has to do with Flo-Flo, the shapely corset model; Angelina Stokes, who loves a boy from Oshkosh, though she is being tricked into marriage with a bogus Spanish Count; the ubiquitous proprietors of the exclusive Bride Shop, Mosher and Simpson; and the acrobatic Pinky and Aloysius, who imbue the piece with a Sherlock Holmes atmosphere. Silvio Hein's score comprises twenty tuneful numbers.

Numbered in "Flo-Flo's" exceptional cast are Louise Kelly, Jere Delaney, Carl L. George, William Cummings, Rose Southern, Mildred Beverly, Augustus Buell, Rhea Norton, William Burton Burns, Edward Lynn and others of importance, and the "perfect thirty-six" chorus. An added attraction is the augmented "Flo-Flo" orchestra.

MAY MAKE CONCESSIONS

Question is Being Considered Today by the "Big Four."

FOOD SHIPMENTS

By Carl D. Groat.
(United Press.)

PARIS, April 3. — Continued failure of the "big four" to accomplish any apparent progress, together with increasing seriousness of the situation in Germany, accentuated the pessimism surrounding the peace conference to-day.

There was talk in some high quarters that it may be necessary to make peace along general lines if the settlement is to be effected before a crisis is reached in Germany.

The recent bitter debate in the British Parliament over peace delay is regarded as significant.

PARIS, April 2.—Important economic concession to the Soviet governments in Russia and Hungary were being considered by the Big Four to-day.

The Allies, it was understood, are practically convinced that the situation in those two countries demands immediate attention and that some sort of understanding with their governments is as urgent as peace with Germany.

Food anipments to Russia and Hungary and coal exportation to the latter country, probably will constitute the Allies' initial move to check the westward spread of Bolshevism.

New System of Government

VOTE WILL BE EXTENDED TO ALL WAGE EARNERS IRRESPECTIVE OF SEX.

(Special to Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, April 3. — The new government in Hungary has definitely promulgated that a system of government by village, town, district and county councils, and a national assembly of councils, will be established, a despatch from Budapest says. The representatives to the National Assembly will be elected by the town and county councils.

The last day on which elections can be held for the councils has been fixed for April 14th. All men and women who have reached the age of 18 will be permitted to vote with the exception of those who employ wage earners for profit or who live on unearned income, or are merchants, priests, monks, common criminals or lunatics.

Has Relatives in Peterboro

Mrs. Isabella Dennison Died Last Evening in Buffalo

BUFFALO, April 3.—Mrs. Isabella Dennison, aged 71 years, mother of Bertram and Alfred Jackson, both of Peterboro, Ont., and Mrs. Nelson, nurse of South Monaghan, died last night after a brief illness at her home at 10 Arlington Street, Rochester, N.Y. She leaves another daughter, Mrs. Edith Beckett, of Rochester; one grandson, Robert D. Emery, also of Rochester. Interment will take place on Friday afternoon in Rochester.

BRIDGE COMMITTEE MET SOME CONTRACTORS YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

There were no developments to-day in the disposal of the tenders for the Hunter street bridge. Yesterday afternoon the Board of Works met some of the contractors who explained certain details of their tenders that appeared obscure and doubtful. Mr. Barber and City Engineer Parsons have examined all the bids, and it is understood that they are in a position to make a report if it is asked for. In fact one alderman has expressed a wish that the tenders should be set out in a complete report prepared by the City Engineer for the guidance of the Council. For the present Ald. Phelan's committee has made some progress in sifting the offers the contractors have presented, but there has been no intimation as to when the solid and decisive deliberations will begin.

The Examiner was informed that a "show of hands" was taken at yesterday afternoon's meeting on the general question of the type of bridge, and a majority was indicated for a concrete bridge on the original plans.

Peterboro Chapter of Graduate Nurses Will Increase Rates

Annual Meeting Was Held Yesterday Afternoon in the Public Library—Officers Elected for the Year.

THE NEW SCHEDULE

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Chapter of Graduate Nurses' Association of Ontario, was held in the Public Library yesterday afternoon, and was well attended. The meeting was opened by roll call. The minutes of the March meeting were read and approved.

Miss Dixon, president of the Chapter, gave a short sketch of the work in connection with the Graduate Nurses Association of Ontario. The Peterborb Chapter of the G.N.A.O. was formed April, 1913. At that time the Graduate Nurses invited Miss Crosley, president of the Provincial Association, and Editor of the "Canadian Nurse," to come to Peterboro, and address the nurses. Miss Crosley gave a very helpful and inspiring address along this line, and also on registration. This was followed by a discussion by the nurses with the result that a Chapter was formed in Peterboro. The Peterboro Chapter is about six years old.

This being the annual meeting the election of officers took place:

Officers Re-elected.

Miss Dixon was re-elected President on motion of Miss Archer and Miss Peck.

It was moved by Miss Fife, seconded by Miss Archer, that Miss Simons be appointed secretary.—Carried.

Moved by Miss Ellis, seconded by Miss Fife, that Miss M. Deyell be appointed treasurer.—Carried.

Misses Deyell, Thornton, Simons, were appointed representatives to the Women's Council.

Social Service Work.

Misses Dixon, Foot and Jory were appointed representatives of the Social Service Work.

The matter of increasing the fees of Graduate Nurses in private practice was discussed and the Peterboro Chapter of Graduate Nurses Association of Ontario, decided to increase the rates.

The schedule of rates decided on is as follows:

General and Obstetric Nursing — $25 per week.

Contagious, Mental, Tuberculosis cases—4 per day.

Attending and preparing for operation or Obstetrical cases for one day —$5.00.

Ordinary cases for one day—$3.75.

These rates to take effect this month.

The 16th annual meeting of the Graduate Nurses Association, Ontario, is to be held in the new Medical Building of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., Thursday, April 24, Friday, April 25th. All members of the Association are invited to be present.

Labor Approves of Resolution

A Resolution Emanating From Toronto is Approved Here—Government Starts Something.

A resolution urging "the workers of Canada who are in the vast majority and who profoundly believe in majority rule, to organize in accordance with Canadian law, for the purpose of taking over all industries with the intention of operating the mechanism of production and administering them democratically in the interests of the whole people" was approved by the Trades and Labour ed by the Toronto District Labour Council.

For Joint Control.

In this connection the following Ottawa report is pertinent and interesting:

Ottawa, April 3.—Hon. Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor, in the Senate to-day announced that the Government is to appoint a commission of five men consisting of Labor men and capitalists, to study various conditions with the object of arriving at the feasibility of the question of joint control of industry.

The commission is to be composed of men commanding the complete confidence of the nation, including labor and capital, and will proceed to all centres of industry in the Dominion, survey the situation in all its aspects, ascertain all the facts, and report to the Government before May 15, upon the possibility of the joint control and operation of certain industries by capital and labor.

Mr. Robertson, whose announcement of such a far-reaching step was made in the course of a statement replying to an interrogation by Senator Mitchener as to what steps the Government was taking to secure greater cooperation between capital and labor, did not divulge the personnel of the commission he has in view but he emphasized that it would be composed of men who would have the confidence of the whole Canadin people, and it is understood that the names of those composing it will be announced almost immediately.

MAN FOUND DEAD IN BED WITH GAS JET TURNED ON

TORONTO, April 3.—Wm. Robert Amos, aged 50, of 61 Duke street, was found dead in bed yesterday afternon by his wife. Gas poisoning is said to be the cause of death. According to the police, Amos had been ill for some time. When he went upstairs yesterday afternoon and failed to come down again after a long lapse of time, Mrs. Amos went to his room and found him dead in bed with the gas jet turned on.

Will Neutralize Left Bank of Rhine

Council of Four Decides, Until Indemnity is Paid by Germany, French and Belgian Troops Will Garrison Territory.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 3. — The Council of Four has virtually decided, according to information from French sources, that the left bank of the Rhine will be neutralized until Germany has paid the indemnity fixed by the Peace Conference. It is understood that French and Belgian troops will hold this territory, the United States claiming it to be impossible to leave American troops in Europe after the signing of the peace treaty, and Great Britain having insufficient effective troops to maintain garrisons along the Rhine.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

When asked the question, why is there only one Semi-ready Store in each town or city outside of Montreal?" the President of the Company said:

"It's the most economical as well as the most efficient system of merchandizing. Not only does it save money but it prevents deception. The man who reads knows that in only one store can he secure the genuine.

"Then it saves us $50,000 a year, or nearly a dollar on each suit in travelling expenses alone. Semi-ready sends one man each season to each city for a day. He books orders for 500 or 1,000 suits from the proprietor of the store—in one or two days. The traveller who sells indiscriminately will spend 14 days getting such a large order. His expenses and salary will cost from 50 cents to $1.50 per suit he sells."

THE G.W.V.A. TAG DAY

The annual tag-day of the Peterboro branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, the public is reminded, will be held this year on April 19th, which is the Saturday before the anniversary of the 2nd battle of Ypres. This will be the third annual day's effort of the Veterans on behalf of their relief fund and there is no question as to the response from the public. The proceeds will be devoted to relieving cases of distress among Peterboro soldiers and their dependents and will not of course be utilized for the general purposes of the Association, so that the tag-day campaign is not connected with the drive which will be held in May in aid of the G.W.V.A. club house fund. During the past year also relief fund of the Veterans has had frequent calls made upon it and thanks to the generosity of the public in subscribing liberally on the occasion of the two previous tag-days, the Association has been enabled to give a helping hand to many who were temporarily in need of assistance. It should be a matter of satisfaction to the citizens to know that the G.W.V.A. has undertaken this work and that the people of Peterboro can feel assured that they are smoothing difficulties out of the path of many a returned soldier or of the dependents of men who are still serving. It is a splendid cause to help and the tag-day method furnishes a way by which every citizen can have a share in the good work.

THE TEMPERANCE ACT PROBE

Some very interesting disclosures have already been made as a result of the first day's session of the probe by the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature into the administration of the Ontario Temperance Act. It will be startling news to the people of Ontario that since the Act came into force the number of doctors' prescription issued for liquor has reached a total of over half a million. This is the estimate of Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the License Board and is indicative either a much stronger belief in the medicinal value of liquor on the part of the doctors than temperance leaders would have us believe exists among the medical profession, or else that a good many doctors throughout the province have found the Ontario Temperance Act a profitable adjunct to their regular practice.

Important too was Mr. Flavelle's admission that up to three weeks ago the License Board had no real check on the liquor that has been confiscated since the Act came into force.

For a long time there were practically only verbal records of the liquor seized and as Mr. Dewart brought out there was nothing to prevent officials from "holding out" confiscated liquor. It will probably impress the people of the province as a most unbusiness-like way of dealing with the matter, especially in view of the fact that a stock-taking made a short time ago showed that the volume of liquor seized by the department was valued at approximately $90,000. It was only three weeks ago that an official was appointed to check over all liquor seized and prior to his appointment there was apparently no adequate supervision. Mr. Flavelle explained that the seizures of liquor became so numerous that it was impossible to keep a record of them. However the Department is surely not so undermanned that it could not find officials enough to attend to this important detail in connection with the administration of the Act.

THE SIBERIAN FARCE.

When Mr. N. W. Rowell arose in his place in the House of Commons on Monday and questioned ed closely the action of the Canadian Government in sending an expeditionary force into Siberia it dawned for a few moments on the people of Canada were at last to be supplied with a clue to the meaning of what our soldiers are supposed to be doing in Russia. The hope was a brief one, however, for when the cross examination conducted by members of the opposition managed to pin Mr. Rowell down to the consideration of the definite question as to with whom our troops were expected to fight, the Government's spokesman was unable to supply the information that was desired. "I shall not undertake to answer that question", was the reply made and Mr. Rowell added that the Canadians were supposed to fight but they didn't fight. The inference must be drawn that the reason they have not been fighting is that they have experienced the same difficulty as Mr. Rowell of not being able to find out against whom they were expected to begin hostilities. For the history of Canada's army in France shows that they had no hesitation in fighting when the identity of the enemy was clear. It is an amazing situation that the Government of a Country which has sent 4,000 soldiers into a foreign land, should at this late date be utterly unable to furnish any data as to their activities. However, the Siberian Expeditionary force is coming home and by the time the troops reach here Mr. Rowell may have been able to arrive at some definite conclusion about the matter.

IMPORTANT AMENDMENTS

If the Ontario Legislature adopts the amendments to the Assessment Act decided upon by a special committee of the legislature, the municipalities of the province will be in a position not only to grant partial exemption from taxation on moderately priced houses, but also to increase the amount of personal income that shall be exempt from taxation. The amendments are the most important changes in the Assessment Act that have been decided upon for some time and although the civic rulers of municipalities may look askance at the threatened reduction of revenue, there is no question about the manner in which the amendments will be received by the majority of the ratepayers. A graduated scale of exemptions has been adopted by the committee which provides that in the case of a house assessed at not more than $2000 it shall be actually assessed at 50 per cent. of the value. Thus the owner of a house assessed $2000 would only have to pay taxes on $1000. The exemption decreases according to the value of the house until in the case of a house assessed at more than $4000, the owner will be taxed on the full value of the house. There is no exemption as far as land values are concerned and it is provided that the exemptions shall only be put in force in any municipality when the ratepayers have approved of the plan by passing a by-law.

Another important change is that under the same amendment the municipalities of Ontario are given the power, instead of granting the percentage exemption to soldiers on the property owned by them, to give the soldier citizens exemption from taxes for as long a period as the civic authorities see fit.

HOW A WORKER VIEWS BOLSHEVISM

Colonel John Ward is one of the best known Labor Leaders in England and holds a seat in the British Parliament. As special representative of the "navvies" he is a very virile quantity, and, as one of the general officers of the British Federation of Trades Unions, is in a position where he can command the ear of his fellow workers. Colonel Ward has been serving with his regiment of "navvies," recruited by himself, on the Omsk front in Siberia, and has been utilizing his opportunities to find out at first hand what Bolshevism and the Bolsheviks really are. When the Colonel reaches a conclusion he leaves no room for doubt regarding its character and he has a naturally antipathy for presenting it in terse, striking and vigorous language. In a recent letter he gave vent to his feelings in a way that should carry conviction to workers everywhere. He wrote:

"For the love of Allah, never more talk of the glories of revolution—I am in it here. Friend strikes down him he thinks his foe and finds the dead man his brother. Priests, peasants, plutocrats, workmen, rich and poor go down together, in one welter of blood and dirt. The Bolshevik thinks nothing of standing 500 social revolutionists against the wall and shooting them down because of some petty difference of opinion as to whether the initiative should be national or communal. How the gods must cry with rage that men can be so mad. How ever any of our labor leaders failed to grasp the Bolshevik creed of blood and presumed to condone the horrors committed by this mob of fanatical maniacs I cannot imagine. Rather pray heaven defend our dear country from such a calamity!"

At Ekaterinburg, where the ex-Czar was imprisoned, Colonel Ward saw the Cossacks at work, clearing out an old well "with an occasional grand duke mixed up in the timber; then another poor piece of flesh was recognized as a grand duchess, then another as a foreman of the nearby iron works, then a few workmen and workwomen, all murdered, mutilated, just to prove the love of humanity."

"I believe it was necessary," concludes this British labor leader, "to destroy the old regime, but those swine whom we call Bolsheviks were bloodthirsty cutthroats who murder for the love of it, as some of their proclamations show."

In the terrible Russian tragedy that is still unfolding itself, the chief victims have been masses of unknown men and women and children. Executions and assassinations have been countless, but for every victim shot by a firing squad or by roving bands of murderers, a hundred have perished through lack of food, exposure or the maladies and plagues that are the consequence. Fearful is the price paid when the fabric of a modern country collapses and the processes of agriculture and industry are suspended. Probably the Bolshevist leaders had no special malice against peasants and workmen, but the poison of their teaching at the time they were plotting to attain power has had disastrous after effects. To-day the masses of the Russian people, the proletariat who were to live in luxury and idleness when the hated bourgeois were annihilated are worse slaves than under the tyranny of the autocrat. If they obey they are left alone, but already Lennie and Trotzky have slain them by hundreds and thousands through their abyssmal ignorance or deliberate violation of the first principles of civilised socie-

Interesting News For Working Men

AN ARTICLE WELL WORTH YOUR WHILE TO READ

This is a nerve-racking age—not a man in an office or behind the counter, striving hard to get on in the world, that does not feel the strain.

If nerves are in order, a man is strong, eats and sleeps well. Unstrung nerves means weakness, worry, sleeplessness and a general decay of bodily strength.

Most men are careless of their health. They trust to luck and that kind of thing, instead of taking Ferrozone for a few weeks when they feel dull in the morning, or when they sleep poorly or lose appetite.

Ferrozone quickly brightens up the mind. It creates an appetite and improves digestion. Ferrozone makes blood, quiets the nerves, makes muscle like steel and induces refreshing sleep.

Ferrozone is a body builder, thousands have proved it. If you are sick or out of sorts, use Ferrozone and enjoy the splendid health it so surely brings.

Permanent in its results, the greatest health-giver in the world is Ferrozone. Because nourishing and perfectly harmless, all can use it, even children. Get Ferrozone to-day. 50c per box, at all dealers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Very Effective Method for Banishing Hairs

(Modes of To-day.)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

Follow The Gleam

By F. H. Gadsby

There has been much talk of the light in the window and some peevish newspapers have pretended to view it as an insult—as a signal placed there to guide the prodigal son home. They object to being treated as "Prodigal Sons."

This only goes to show that they do not know their Bible because there were no lights in the window for the prodigal son. All he got was gold chains and fatted calves, and he had to find his own way home. Even, if the Liberal Unionists were prodigal sons—which they are not—the Opposition could not afford to kill any veal for them on account of the high cost of living. The light in the window is much cheaper—although oil has gone up, too—and it is put there in good faith, not for prodigal sons, but for old friends and members of the family who may be wandering in the cold and the dark.

The last thing the light in the window wants to beckon is the rough company of prodigal sons and sinners. It is simply calling the boys home—a friendly twinkle that conveys nothing but good will. It is more than a light—it is warmth and a welcome and if anybody thinks that he has to come in through the window simply because the light is there he has another guess coming. The light is a sign that the door swings free and the latch string is on the outside and sensible people will, of course, come in by the door which is the place to come in by and not through the window which is the place where mosquitoes and burglars and other pests enter.

Meanwhile the strayed Liberals on the other side of the House cast various doubts on the light. Some say that it may be only a light and a window-frame with no stout planks to make a shelter for the regenerated liberal party. Others complain that, while leader MacKenzie is the official signaller, he is assisted by a committee of ten, which makes the light hard to follow. When the light is in so many hands it is hard to keep track of as a will-o-the-wisp—now here, now there, now nowhere at all. They're waiting—so they say—until the light becomes one man's job and he has the job for keeps. They do not expect the light to shine steadily and clearly until the National Convention is called and a permanent leader is chosen. This is a slim excuse, of course,—there's really nothing uncertain about the light—but it goes to show that the wanderers are wistful about it.

The Hon. Frank Carvell, as I remember, refused to see the light, for the present. Like the farmer who saw a giraffe for the first time, he said: "There ain't no such durned thing." Carvell has long had a low tariff light of his own and it isn't so long ago that he and that other Fighting Frank—Oliver to wit—were flashing it vigorously. But just now Mr. Carvell has gone out of the signalling business and the gleams he sees across the waves are not inviting. Somebody is throwing stones at the Carvell light—Charley Murphy perhaps—and somehow or other the stones seem to land hard on the Liberal organization in Western Ontario. People who carry glass lanterns shouldn't throw stones—it's a bad way to harmonize the party.

Meanwhile the light holds out to burn. The Hon. James Calder sees it, but is loth, for the time being, to leave Union Government which at least keeps his back warm, and to step out into the cold future whither the light leads. Instead he sets his own light in the window for Premier Gouin, of Quebec, who is on the outside, looking in. What will Premier Gouin do? What did September Morn do—did she take the plunge or did she continue to shiver on the brink.

The Hon. Thomas Crerar recognized the light at once, answered heartily that it was the same old light that he had always worked by, a light that Grain Growers and United Farmers admitted was almost identical with their own—a good light, a true light. Almost was the Hon. Thomas — no Thomas the doubter this—persuaded. He put one foot out toward the friendly beacon—then he backed up. Henders and Richardson and other Western members saw the light more or less distinctly but professed to fear politics—thought politics might clog the wick—and said they would stay where they were for a while anyway.

Maharg had no misgivings about the light in the window—admitted that there was a light and a window and a welcome behind it—and then asked savagely why Union Government hadn't a light of its own. Maharg rather ruffled Union Government. They are not in a position to start a light of their own but rumour has it that they will burn the seven per cent. war duty and the duty on agricultural implements to keep the Western Members' feet warm until they get home.

In the fullness of time— and how full time will have to be before it happens, nobody knows—Union Government will break up into its component parts and the Liberals in it will follow their low tariff light and the Conservatives, their high tariff light which glows clear and steady in the hands of the Hon. Bob. Rogers, Sir Sam Hughes, Col. John Currie and the other auld lichters. All of which means that if Union Government started to hang out any other lights now then a red one to indicate danger or a green one to say "go steady," it would have so many lights to steer by that the ship would go on the rocks. As soon as the two parties have their charts mapped out, their courses laid and their pilots aboard, Union Government will cease to exist. Meanwhile, to use a nautical phrase, the ship of state is "in stays" and as far as lights are concerned the casual observer doesn't know whether they are bow lights or stern lights, whether the ship is going or coming, backing or filling, drifting or sailing. The chances are that she is doing all six. Union Government is a fore-and-aft arrangement, anyhow.

Mr. Fielding did not apply the blind eye to the light in the window. No, indeed. He saw it the very first time—good old light shining bravely as ever. But he said, "I'll take it for granted. A light like that has plenty of oil from public opinion. It will be shining with as pure a flame as a year hence as it is now. Cheer up boy—keep the home fires burning and when these fellows are up to their necks in the swamp, I'll lead the rush toward your friendly signal." Mr. Fielding is a philosopher. He knows that everything comes to the light that waits.

Among those who temporized with the light in the window was Dr. Michael Clark who took the ground that it was too good to be true. He surmised that it might be false morning sun dogs, a Catherine wheel, almost anything but a real light in a real window. He would have to be surer of it before he made a move. His experience was that the light got smoky when everybody was inside and the door locked.

As if to answer him the McMaster resolution was produced which showed that the light in the window was in good working order, the wick trimmed, the oil pure and the flame steady. Union Government did with it, what it did with the knighthood question—treated it as a want of confidence notion. In other words it drew the blind, so that this fierce white light in the window wouldn't hurt its eyes. However the light is still there and any strayed soul that remains out on the hills away has only himself to blame.

PIGS NOT DEAD, JUST DRUNK.

PORTLAND, April 3.—While Jerry Lolic was working in the shipyards his pigs out on the Power valley road took advantage of his absence and went on a rip-roaring drunk, according to the statement of witnesses in court.

A warrant was out for Lolic's arrest on a charge of illicit manufacture of wine. It was placed in the hands of a deputy sheriff for service. He went to Lolic's place, but the man was at work in town. He found a vat of wine and rather than transport it to town poured it into a trough that led to the pig pen. The picks sucked it up in a manner almost human. Their subsequent behaviour was entirely human, as the story goes.

Presently they lay down in their wallow, blind, stupid and hopelessly drunk. Mrs. Lolic viewed their silent forms with alarm and telephoned to Lolic that the pigs were all dead. They were only dead drunk. Lolic was fined $50 for having wine in his possession.

A PRESENTATION TO MISS L. MELON

Will Leave on a Several Months Visit to England.

Last evening at the conclusion of the regular Wednesday choir practice in the Parish Hall of All Saints Church, Miss Lillian Melton, a member of the choir for the past four years who leaves next week for several months visit in England, was the guest of honor at bright little social evening. During the evening on behalf of the thirty-five members of the choir a presentation of three silver vases was made to Miss Melton as a lasting token of the appreciation of the choir for their departing member. To this Miss Melton made a fitting response expressing her regret at leaving and the hope that she might return to rejoin them before long. Miss Melton sails for England on Wednesday the 9th.

CANNON BECOMING FARM IMPLEMENTS

Germans Have to Make Actual Bible Prophecy.

COBLENZ, April 3.—Eighty big calibre German guns refused by the United States receiving commission because they did not meet certain modern standards, have been sold to a Coblenz foundry and are soon to be made into farm implements and other peace time machinery.

While some of these cannon were made as long ago as 1870, they had been used at some time or another in the recent war. After the guns had been refused, members of the German delivering commission requested that they be permitted to dispose of the war material to a foundry. The request was granted with the understanding that the cannon would quickly be melted into pig iron and that none of them would be used for the manufacture of any kind of fire-arms.

Labour Council Puts Ald. Edgar On Its Unfair List

Ald. Murray Was Cordially Received After Rather Long Illness—Building By-Law Should be Applied to All Buildings in Fire Limits—The Council to Enquire About Market Regulations.

WANT EIGHT-HOUR DAY

The Trades and Labour Council last night warmly welcomed Ald. Murray, who was present for the first time since his recent illness, and the hope was expressed that he would soon regain complete health.

A resolution from the Hamilton District Labour Council advocating the League of Nations was endorsed. It proposes that a general convention be called in Canada to form a central permanent organization devoted to the support of the League, and also that steps be taken to inform the people of its objects and provisions.

Enforce Building By-law.

A recommendation from the Bricklayers' Union that the Building By-law requiring thirteen inch walls within the fire limits be rigidly enforced, was adopted. It was reported that permits had been issued by the city excepting some buildings from this regulation, although other applications equally deserving of consideration had been refused. One delegate hinted that an influential citizen had been allowed to build a nine inch wall instead of thirteen, whereas the ordinary man's request was refused.

"The city shouldn't make fish of one and flesh of another. Everybody should be treated alike," was the comment.

"We need a building inspector," remarked one delegate.

The secretary was instructed to forward a copy of the resolution to the Council calling their attention to this complaint, and urging that the by-law by strictly adhered to.

The Bricklayers and Masons also announced their decision that one of their Union members must supervise all concrete foundations or other work upon which brick is to be laid. Such concrete work, it was argued, is often done by men who have no qualification other than a rough idea as to the mixture of cement, sand, gravel and water.

"There are concrete foundations in houses in this city that no one could be proud of," declared one of the representatives of the Bricklayers and Masons. "It is our desire to improve this work, so when brickwork is build on it there can be no criticism of the entire job. We are not trying to take the work away from labourers. As it is we can't work on stone foundations that have been put in by non-union men."

Other delegates demurred at this proposal, and finally no action was taken by the Labour Council.

"If you demand that the frames be put in by Union carpenters I will stand by you," was one expression.

"The Bricklayers are drawing the line pretty tight," remarked a machinist.

"What about the cement finishers?" asked another delegate.

"They have no local here, that's one of the reasons for our action," was the reply.

A Marked Grievance.

It was reported that restaurant men are heavy buyers of eggs and chickens on the market to the detriment of consumers. One delegate stated that last Saturday eggs were quoted at 45 cents a dozen in contrast to 40 and 42 cents the previous week. He had seen restaurant men buying between ten and eleven o'clock, filling soap boxes with the eggs they purchased.

"We'll find out what the market by-law is," said President Bolwell, "before we do anything. We want to be sure of our grounds."

A committee composed of Messrs. Wires, Adamson and Goodfellow were appointed to obtain the necessary information from City Clerk Armstrong.

The Credit Bureau.

The Board of Trade received a passing notice. Delegates gave their opinion that it wasn't worth spending $30 to send three representatives to the Board.

"I read their programme, and I couldn't find anything in it that would entice me to become a member," was one comment.

"I see they are going to have a credit bureau," remarked another delegate. "They will blacklist the workingman who may become indebted to some merchant in these times, but they will put the "big fellow" on their list? He is often worse to pay his debts than the poorer people. I think it is a scandal to spread the reputations of people abo in this way."

After Ald. Edgar.

Reports that Ald. Edgar had opposed the fair wage clause in the bridge contract, and had otherwise opposed the interests of Labour, resulted in a motion, which was adopted, to put him on the unfair list.

"We can tell our grocers and other dealers that we simply won't buy from them if they get their paper, paper bags and other goods from him. We can go after the Papermakers' Union, one of the strongest in the country and secure their support so that the manufacturers will have to cut him off."

"There's no use starting this unless you intend to go through with it," said one delegate after the motion was carried.

Action Was Hasty.

Representatives of the Stage Employees' Union criticized the resolution passed at the last meeting asking the Grand Opera House to have the theatre programmes printed in a Union shop.

"When a new man comes to this town, everybody jumps on him," said one member. "They clap high prices on him, and treat him as if he were not welcome. When Turners had the Opera House the programmes were printed for two years in the same non-union ship. As soon as the new management takes it over some one happens to notice the absence of the label on the programmes and this Council goes after him. The programmes were printed by the Mother's Bread Company, and they didn't seem to know anything about the Union. When their attention was called to it, they changed their contract at once."

Reports were expressed that the procedure had taken the course it did.

"It was purely a matter for the Printers' local, and we should have taken it up there first," said a delegate from the Printers.

Want the Eight Hour Day.

Although the City Council rejected a resolution from Cobalt favouring a general eight hour day, members suggested that this question should be followed up.

"If the City Council can see it, they will have to. The working day must be made less unless there is a tremendous change in Canada before long," was one observation.

Labour Day Committee.

The Labour Day committee will meet next Wednesday night in the Labour Hall, and all members are requested to attend.

Nothing to Report.

The special committee appointed to inquire into Mr. Walter Sindon's allegation respecting Mayor Duncan and the contract for painting the Public Library reported progress. It was stated that Mr. Sollitt of the Library Board was in New Brunswick and no information was obtainable until he returned.

"It looks like a one-man committee," said a delegate. "We saw Mr. Dela Fosse, but he told us he was not authorized to give out anything. We simply want to know the facts and clear this charge up, but we intend to be careful about it."

PRESCRIPTION FORGERY.

WINGHAM, April 3. — On a charge of forging liquor prescriptions upon Druggist Mitchell, of this town, Wm. Small, a man about 50 years of age, was arrested by Chief Allen, and lodged in the cells. Crown Attorney Seager of Goderich, is acting for the Crown. He came up for a hearing before Police Magistrate Morton, and the case was enlarged until April 3rd, at 10 o'clock providing the prisoner can find two sureties to go his bail of $200 each and himself $400. In default of this he will have to remain in custody. R. Vanstone is acting for the prisoner.

The prisoner was born in Wingham and has lived here a great part of his life.

Peterboro Boy Has Second Attack Of Influenza

Trooper Lawrence Was Prisoner of War in Germany.

In a letter received from Witley Camp where he is at present recovering from a second attack of influenza, Trooper Harold Bruce Lawrence, 4th C.M.R., 1st C.O.R.D., gives a graphic description of conditions in prison camp in Germany. He says in part, "This is my second attack of flu. I had it while a prisoner of war in Germany, but was forced to work ten days out of the fourteen I was ill, or starve. Starvation means a lot of things that those who are living on the good things in Canada, would never in this wide world think of. Steak chops and bacon sound nice but when you come down to being starved by the enemy who is in the mean time making a slave out of you, one begins to appreciate home rations. We were fed turnip water for dinner, potato water for supper and an issue of one quarter of a pound of cat or dog meat once a week and one loaf of bread for one week. The latter issue we generally finished in about two hours. On these rations we worked twelve houts a day building a bridge, rain or shine, fitted out like a bunch of 'bohunks,' some with no boots and others with no overcoats. Well this must be all forgotten now that I am a free man and I will make the best of life in the future. The reason I am not home yet is that I am suffering with flu and heart trouble, but I hope to be back in that dear old home town of mine before long."

TROOPER H. B. LAWRENCE

Although only twenty years of age, Trooper Lawrence has been overseas four and a half years.

Peterboro Public Buildings Will Be Delayed

Fine Words and a Good Dinner Failed to Move the Minister.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M. P., wires as follows:

"The Minister of Public Works told me yesterday that while the immense indebtedness of the government on account of the war and of plans for soldiers and pensions held up the Federal Building, etc., in Peterborough, they would be carried out at the earliest possible opportunity. The Prime Minister confirmed it."

Financial Demands To Be Imposed

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 3.—Several members of the French peace delegation assure the "Matin" that French ideas on the peace treaty and other matters are gaining ground and that an understanding has been almost, if not altogether reached, regarding the subject of the financial demands to be imposed on Germany.

The "Echo De Paris" say that the Council of Four believes that Germany will be able to pay immediately six billion francs in money of various kinds.

Deliveries of raw materials and manufactured goods from Germany, it says, will reach an undetermined sum which some optimists estimate will amount to thirty billion francs.

No, Herman, a sinking fund should never be used for the purpose of floating stocks.

BIG STRIKE IN GERMANY

Machine Guns and Tanks Freely Used On the Streets.

By Frank J. Taylor.
(United Press.)

BERLIN, April 3.—More than 180,000 workers went on strike in Berlin late yesterday.

Metal workers, technicians and other skilled craftsmen were the first to walk out. They were quickly followed by several other trades unions.

While the strike has been anticipated for several days, it was believed it might be postponed until next week, and the sudden walkout caught the government forces unprepared. There was no violence, however, and the city was quiet last night.

Reports reaching here indicated that disturbances have been renewed in Stuttgart and Frankfort with greater vigour than before.

More than twenty persons have been killed and fifty wounded in Stuttgart. Business is completely at a standstill. Crowds swarm through the streets, storming army food wagons. Government troops are maintaining the upper hand by means of machine guns, bristling from buildings and armoured motor cars. A battery of tanks is assisting in patrolling the streets. In Frankfort hundreds of persons have been arrested.

Loss from plundering is estimated at more than a million dollars.

Interviewed Sir Adam Beck

Representatives of G.W.V.A. Saw Head of Hydro-Commission.

Secretary Sidney Whatley and Ex-President Harvey Staunton formed a deputation representing the local G. W. V. A. which waited upon Sir Adam Beck head of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in Toronto yesterday to protest against the Commission going outside of Canada to purchase machinery and equipment. They were introduced by Mr. W. E. Turley, Provincial Secretary of the G. W. V. A. and the whole matter was discussed at considerable length Sir Adam Beck explaining the circumstances under which it had been in his opinion found necessary to order machinery from outside firms. He promised the representatives of the War Veterans that as far as possible preference would be given to the Canadian manufacturers.

Allies Still on the Defensive

Entente May Have to Recognize the the Russian Government.

By J. W. T. Mason.
(United Press.)

NEW YORK, April 3.—Recognition of the Bolsheviki administration at Moscow as the defacto government of Russia is rapidly becoming inevitable, according to accumulative indications of the new point of view of the Russia situation being taken by the Peace Conference.

The Paris delegates are putting personal sentiment and national resentment aside. They are beginning to examine the accomplishments of the Bolsheviki from the standpoint of International law, which governs the recognition of sovereignty in a revolutionary regime. While the Bolsheviki have been in power they have established sufficient order to permit successful military operations to be conducted simultaneously in the extreme northern and southern areas of their country.

In the north, American and British troops are on the defensive and intend to confine to their transports and return home as soon as the ice breaks.

10,000 Died of Spanish Influenza

IN ONTARIO — OCTOBER WAS THE WORST MONTH—DIPHTHERIA NOW ON THE INCREASE IN PROVINCE.

Special to Examiner.)

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, April 3. — Spanish Influenza is fast disappearing from the province, as indicated by the decrease in deaths shown in the Provincial Board of Health statistics for the month of March.

Since the first of October, the epidemic has been either the primary or contributory cause of nearly 10,000 deaths in the province.

Deaths by months were: October, 3015; November, 2608; December, 1568; January, 1512; February, 821, comprising 285 cases of influenza, and 418 pneumonia, total 703.

Cities and towns reporting the most deaths for March were Toronto, 56; Hamilton, 29; London, 4, the Soo, 8; St. Catharines, 7; Woodstock, 5; Fort William, 17.

The reports of secretaries of the local boards of health for month of March, show scarlet fever and diphtheria prevails to a much greater extent than in the corresponding month of 1918. The cities where the increase for the last few months in diphtheria is the most noticeable are Toronto, Ottawa and Windsor. Cases or scarlet fever have also been prevalent in Fort William for some weeks. The Provincial Board of Health has distributed free of charge where diphtheria prevails 25,946,000 units of anti-toxin at a cost of $3,891.00.

The number of deaths from all causes reported by the undertakers are 24,895.

OBJECT TO ACQUITTAL

PARIS, April 1.—A resolution of protest against the acquittal of Raoul Villain, who shot and killed the Socialist leader, Jaures, in 1914, was adopted by the Federal Socialist Congress for the Department of the Seine. The Federation was directed to enquire into what action should be taken by that body.

Mr. Joseph Hamilton President Millbrook Agricultural Society

Has Been in Public Life for Many Years—Millbrook Soldiers Return Home—Visitors to the Village During the Week.

MILLBROOK, April 2. — Mr. Joseph Hamilton, the newly elected president of the Millbrook Agricultural Society, is a son of the late Mr. John Hamilton and was born on the homestead, lot 5, Con. 3, Cavan, and has lived there all his life. His mother was Miss Sarah Love from near Kingston. Mr. Hamilton received his education at Zion school. His wife was Miss Emma Deberthe Osborne, of Bowmanville.

Mr. Hamilton spent three years in the Royal School of Infantry, Toronto, has been trustee of Zion school for twelve years, member of Cavan Board of Health for eight years. Deputy District Grand Master of East Durham, L.T.B.A., for four years, a Past Grand Master of the I.O.O.F., Red Cross, member of R. A. P. and member of Peterboro Encampment and of L.O.L., No. 40, Fallis Line.

Mr. Hamilton has been elected president for 1919. Under his able supervision as president the society will no doubt continue in its good work and it is predicted that with good weather the Millbrook Central Exhibition of 1919 will be the best ever.

War Relief.

A meeting of the War Relief Society was held on Tuesday, March 25th in the Waverley Inn, to discuss the future plans of the Society.

The president, Mrs. Eakins, opened the meeting with a few well chosen remarks, after which the minutes of the last meeting and reports of the different officers were given. The business of the meeting was then proceeded with.

It was decided not to disband the society at present but to close the workroom. Wool for knitting will be given out and articles taken in by Mrs. Eakins and Miss Vance at their homes on the last Tuesday of each month.

Inst. for the Blind	$50.00
Navy League	50.00
Armenian Relief Fund	25.00
Relief of Jews in Palestine..	25.00

At the close of the meeting a very hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Sayles for their many kindnesses to the Society. A pleasant social feature of the meeting was the serving of refreshments by Mrs. Eakins.

Pte. Geo. Freelove.

Pte. Freelove returned to Millbrook last week after serving over four years in England and France. He enlisted in November, 1914, with the 21st Batt., went overseas in April, 1915 ,and to France in Sept., of same year. He was on transport duty all the time but saw much fighting and came under fire many times. Their transport never turned back but once —that was at Passchendaele, when it was utterly impossible to go through. If they had tried to do so they would have been annihilated. The gunners themselves had extreme difficulty at that time, but they saved their guns. Pte. Freelove returned on the Royal George. He said they received good treatment.

Pte. Harold Donaldson.

A large number of the friends of Pte. Donaldson were at the depot on Saturday evening to give him a welcome home from overseas. He enlisted in December, 1915, with the 46th Queen's Battery, Kingston. He went overseas in the following February, and was transferred to the 45th Battery, and went to France in July, 1916. In November, 1917, he was wounded in the right arm at Passchendaele, and was in hospital for some time, and was back with the battery for there months; afterwards he was teaching in Khaki University, near Vimy Ridge, and was with the Canadian Equipment Corps at head quarters for some time. He went overseas on the Metagama and returned on the Olympic.

Sergt. Roy Dawson.

Sergt. Roy Dawson enlisted in March, 1916, with the 202nd Sportsmen Batt., of Edmonton; went to England in August, sailing on the Mauritania, and went to France on March 8, 1917, and was transferred to the 10th Batt, 1st Div., Canadians. After six months in France he was shot in the leg at Hill 70, near Lens. Was sent to England and was in hospital for three months. He was then put on instructing casualties in physical training at Bramshott camp, 2nd Command Depot. Sergt Dawson was at Rhyl, Wales, when the riot occurred. There were several reasons for the riot, the main one being that the third division was getting home first. The boys had no money, and the food was poor. Roy returned on the Minnekahda and made the trip to Halifax in 7 days. The service on the boat was good. Quite a number of Sergt. Dawson's friends met him at the depot on Monday evening and gave him three cheers and a tiger.

Birthday Party.

Miss Marjorie Sayles celebrated her 10th birthday by giving a party to about twenty-five of her playmates at the Waverley Inn on Saturday.

A very pleasant time was spent and a dainty supper was served in the spacious dining room. We join in wishing Marjorie many more such happy anniversaries

ARE AFTER THE TOBACCO USERS

With prohibition on the verge of the deadline and the first edition of the "drys" about to go to press, a new war is about to be waged on cigaret users, male and female, over the entire U. S. This struggle will be conducted practically by the same element who helped to bring prohibition the Women's Christian Temperance union. Its New York state president and national vice-president is Dr. Ella A. Boole ,of Brooklyn.

"It is true," she said, "that we are on the eve of a war, not only against users of cigarets, but against an entire country of tobacco users. And probably the same methods used in bringing about prohibition may be applied over the entire world to do away with the tobacco habit."

WARSAW CORRESPONDENCE

WARSAW, April 2.—Those who were not at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday missed a rare treat, Rev. Dr. Murray, Superintendent of Missions, Manitoba, preached. His text was John 10:16. He spoke of the shortage of ministers and missionaries. He asked for thirty and got twenty, and that is the proportion all the Superintendents got. One missionary often has four hundred square miles, of territory and then for only part of the year. Already he has some young women on the field and none do better work. He wished for six more this year but could get only two. The great foreign population of Canada are "sheep of another fold", who must be brought in. We ourselves are a fusion of many races, and we have the Gospel. We have not done our duty for we are commanded "Go ye into all the World" and God in mercy has given us another chance by putting the foreigner at our doors. We cannot plead poverty, for with all the war expense, the people have much more in the banks than ever before. The speaker did not advocate Church Union as a whole, but he did think Warsaw had too many churches, when there are such large areas elsewhere with none.

Women's Institute

Next meeting of Warsaw Women's Institute will be held on Thursday, April 10th., Mrs. Jas. Moore will give a paper on "reconstruction". There will be a roll-call and it is hoped that every member will be present, as well as all other ladies who can arrange to come.

At the regular meeting of the Presbyterian Ladies Aid, though the day was stormy, a fair number were present. Through illness in her home, the president was absent. After two hours sewing and knitting, work was put away. An address was read to Mrs. Wm. Middleton, and she was presented with picture of the "Aid" No one had warned her so the surprise was complete, and she saw the reason why there were excuses made when she wanted one of the group. Then the hostess, Mrs. E. Hawthorne served a dainty lunch, along with which was a taste of maple syrup almost clear, that she had made from boiling down the sap from one tree near her house.

Personal

Mr. Wm. Pill, Warsaw, has moved to the place lately occupied by Mr. Ernest MacDonald Cotesloe.

Mr. Geo. Brown has moved to Mr. Reid's brick house.

Mr. Blake Peters, Canton, spent a few days last week, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edwards.

Dr. Smith, Lakefield and Mr. Conklin, Burleigh passed through the village, Wednesday a.m. route to Havelock.

Mr. Bogue, Lindsay, and daughter, Miss Mylo are spending a few days with Mr. Bogue's sister-in-law, Mrs. Percy Lloyd.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Matthews and Miss Leona spent Wednesday with Mrs. Percy Lloyd.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Johnson Harvey spent Tuesday and Wednesday with Mrs. Percy Lloyd.

Messrs. Hilliard and Richard Darling have rented Mr. Stephen Miles farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tucker are moving to Mr. Miles' farm also.

Mr. Elmo Hendren has bought the house on the hill ,ately owned by Mr. Fred Calder. He has also opened a garage and repair shop in the building lately occupied by Mr. John Payne.

Pte. Chas. Ellis returned home from overseas last Saturday. He has been gone over three years.

Pte. Milton Clysdale arrived home from overseas Saturday.

Pte. Vernon Selkirk arrived home from overseas Saturday evening. He enlisted over three years ago and since September 1916, until after the armistice was signed was with the 5th C. M. R.'s in France and Belgium. He has been a good soldier, has seen hard fighting, and was wounded once and gassed twice.

The lecture on "The Humourous Side of the War" given by Capt. Dewart last week was very interesting.

The lecture given for the Farmer's Club last Tuesday was unfortunately not very well advertised or more would have been present.

The "Trail Rangers" had a merry time last Wednesday evening; about twenty-five boys were initiated. The ceremony took place in the mill afterwards the boys and men, who initiated them, repaired to their hall, and partook of a...n supper.

There Are Two Kinds of Eye Strain

External and Internal

External eyestrain is strain of the muscles, on the outside of the eyeball which move it around in its socket. Internal eyestrain is the strain of those muscles on the inside of the eyeball and which help the eye to focus clearly.

Where glasses are needed to relieve eyestrain they must be ground for the individual using them—otherwise instead of relieving the strain they will increase it.

Let us examine your eyes NOW.

New Baseball League Has Been Organized Peterboro Represented

Mr. J. J. Solomon's new baseball league is now a going concern as a result of a splendid meeting held in Port Hope yesterday at which Mr. Solomon and Secretary Miller represented the Peterboro Club. A Port Hope despatch says:

PORT HOPE, April 2.—The Central Ontario Amateur Baseball Association met here to-day and orgnized for the season. The following clubs were admitted: Lindsay, Peterboro', Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg.

Belleville applied for admittance, but the remaining teams objected on account of the extra mileage and the application was refused. Another group will be formed in the east and Belleville will be taken in.

The rules and regulations were drawn up and a successful season is anticipated. The league opens on May 24, with the following games: Peterboro' at Oshawa, Bowmanville at Cobourg, Port Hope at Lindsay.

The single umpire system was adopted, and it was decided to play strictly amateur ball on O.A.B.A. rules and the winner to compete for The News Trophy, emblematic of the Ontario championship.

The following officers were elected:

Hon.-Presidents—A. T. Johnston, Peterboro, John Stacey, Oshawa, J. B. Mitchell, Bowmanville, S. B. Burnham, Port Hope, S. Denton, Cobourg, Mayor Duncan Peterboro, B. L. McLean, Lindsay.

President—"Sandy" Lockington, Port Hope

1st Vice President—A. Kemmel, Cobourg.

2nd Vice President—J. Knott, Oshawa.

Secretary-Treasurer — M. J. Dedman, Lindsay.

Councillors—F. W. Moynes, Lindsay, J. J. Solomon, Peterboro, A. Mark, Port Hope, A. Kemmel, Cobourg, G. James, Bowmanville, J. Knott, Oshawa.

A PRACTICAL BANKRUPTCY ACT

(By J. GUISE-BAGLEY)

Editor, "Examiner."

Dear Sir:—It will be of considerable interest to the commercial world to know that at last a practical Bankruptcy Act has been introduced into Parliament. It has just received its second reading at the House of Commons and in a very short time may be expected to become law.

The Bill as drafted provides that in case any Debtor has an execution levied on his goods and it remains unsatisfied for fourteen days, or if he makes a statement to any meeting of his creditors that he is unable, to pay his debts, or if he assigns or moves or hides any of his goods or attempts to do so with intent to delay his creditors, or if he makes a bulk sale of his goods without complying with the bulk-sales Act, he commits an act of banruptcy, which means that he has placed himself in the position of being liable of being made a bankrupt. The Bill does not apply to wage earners or farmers. On committing an act of bankruptcy any Creditor of $200.00 or upwards or a combination of creditors to that amount may by petition make him a bankrupt.

The Bill provides for vesting in a trustee the property of any person made bankrupt and the trustee has power in the discretion of the creditors and the Court to sell all the property of a bankrupt, and after paying expenses and making some provision for the maintenance for the bankrupt and his family, dividing the proceeds of sale between the creditors rateably. There are some curious provisions in the Bill which are intended to protect creditors, for instance, the husband or wife of a bankrupt will not be able to collect from the bankrupt's estate any debt due to him or her from the bankrupt until all the other creditors have been paid and any relative who works for the bankrupt, can only get three months wages.

A debtor is liable to arrest if he fails to make a proper statement of his debts and liabilities or attempts to conceal his books, if he absconds or avoids examination or tries to embarass the proceedings in bankruptcy or if it is shown that he is about to do so, or if removes any of his goods after service of a bankruptcy petition on him. The Court is given full power to examine and inquire as to everything owned by a bankrupt and there are many safe guards to prevent a bankrupt from making away with his property to defeat his creditors.

Perhaps one of the most important features of the proposed law is that after a man has surrendered all his property to a trustee in bankruptcy whether it is enough to satisfy the creditors or not, he will have power to apply to the Court for a discharge, which means that if the Court makes the order, the bankrupt has a clean bill and all his debts are extinguished, so that if he gets property afterwards his old creditors cannot touch it. The policy of the proposed act seems to be that where a man pays 50c on the dollar, and acts honestly he will be entitled to a discharge as a matter of course, but if he can be shown to have ommitted to keep proper books, or to have traded after he knew he was insolvent, or that there are suspicious losses, or if he has been unjustifiably extravagant, neglected, or speculative, or has brought or defended actions frivolously or given undue preferences or wilfully incurred debts so as to make his assets up to 50c on the dollar or if he has been guilty of fraud, the Court is to have power to refuse to give him a discharge, or to postpone it.

There are a number of provisions relating to the disposal of the property of the debtor by way of settlement on his wife or family which will make it very difficult for the man to avoid paying his debts by putting property in the name of his wife.

Upon the whole, the Act if passed, will be a great benefit to the commercial world because whenever a debtor is unable to pay his debts in full all his creditors will be edtitled to share equally in his assets, men will have to be honest in dealing with their creditors, as a number of offences are provided for in the Bill for the imprisonment of the debtor, which will make fraudulent traders in great peril. One thing in particular where traders fail to keep proper books and become bankrupt they will be liable to go to jail for a term not exceeding one year and this will make it incumbent on every one to keep such books if they wish to avoid trouble.

On the other hand great injustice is now suffered by honest but unfortunate men who fail in business and who are never able again to hold up their heads because they have unsatisfied debts which cannot be paid by them and they have no incentive to begin over again, the discharge of such men, in their bankruptcy will give them courage to start again unfettered by the incubus of a load of debt, and the fear that the fruits of their labor will be snatched from them before they can make any headway.

So far as it goes this is a salutory change in the law that has long been wanted and Parliament has only now to pass a satisfactory divorce law to bring us in line with the other civilized nations of the world who have long since understood and provided for the necessity which these enactments are intended to satisfy.

JAS. GUISE-BAGLEY.

Yours truly,

Voice of The People

DAYLIGHT SAVING REGARDING CHURCH.

Mr. Editor,—I see by your paper last evening that the city clock was to be moved on one hour and that the majority of the city was under the new time. Now what about our church service? I think a good idea would be for some of our clergymen who are running over the limited time for preaching should have one-half of the congregation go at the old time and the other half at the new time, as some of the seats are not the choicest.

Yours,
Church Member.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: I think the most amusing game that has ever been tried since the first day of confederation has just been done by the government (if we have any) over the daylight saving scheme. While they winked at the railroads, manufacturers and the pork patrons and the ordinary dudes to go ahead, they let on they would side in with the farmer this time. They expect to have an election soon, and they don't want to say "No" to anybody (a jelly back government as it were) but the blind won't work. The old hayseeds are very much awake just now. The days of the politicians' tricks are past, as far as the farmer is concerned. There is something coming soon. You can see the shadow just around the corner now, and it is spreading faster than Bolshevism in Europe. I mean the U.F.O., and when it gets going right they will make those politicians sit up and take notice. Even G. M. Henry, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, has been calling down the U.F.O. He says it stands for "United for Office." Well, perhaps he will find they will be united for his scalp next election. If the residents of the cities wish to corral the farmers up they will have to pay more for their produce. If they can stand it, we certainly can. The play was well staged.

R. N. SCOTT,

POTATOES PROVED IDENTICAL KIND

In view of the importance attached to the Green Mountain type of potatoes as a result of that particular variety having been recommended to growers in Ontario as the best suited for the main crop in most districts, the following information provided by Justus Miller, B.S.A., assistant Commissioner of Agriculture Gazette for October 1918, will no doubt prove a source of satisfaction to many growers of varieties otherwise named but known to be similar to the Green Mountain.

At a conference of the Potato Council of Ontario held in Toronto on September 6th, the following varieties of potatoes were decided to be identical and are classed as Green Mountains:

Carman No. 1, Clyde, Gold Coin (Vermont) Delaware Deer Standard (not Deer Early Standard); Green Mountain, jr., Norcross Snow, State of Maine, Uncle Sam, Wee MacGregor. The experts present agreed that no one can distinguish between as to plant, blossom or tuber.

"So you wish to leave to get married, Mary? I hope you have given the matter a serious consideration?"

"Oh, I have, sir," was the earnest reply. "I have been to two fortune-tellers and a clairvoyant, and looked in a sign-book, and dreamed on a lock of his hair, and have been to one of those saterrologers and to a meejum, and they all tell me to go ahead, sir. I ain't one to marry reckless like, sir."

Menard Trucks

The Duffus Garage

has taken over the Agency for the MENARD HEAVY DUTY TRUCKS, which includes a full line from one up to six tons.

This truck is manufactured in Canada and there are several which have been in use for some time in the City of Peterboro and have proved beyond any doubt their splendid and most reliable service.

This truck being manufactured in Canada, is considerably lower in price than most heavy trucks on account of there being no duty to pay.

GEORGE ST. CHURCH CHOIR

At the rehearsal on Tuesday night splendid progress was made in the choruses. A friendly rivalry has developed between the ladies and men in their respective choruses, both of which are showing up splendidly. In addition to this, many fine numbers have been prepared. The following artists will take part:—Otto Gliddon, Clarinet Solo; Miss Logan, Violin Solo; Readings by Mrs. Jenne and Miss Winnifred Parker; Solos by Miss Doris Rathbone, Tom Ward, Miss Ida Lyhn, and Mrs. Renwick. A sextette for ladies' voices and two piano quartettes will also prove very interesting. A full programme will be published in Saturday's issue. The date, Tuesday, April 8th. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the choir or Ladies' Aid. Several hundred have already been sold.

CHURCH ADVERTISING

A novel, but certainly timely suggestion was made the other day in a religious paper that churches which have financial budgets and include in them an item for printing and stationery should be set apart a certain sum of money for advertising, just as it does for Foreign Missions. It was urged that the work of the congregation would be decidedly helped by the spending of a definite sum on this object. The writer maintained that there ought to be "a very considerable appropriation for various means of attracting attention to the church." If this advertising is only appropriately done, there is no doubt it would be of genuine service Many churches already undertake the cost of publishing a weekly calendar or bulletin, but in addition to this there might well be a window-card or a newspaper advertisement in order to let people see what the church is doing, and what it is ready to provide for those in the immediate neighborhood.

CHOIR PRACTICE.

Practice for all the members of St. John's choir will be held in the Guild room tonight at 8. Boys at 7.30. Music for Good Friday and Easter will be rehearsed.

He enlisted with the 109th Battalion in 1916, and went to France with an infantry battalion, where he saw much service. Pte. Junkin has a unique souvenir in the form of a wooden cap badge carved out by a young German prisoner.—Lindsay Post.

OBITUARY

JOANNA TORPEY.

The death occurred on the 23rd of March of Joanna Torpey, of Mount Pleasant, Mich. She leaves to mourn her loss one brother, Michael, of Mount Pleasant, Mich., and Mrs.. E. Tobin, of Stanley avenue, Peterboro. She had only been ill for a short time with pneumonia and her many friends and relations in Peterboro will be sorry to hear of her death.

JONATHAN BROWN

Jonathan Brown, formerly of this city, died in Denver, Colorado on Thursday, March 27th. He leaves, besides his wife and two children, two brothers, Fred J. of San Antonio, Texas, and William of Peterboro. The remains will be brought to Peterboro for interment. Funeral from the residence of his brother, Mr. W. Brown of Langdon street, on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

TO ADVERTISE CITY

Ald. McIntyre's Committee Would Spend $300 with Heaton's Agency.

If the council approves, the Manufacturers' Committee will spend $300 on advertisements in Heatons' publications. The committee discussed this proposal with a representative of the agency last night, and was informed that an industrial bureau will be at the disposal of the council, and will otherwise afford an advantage in placing the city in touch with industries that purpose coming to Canada or of changing their location in this country.

SALARY WILL BE ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS

BRANTFORD, April 3.— Mr. John Allan, late organist at St. Paul's church, Peterborough, has been officially appointed organist at the First Baptist church here at a salary of one thousand dollars a year.

Liquor Supplies Seized By the Local Inspector

Cases Dealt With This Morning in County Court.

Three more shipments of wet goods have been seized lately by License Inspector Joseph Stewart. A case seized at Indian River station on March 24th contained nine quart bottles of Burke's choice Irish whiskey and one bottle of "Old Tom" gin. The consignment was addressed to Mr. George Morrison, Farmer's Club, Indian River, but Mr. Morrison never turned up for his liquor. Magistrate Langley at this morning's session of the County Court was of the opinion that the name was fictitious and the liquor was forfeited to the Crown. The goods will be sent to Chief Inspector Ayheart's whole, sale at 29 Front street, Toronto.

On the same day another "crock" was seized at the Bethany station, by Mr. Stewart. This time the goods had been "tapped" before the goods arrived and only four bottles of choice three X Irish whiskey remained. The address on the case was Mr. N. W. Hood, Bethany. The goods will be sent to Toronto to be under the beneficent care of the Provincial Secretary.

Last Friday Mr. Stewart seized three gallons of alcohol at the local Canadian Express office. J. Orr was the name on the case to be sent to Lakefield. A man describing himself as John Orr came to the G.T.R. Station the day before it was seized but the goods had not yet arrived. Needless to say Mr. Orr has not turned up since. The case will be disposed of to-morrow morning in police court.

Germans Must Sign the Treaty

Government Will Probably Hang Together Until Peace is Signed

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, April 3.—If the Spartacan Leadership is not able to organize such a widespread movement, the government probably will be able to maintain its self until Peace is signed. As to the Peace Treaty the members of the Government and their publicists are announcing firmly, perhaps sincerely, that no preliminary Treaty not in accord with their interpretation of President Wilson's armistice terms will be signed, particularly if it involved the alienation of what is called purely German ter-

This announcement probably is correct so far as the cession of the Haar District, the political alienation of the west Rhine bank outside of Alsace-Lorraine perhaps, the incorporation of Danzig in Poland are concerned, but the pressure of public opinion, which would not easily understand or accept any failure to obtain peace, and the desperate food situation, probably will force the Government to modify this recalcitrant attitude in case of need, and sign any terms of peace presented by the Allies except those, mentioned above.

MARRIED MEN RICHER THAN BACHELOR SOLDIERS

LONDON, April 3.—Nearly two years ago a private bank was established at the Canadian discharge depot at Buxton for the transfer of money belonging to Canadians passing through the depot, the idea being to safeguard the men against theft and idle expenditure.

Over $65,000 have been transferred to Canada in this way. A notable fact in this connection is that married men seem to have much more money to transfer than bachelors, although it must be remembered that deferred pay of single men is held until discharge.

REINFORCEMENTS ARE ON THE WAY.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, April 3. — The situation in the Murmanak region of northern Russia is giving the British military authorities considerable anxiety.

Announcement was made to-day that British reinforcements will follow immediately the American troops now on the way to North Russia.

NAVIGATION OPENS.

SARNIA, April 1. — Navigation opened on Sunday between Detroit and up-river ports. As a result of the action of the city in assessing the company $600 it is not likely the White Star Line boats will stop at this port this season unless some satisfactory arrangement is reached between the company and the city. The S. S. Wauketa passed up the river to Port Huron without calling at Sarnia on Sunday afternoon.

Getting Too Fat? Try This--Reduce

People who don't grow too fat are the fortunate exception. But if you find the fat accumulating or already cumbersome, you will be wise to follow this suggestion, which is endorsed by thousands of people who know. Ask your druggist (or if you prefer write to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.) for a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets. 75c. is the price the world over. By doing this you will be safe from harmful drugs and be able to reduce two, three or four pounds a week without dieting or exercise.

SHAVE YOURSELF SHOP.

CLEVELAND.—Cleveland has a "shave yourself" barber shop.

Eight cents is the charge made for a razor and the necessary accessories. The shop is located in the basement of a building.

"Yes, we do quite a bit of business with men who prefer to shave themselves," an employee of the shop said. 'Most of them have difficulty in keeping old fashioned razors sharp, or do not like the new fangled safety razors.'

MRS. NEWALL ON VERGE OF DESPAIR

Oshawa Woman Says She is Feeling Fine After Taking Tanlac.

"Tanlac was the only thing that gave me any relief, and I am convinced that it is the right medicine for people in the condition I was in," said Mrs. Elizabeth Newhall of Oshawa, Ont., recently.

"I had been in a general run-down condition for over a year," she continued, "was extremely nervous, had no strength nor energy and the least little exertion would so exhaust me that I would feel real faint, I ached all over and felt half dead all the time. I had no appetite and would skip meal after meal. Nervous, blinding headaches would almost drive me distracted; my nerves were shattered so that the least little thing would upset me and I'd get up in the morning feeling so miserable I could hardly keep on my feet.

"After taking Tanlac a few days I began to feel better. My appetite is now splendid and nothing I eat hurts me at all. Those terrible headaches are all gone. I have more life and energy and my work is a real pleasure to me.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Ware Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Voice of the People

WORTH THINKING OVER, GIRLS.

A wise French woman, writing to Ruskin at the time when France mourned the wreck of her prosperity, said:

It is the share, the sad and the large share that French society and its recent habits of luxury of expense, of dress, of indulgence in every kind of extravagant dissipation has to lay at its own door in its actual crisis of misery, ruin and humiliation.

Deeply and fearfully impressed by what my own country has incurred and is suffering, I cannot help feeling sorrowful when I see in England signs of our besetting sins appearing also paint and slang and the reading of doubtful moral novels are in themselves small offences, yet they are quick and tempting conveyances on a very dangerous highroad. I would that all English women knew how they are looked up to from abroad. What a high opinion, what honour and reverence we foreigners have for their principles, their truthfulness. The fresh and pure innocence of their daughters, the healthy youthfulness of their lovely children.

Far be it from me to preach the contempt of all that can make life lovable and wholesomely pleasant. I love nothing better than to see a woman nice, neat, elegant, looking the best in the prettiest dress that her taste and purse can afford, or your bright, fresh girls fearlessly and perfectly sitting on their horses or adorning their houses as pretty as care and trouble and refinement can make them.

It is the degree beyond that which to us has proved fatal. And that would our example could warn you.

Dainty Ankles and Hot Baths Start Court Action For Divorce

Physician's Wife Declares Husband Was Too Friendly With Actress Patient.

NEW YORK, April 4. —That short dresses permitting the display of dainty ankles and "nice hot baths with alcohol rubs," were contributing factors in winning the affection of Dr. John E. O'Connell, a physician, of No. 4413 West 146th street, is the declaration of his wife, Mrs. Edna G. O'Connell, who, in suing for a divorce, asked the Appellat Division to grant her alimony pending trial of her action.

After Mrs. O'Connell and Mrs. Nellie Jarvis, the physician's housekeeper, presented affidavits tending to establish the mutual interest which existed between Dr. O'Connell and Miss Daisy ("Mitzi") Daniels, an actress, the court award the plaintiff an allowance of $20 a week and counsel fees of $250.

Mrs. Jarvis told of a conversation she had with the physician on December 30 last, when he is alleged to have admitted spending several hundred dollars on the actress for Christmas presents in addition to buying her lingeries. "He told me that he had been with 'Mitzi' to the dressmaker's getting her dress shortened— that the dressmaker wanted it longer, but that he wanted it shorter because he wanted to see 'Mitzie's' ankles, as she had something worth showing."

On January 19 last the physician's mother was visiting him, asserted the housekeeper. Dr. O'Connell introduced the subject saying: "Mitzi is giving me a bath two or three times a week—a nice hot bath, and also an alcohol rub. I am getting more attention now than I ever had before."

Mrs. Jarvis next related a "raid" upon an apartment on Sherman avenue, maintained by the actress. She said "Mitzi," who wore a bath robe when the raiding party entered, exclaimed: "Oh, don't, don't come into my house like this. What does this mean? The actress thereupon fled into an adjoining room. In one of the rooms was Dr. O'Connell, said the witness.

Dr. O'Connell entered a categorical denial to his wife's allegations, and explained his acquaintance with the actress by declaring he had attended her parents professionally for many years. He said he had known 'Mitzi' and her sister Dorothy, with whom she lived, ever since they were nine years old. His mother, Mrs. Annie O'Connell, vouched for the respectability of the actress and denied there had been a discussion of "hot baths." Miss Dorothy Daniels said she and her sister were together when the raid was made. She asserted that the relations between Dr. O'Connell and the actress were always proper.

1100 PER CENT. JUMP IN THE ILLICIT STILLS

When discussion in the House turned to vote of $532,000 to provide for the salaries of officers and inspectors of excise. Dr Reid informed the committee that since prohibition came into force the seizure of illicit stills throughout the Dominion had increased 1,100 per cent. The number of illicit stills seized last year, he said, was ten, but this year it had grown to over 100.

Asked for a list of the seizures by provinces, he read the following: Ontario, 37; Quebec, 25; New Brunswick, 1; Nova Scotia, 3; Manitoba, 6; Alberta, 13; Moose Jaw, 7; Vancouver, 11 and Victoria, 2.

OVERHEATED PEOPLE SUFFER.

Dr. Truby King of New Zealand is recognized as one of the greatest of child-welfare experts in the world, for it is he who brought the child death rate in New Zealand down to the lowest known—forty-eight in the thousand. In this country it is double that or more.

Dr. King's recipe for reducing the death rate among children is so simple that it is likely to be neglected. It is fresh air and simple nourishment.

When Dr. King came to this country, he happened upon a huge, lavishly painted war sign asking the people as a war measure to keep the temperature of their homes and places of business down to seventy degrees Fahrenheit. He snorted at it.

"You cannot grow roses in a hot-house, and then set them out in the snow and expect them to live," said the doctor. "Everybody knows or should know that sixty-six is the maximum temperature consistent with good health and the highest mental efficiency."

As to open-air schools and cool school rooms, there can be no two right opinions. When it comes to the home, the trouble as a rule is due to the different ways of dressing of the inhabiters of the same house. The men will be clothed in thick underwear and heavy clothes—possibly the children, too—while the woman and girls may have very light underwear, low cut dresses and little on their arms. The result is that the men are breathless and dripping with perspiration, while the women complain of the cold and start up the heating plant till the temperature is better than seventy.

Until the clothing of the sexes is better equalized, the heating of the home will remain a matter for discussion and one depending upon the whims or feelings of the various persons in it. If the temperature of the house should be kept at sixty-eight say, and all concerned made to dress to this temperature, one source of discord and ill health in the home would be removed. We stand for seventy!

Open-air schools, wherever employed, have been found invariably to improve the health of the pupils. Usually only the physical "sub-normals" get the open air treatment, though the others would benefit equally from similar treatment. And the cooler and well aired home would be a much happier one. But it is very hard to convince people as to the simple things. Habits of living are not easily changed.—Medicine Hat News.

EXHIBITIONS ON SUNDAYS.

An exhibition of pictures from the National Galleries was open on Sundays recently at Toronto. Now there is a wonderfully interesting display of pictures by Canadian artists there which is free to the public on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and which the Council of the Museum would gladly open free on Sunday, but the Lord's Day Alliance takes upon itself to be the law of the land, and says "No." It considers that doing so might lead to sales — though, of course, no sales would be allowed on Sunday, and even catalogues would not be sold!

It is an exasperating and ridiculous state of affairs, and we should very much like to know the names of the people who are answerable for it. It is very likely that they are the same busy-bodies who tried to prevent milk being sold in Toronto on Sundays some time ago, without the slightest regard to the needs of the children. Those people should take notice of the fact that Canadians are fast getting tired of their officious and offensive meddling with their necessities, harmless pleasures and innocent recreations on Sundays.

The question of these art exhibitions, however, opens up a broader one which both the Lord's Day Alliance and the churches should take into serious consideration. The London Times states that one legacy, which the war is likely to leave is a much wider indulgence in Sunday athletics. Sunday baseball matches on public grounds became a popular feature in London when American troops began to arrive. Now there are tennis matches between Manchester and Queen's Club played on Sunday.

As demobilization of the armies proceeds and more men come home from France the demand for Sunday games will increase. That, at any rate, is the belief of many officers, and it is shared by chaplains who have been at the front. Sunday has been the regular day for football matches among the troops, and English clergy have not only refereed the games, but have taken in them as players with downright good will and enthusiasm. Thousands of men who are now coming out of the army are finding Sunday dull at home. They have learned that attendance at church service in the morning, has fitted in very well with football in the afternoon, and perhaps a "sing-song" in the evening, and some of them are not inclined to return to a programme which might or might no include attendance at a place of worship, but otherwise consisted of eating, sleeping, and loafing about.

The Times states that Sunday play, of course, has been general in certain games for years, and is on the increase. It is common knowledge that the golf courses around London are more crowded on Sunday than on any other day of the week. Tennis on private lawns, too, is played in every suburb. About the many marshes north and east of London there is whippet racing on Sundays. The question now being asked in Great Britain is whether Sunday sports are to be put on a proper footing, and what attitude will the churches take towards any movement to enable the young men who wish to do so to take part in games or to watch others play them. British labor opinion favors rational recreation on Sunday, if it does not involve a seven-days' working week for anyone engaged in providing the recreation. The same question must be answered in Canada.—Kingston Standard.

What a Vessel Costs.

Although actual figures, for obvious reasons, are not available, one would be underestimating rather than over-estimating the cost of the German submarine U-29, which the British Admiralty reports to have been sunk, at £200,000, says the London Times. This total is based on the fact that, according to a certain official publication, the E-4 of our submarine fleet, which was completed in 1913, cost £107,791; and the E class is neither the largest nor the most expensive type of submarine in the fleet to-day.

According to the Admiralty statement, the cost of the "hull, fittings and equipment" of the E-4 was £26,787, £79,105 being spent on her propelling and other machinery. In addition to this outlay there was an item of £1,899 for "incidental charges," which relate to the proportionate costs incurred while the vessel was in the hands of the dockyard authorities being finished off.

Very Likely.

"But why did he marry?"

"So as to have some one to help him live within his income. He couldn't do it alone."

Shells for Glass.

One curious thing noted in the Philippines was the use by natives of sesahells in lieu of window glass. There is a bivalve mollusk, native to the waters of that part of the world, which has a shell seven or eight inches in diameter, so thin as to be translucent. It is plentiful and costs nothing. Glass is expensive.

SPRING CLEANING DANGERS

Every housekeeper knows how often little injuries are met with during "spring cleaning" time and how easily the sore place becomes infected with dust and germs. The danger of this lies in the fact that injuries—slight at first, if not attended to, may become inflamed, fester, cause great suffering and inconvenience, and frequently lead to blood-poisoning.

To safeguard yourself, apply Zam-Buk at once to all cuts, scratches, abrasions, burns and scalds. This antiseptic balm immediately destroys all germs and prevents any danger of festering or blood-poisoning. Zam-Buk also ends pain and stops bleeding so quickly that no time need be lost by those who apply it as soon as an injury is sustained. Then the healing essences in Zam-Buk actually grow new skin, so that in a comparatively short time the wound is completely healed.

Zam-Buk is best for eczema, boils, pimples, rashes, ulcers and piles. All dealers, 50c. box.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Neuritis.

Neuritis, which is inflammation of a nerve, may be either acute or chronic, and sometimes an acute attack passes into a chronic form. The chief symptom of neuritis is pain in the affected nerve. Sometimes the patient describes the pain as "burning," sometimes as "shooting" or "darting" and sometimes as "boring." Movement makes it worse, and it is generally more severe at night. Cases that can be traced to some slight injury are likely to get well, but a chronic case may persist for many months. When neuritis is the result of a direct injury to a nerve surgical treatment may be necessary. If the nerve has been divided by a wound it must be brought together and sutured. If it is pinched or compressed by a tumor or an abscess or a piece of fractured bone it can be relieved only by surgery. In all cases the treatment of neuritis must include great care for the general health, absolute rest for the affected part and relief for the wearing pain. Sometimes the sick nerve can be kept at rest by a bandage or a sling. If it cannot be helped in that way the patient may have to go to bed. Massage is not advisable while the inflammation is high, but is often of service in the later stages of the trouble.

Making the Chances Even.

In days when tavern brawls in England were frequent and swords were out on the slightest provocation common fairness demanded that the blades of chance combatants should be of equal length. In a sudden affray there would be no thought of measuring swords, so the authorities took the matter into their own hands at the gates of the city of London, where every gallant was liable to be challenged, and if the public official found any blade beyond thirty-six inches the smith stood by to snap off the steel to the required length. In Queen Elizabeth's reign this was the common practice.

LOOK TO THE FUTURE

Present prices of many of our leading Canadian industrial stocks are at very attractive levels.

Judicious investments should be made now.

MAY HARNESS TIDES.

Some Possibilities Seen in the Bay of Fundy.

With the return of peace it is probable that there will be a resumption of the attempt to harness the tides at Cape Split on the Minas Channel, a branch of the Bay of Fundy, where it is estimated there can be made available 33,000,000 kilowatt hours per annum. The project was first undertaken several years ago by Dr. George B. Cutten, a graduate of Yale University, and who is president of Acadia College, Wolfville, Nova Scotia, and Prof. R. P. Clarkson, an American professor of engineering at Acadia, it has been endorsed, both from the engineering and commercial standpoints, by a New York firm of consulting engineers, whose representatives were on the ground for some four months.

At the base of Cape Split the tide runs with remarkable rapidity and for the greater part of the year the rise is from 35 to 45 feet. The method to be employed in harnessing this tidal race is the utilization of the current motor invented by Prof Clarkson, which was tested on the Conestoga river last year by Prof. C. M. Allen, chairman of the Waterwheel Testing Committee of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. The motors are to be installed first between the bluff at Cape Split and a natural rock pier which rises from the water 400 feet or so from shore.

"The motors which can thus be first installed," the engineers report, "will give an amount of primary power sufficient to afford, for the first development, a delivery at the switchboard in the power house of electrical current of 5,000 electrical horsepower continuous 24-hour power, or such other distribution of this power as the market demand may require." On the top of the bluff a large reservoir is to be made and water elevated to it by the power from the current motors. At the foot of the bluff a power house will be built on the shore of the bay, equipped with hydraulic turbines actuated by water brought from the reservoir by penstocks. The head will be 325 feet.

Teaching Canadian History.

The Government of British Columbia is considering a measure providing for the appointment of official school trustees in alien communities. The object is to remove and prevent a number of unpleasant situations that have arisen in the past where, in certain localities, the teaching of Canadian history has been openly objected to by the foreign elements of the community. Where the teachers have objected to this attitude they have often been compelled to resign through the weight of public opinion. The new bill, by clothing the official school trustees with the authority of a board of school trustees in municipalities, will obviate the hounding of teachers out of office in alien communities.

A Long Trip!

Speaking of British errors about British overseas Dominions, we may mention one recently quoted in London Punch as coming from an English provincial paper: "For some days Private Theo pushed a 150-pound cart through the snows which covered the vast stretch between London (Ontario) and Canada."

What He Wanted.

"Are you looking for a permanent investment." "Not too permanent." "Huh?" "I don't want to put my money in unless there's a chance to get it out!"

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Neuralgia of the Ear.

Recurrent neuralgia of the ear should be treated by suitable constitutional remedies. To relieve pain nothing will prove more effective than heat, a hot water bag, hot brick, hot hop bag or bran being perhaps the most desirable methods of applying it. Moist heat in the form of a poultice is no more effectual than dry heat.

An ordinary hypodermic tablet of morphine and atropine, if dissolved in a little warm water and poured into the ear, although somewhat tardy in action, is generally adequate to relieve the pain. It is a good rule never to drop into the ear a larger dose of any active poison than could be safely taken into the stomach. Of all the local anodynes for earache, personal preference is for cocaine. If a 10 per cent ointment of cocaine is smeared thickly upon the drumhead it generally suffices to relieve tympanic neuralgia. These remedies must, however, only be taken under the supervision of a doctor.

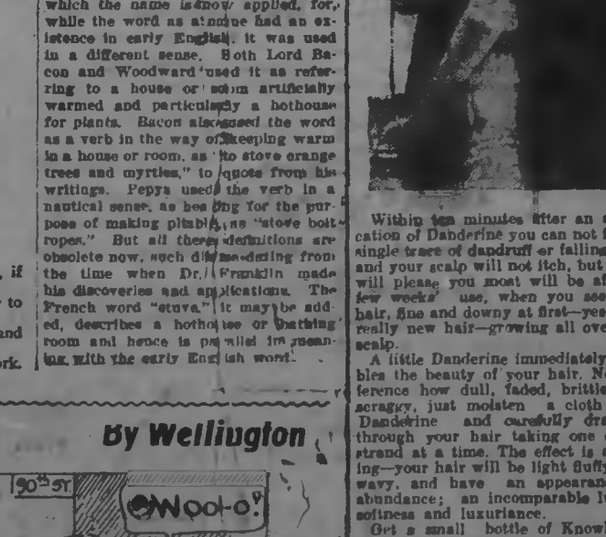
DOMINION CRYSTAL

The Only Sugar that is Canadian from the ground up

A LARGE part of the output of our three refineries is obtained from raw cane sugar—but our pride is in that increasing proportion of our output which is made from Canadian Sugar beets.

Thousands of Canadian women have used this sugar, but many of them without realizing it.

The war did much to bring about a realization of the superiority of this truly Canadian product. When supplies of raw cane sugar were at a low ebb in Canada the Canadian housewife still had sugar for her table and for her kitchen. On inquiry she learned that this sugar which "saved the day" was sugar refined from Canadian beets—Dominion Crystal Sugar. It was found to be all that sugar should be, and, accordingly, Canadian women who used it in war-time promptly adopted an attitude of extreme friendliness toward it and pride in its use. It is indeed a matter of pride that we have the ability to produce our own strictly Canadian sugar from our own Canadian-grown beets.



Try a 20-Pound Bag

Most grocers have Dominion Crystal Sugar in 20-pound bags as well as in barrels. They take pride in selling this superior Canadian product. Ask your grocer for it.

For a copy of our interesting booklet, "Sugar—From Beet to Bowl," write us direct. The book is free to anyone who asks for it.

DRASTIC IMMIGRATION LAW FRAMED BY U.S. BUREAU

BOSTON, Mass., April 3.—A. Warner Parker, law officer of the United States Bureau of Immigration at Washington, announced here that the Bureau of Immigration had drafted a tentative immigration law which would contain several radical provisions regarding the admission and stay of aliens in the United States.

Speaking before the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Parker said that three main features were included in the proposed new immigration law. These were registration of all aliens now in the United States or who are to apply for admission hereafter, making the admission of immigrants provisional or probationary during their stay in this country and changing the burden of proof of requirements for admission so that it will be incumbent on aliens to prove their fitness for admission rather than upon the government to prove their unfitness, as at present.

If You Saw Wood Each Day You Won't Need Cascarets

Great medicine,—the Sawbuck.

Two hours a day sawing wood will keep anyone's Bowels regular.

No need of pills, Cathartics, Castor Oil nor "Physic," if you'll only work the Sawbuck regularly.

Exercise is Nature's Cure for Constipation and,—Ten-Mile walk will do, if you haven't got a wood pile.

But, if you will take your exercise in an Easy Chair, there's only one way to do that, and make a Success of it.

Because,—there's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowels and its name is "CASCARETS."

Old Italian Pantomime.

If we can believe a traveler's tale the pantomimes in Italy of the seventeenth century exceeded even present day productions in strange stage effects. An anonymous writer quoted in "Broadbent's History of Pantomime" describes a piece called "Nerona Infante," produced in Rome at the Theatre Capranio in 1608, in which was exhibited the interior of hell. "The stage opened," says the chronicler, "and discovered a scene underneath representing the river of Lethe full of infernal spirits spitting fire while Charon's boat made its way across. Upon landing a prodigious monster appeared whose mouth nearly covered the whole of the stage and emitted a number of monstrous snakes. The monster moved toward the audience, who shrieked with horror, but in a moment it was transformed into a multitude of broad white butterflies, which flew into the pit so low that some touched the spectators' heads. At the same time the scene changed into a beautiful garden."—London Chronicle.

Meanings of the Word "Stove."

The word "stove" as applied to a heater for a room seems to be of about the same age as the article to which the name is now applied, for, while the word as a noun had an existence in early English, it was used in a different sense. Both Lord Bacon and Woodward used it as referring to a house or room artificially warmed and particularly a hothouse for plants. Bacon also used the word as a verb in the way of keeping warm in a house or room, as "to stove orange trees and myrtles," to quote from his writings. Pepys used the verb in a nautical sense, as being for the purpose of making pitch, as "stove boltropes." But all these definitions are obsolete now, such discarding from the time when Dr. Franklin made his discoveries and applications. The French word "etuve," it may be added, describes a hothouse or bathing room and hence is parallel in meaning with the early English word.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

Former Soldiers Can't Get Kind of Boots They Want

British Fighters Complain They Cannot Get Kind of Boots They Want From British Shopkeepers.

One of the most "burning" questions (the adjective has to be taken literally) of after-war reconstruction in England seems to be the transition from military to civilian footwear.

"Private enterprise vaunts itself loudly to be superior to the methods of public service, and army administration is often called in as whipping-boy when the latter seeks for an excuse," "The Manchester Guardian" says.

"But it is in one's dealing with tradesmen for the necessaries of life (writes one who has recently been demobilized) that the occasional yearning to be back in the service grows most insistent. Why, to take one's present grievance, should shopkeepers sell boots of almost every conceivable shape except the shape of the human foot? It is not so in the army.

"There, whether they were 'ration' boots or boots bought in a military canteen, one never had any difficulty in obtaining a perfect fit; and though one foot-slogged it in the infantry, in desert sand up to the ankles, in Flanders mud or on the hard pave of France, foot comfort was, with moderate care, the rule rather than the exception. Yet, having a short and rather wide foot, one comes home to the still persistent dilemma of the boot shop—either a boot that pinches or one nearly two inches too long.

"If one could admire the shape of these shop boots one might be reconciled, aesthetically. But they would still be unnatural, and the more so since all experience in the army goes to show that the short, wide foot, taking what the quartermaster's clerk calls a 'sevens-sixes,' is not an exceptional foot at all, but almost the normal of feet.

"Army boots are all one shape, and strangely enough it is very like the shape of a foot. Two figures denote their measurements, the first describing length or 'size' and the second width or 'fitting.' When a company has needed boots badly for some weeks a large box full of assorted sizes will arrive. And those that no one can do with go back to be changed. The trying on is a serious business, requiring the close attention of an officer. I have seen hundreds of boots sent back, but scarcely ever a pair of fives or sixes 'fittings.' In the army certainly five men out of ten, and probably six or seven, take these wide boots. Yet in Market Street a 'sevens-sixes' can scarcely be discovered."

God our Heavenly Father. Gen. 1, 1, 27; Psalm 103:1-14. Matthew 6:24-34.

Golden Text: Our Father who art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. —Matt. 6:9.

1. Gen. 1:1, 27. There is evidence in abundance that man has not always existed on the earth; what part of it can you give?

2. What evidence is there that the earth has not always existed?

3. If the earth and all that is in it, began to be, what cause would be adequate to bringing it into being?

4. Gen. 1:1, 27. Why would you say that the egg was made before the chicken or the chicken before the egg?

5. Which would require the greater power, wisdom and forethought, to make a man complete all at once, or to make a living germ from which a man would evolve by countless stages, say in a million years?

6. Whose son would man necessarily be no matter by what process he was created?

7. Psalm 103: 1-14. How does a duck know that it was meant to swim?

8. How does a man know that God is his father?

9. The desire man has for a mate presupposes a woman; hunger presupposes food; wings presuppose air; why then does not the universal hunger of the human heart for God prove that God is?

10. If there is no Almighty Father, how do you account for the phenomena of the heart so wonderously depicted in the one hundred and third Psalm?

11. Ps. 103:1-14. What is the certain proof that food satisfies and nourishes the body, and what is the infallible proof that God is and that He fills our hearts with gladness? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

12. Matt. 6:24. Why is it that no man can enjoy God as his father who is doing the work of the devil?

13. When a man depends upon money for his chief joy, why can he not also enjoy God?

14. Matt. 6:25-27. Why is our temporal welfare assured if, with heart restfulness we depend wholly upon the Heavenly Father?

15. What are the natural effects of anxious care upon a man's ability to make proper provision for the future, and upon his own peace of mind, and those nearest to him?

16. Why is restful dependence upon God an impossibility while we are filled with anxious care about temporal things?

17. Matt. 6:28-31. In considering the beauty of the lilies and their freedom from toil, what lessons may we learn in perfect trust in our Heavenly Father, for raiment?

18. What is the effect of perfect trust in the Heavenly Father upon our habits of industry and self-help?

19. Verse 32. What is the fundamental difference between a saint and a sinner?

20. Verses 33, 34. What reason can you give for the accuracy of the statement of Jesus that if we make the kingdoms of God our first care, that all our temporal wants will thereby be provided?

Japan is Sending Another Division Over to Siberia

War Minister Shows Strength of Troops Already Sent Through Vladivostok.

TOKIO, March 29.—The early mobilization of a new division of Japanese troops for service in Siberia was announced by the Minister of War when he was interpellated by the Japanese Diet.

He declared that Japan is bound to fight the Bolshevik or any peoples who may attempt to disturb the peace of the Far East and who employ arms for this purpose.

The Minister of War disclosed for the first time publicly here that Japan has despatched a force to Siberia double in number that previously announced. He said 150,000 troops had been sent there by Japan, but that later one-third of them were withdrawn, thus leaving 100,000 Japanese troops in Siberia at the present time.

The agreement entered into between the Allies and Japan called for 7,000 Japanese troops for the Siberian campaign.

The Minister of War disclosed that instead of sending 7,000 officers and men Japan actually sent three divisions of infantry and 74,000 officers and men of the artillery and special contingents.

It was announced here that an enemy force 2,000 strong attacked a small unit of Japanese troops on March 15 and severe fighting ensued. Enemy casualties amounted to 200. Japanese losses were slight.

East Peterboro Member Speaks on Budget in House

Interesting Topics Dealt With by Mr. James Thompson—The Temperance and Statute Labour Issues.

(Havelock Standard)

One of the most acceptable contributions to the recent budget debate in the Legislature was the speech made by Mr. James Thompson of East Peterborough. He took issue vigorously with the remarks of the member for South Wellington (Mr. Carter) who had dealt the temperance cause in Ontario an injury which would prove a delight to the liquor people. Mr. Carter had sought to discredit the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act, instead of upholding the Government in its efforts to give honest, fair and intelligent administration to what was admittedly a war measure and at best a most difficult law to have observed.

"As a consistent temperance man," said Mr. Thompson, "if these conditions were general, I would feel it my duty to vote against the Ontario Temperance Act. I have had the privilege of visiting nearly every city, town and hamlet in Ontario, and I can say from my own knowledge that the conditions described by the member are untrue as they effect the Province as a whole."

Proceeding, Mr. Thompson said he was glad to be able to congratulate the Government on its continued program of advanced legislation. He believed the housing bill, which was about to become law, would bring about a great improvement in the social conditions of the wage earners. He differed with the statement of the member, for North Oxford (Mr. Calder) who said that the bill would not benefit the returned soldiers or the labor men. Mr. Thompson said he had during his experience considerable to do with the construction of homes for laboring men, and he would like to take time to show just what benefit would follow to the man who purchases his home on the small payment plan.

Government's Plan.

A house that sells for $3,50 costs about $4,750 including land. The contractor must raise say $1,500 and take a second mortgage for the balance, which brings the net cost up to $3,050 to which would have to be added 10 per cent. profit. The Government's plan will eliminate the item of profit, provide the worker with a good house on a small initial payment and enable him to retire the debt gradually and have a home in which he can take pride.

Commenting on the good roads programme, Mr. Thompson said that the Government had acted wisely in withholding construction until there was a demand for work. Peterboro' county would benefit largely from the good roads scheme. So far as the provincial highways were concerned, the Province should be a unit on the policy, but he did not think they should hinder the construction of the county road systems. He was disappointed at the indifferent attitude of the Leader of the Opposition toward provincial highways. In contrast with that position Mr. Thompson showed that the state of Illinois last year voted $60,000,000 to be raised for good roads by way of a bond issue. It carried thirty to one in the cities and towns and sixty to one in the country districts, and in addition there was a state appropriation of $25,000,000 for the same purpose.

Mr. Thompson said that while he would not suggest to the Government to abolish statute labor, he believed that the Government should encourage an educational campaign showing the results accomplished by township which had voluntarily abolished statute labor. Very satisfactory results had been obtained by the township of North Monaghan in Peterboro County under the leadership of our present warden, Mr. John McIntosh. Monaghan township was induced to abolish statute labor some years ago and a complete accurate record was kept of the work done during the last year under the old system and the first year under the new. Statute labor was commuted at the remarkably low figure of 50c per day, and yet over four times as much work was done as during the previous year. The last year of statute labor 665 loads of gravel were placed on the township roads and 2 miles of grading was done. The following year under competent foreman, 2033 yards of gravel were placed on the roads and 8 3-4 miles were graded. Like results could be obtained in other townships and millions of dollars saved annually

Pure Bred Stock.

Mr. Thompson dealt at some length with the Agriculture Department during the past ten years, claiming that pure bred stock had increased over 400 per cent. and to a farmer near Norwood belonged the honor of producing the first three-year-old Holstein in all America to produce over 20,000 pounds of milk in one year, and during 1915 a member of this same herd milked over 29,000 pounds, breaking the Canadian record A daughter of this cow recently sold for $4400 and her baby sister of 5 months brought $2,900. Members of other herds in Peterboro County have broken records, one Holstein in Douro township produced 1057 lbs. of butter in one year. These are examples of what our up-to-date farmers in Peterboro are doing. They know what it cost to produce a pound or milk or a pound of pork. Mr. Thompson did not agree with the pessimists who believed it necessary to send a Commission throughout Ontario to find out why the farmers are selling their farms. A number of them are induced to part with their land at an advance of from 20 to 50 per cent. over the original cost. Others are selling because they think prices have reached the highest point and that they will repurchase at a lower price; Mr. Thompson thought they would be disappointed as agricultural property was bound to continue in value, and with over 800 young men attending the short courses in Agriculture being held this winter by our agricultural representatives, and over 100,000 of our boys and girls studying agriculture in our public schools, we can look forward with confidence that Ontario will continue to produce half the wealth of the whole Dominion.

HALIFAX AND BOSTON

TWO HISTORIC CITIES CLOSELY CONNECTED.

Loyal and Intellectual Element From Massachusetts Driven by Persecution and Hate to Take Refuge In Capital of Nova Scotia—A Few Glimpses of the Distant Past.

IT must interest Canadians to know that down in Boston, the centre of culture in the United States, they regard the city of Halifax, in Canada, as a sort of foster son. It is true that the closest kinds of historic ties bind together the Anglo-Saxon inhabitants of the two cities. It was in the time of the Massachusetts governor, William Shirley, without question the strongest personality among English-born governors of Massachusetts that ever guided the early destinies of the Bay State, that the town of Halifax came to be. The ambition of Shirley to destroy completely the still active power of France on the American Continent had been raised to a high pitch by the almost incredible success of his New England volunteer troops in the capture of the French stronghold in Cape Breton, the great fortress of Louisburg, and there can be not the least shadow of doubt that immediately after that famous exploit he urged with vigor the establishment on the wonderful Nova Scotia harbor known as Chebucto Bay of a town so largely colonised and strongly fortified that in the event of any further trouble from the French on the eastern Atlantic seaboard Britain would have a sufficient base of operations for whatever military enterprise she might need to set on foot. It has always been a tradition in Nova Scotia that the suggestion for founding Halifax came from Massachusetts, and with little question the plan was talked over time and time again between Shirley and his councillors in their formal deliberations in the Boston State House. The printed correspondence of Shirley that appeared under the editorship of Dr. Charles Henry Lincoln, in 1912, does not distinctly reveal the fact of the Boston origin of the scheme, but it does show the persistent activity of Shirley in all matters relating to the destruction of French power in eastern America, not the least urgent of which was the employment of every necessary means to establish British authority firmly in the Nova Scotia peninsula and the islands adjoining thereto.

By 1747 the British ministry was evidently firmly convinced that a town must be founded on the peninsula and a civil government established there to take the place of the military government that had for well on to forty years exercised control over the province from the ancient town and fort of Annapolis Royal, and Shirley was asked to outline a plan of government. In response the Massachusetts governor and commander-in-chief of British troops in America proposed a charter government, but for some reason his plan was not accepted. Early in 1749, however, the scheme for a settlement at Chebucto was matured, and as leader of the enterprise Col. Edward Cornwallis, uncle of Charles Cornwallis, so well known in the American Revolution, was fixed upon. In pursuance of the ministry's plan, in March, 1749, the Lords of Trade published in the London Gazette an advertisement calling for volunteers for the new colony.

To the Government's proclamation so large a number of people responded, not only soldiers and sailors retired from active service, who were especially considered in the scheme, but mechanics of various sorts and farmers, that early in the following May, a fleet, consisting of thirteen transports and a sloop of war, carrying in all 2,576 persons, set sail for Chebucto. Of the intending settlers, two were majors in the army, one a foot major and commissary, six were captains, nineteen lieutenants, and three ensigns. Of retired naval officers there was a considerable number, chiefly, however, of low rank, while surgeons, surgeons' mates, governor's clerks, a brewer, an attorney, a clergyman, a schoolmaster, and several "gentlemen" are found on the ship's lists. In the subsequent history of the settlement astonishingly few of these British colonists became at all prominent; they were a mixed lot, and taken altogether were poor material on which to build an orderly and prosperous colony. A few, of them who were men of good family in England and Ireland, did attain positions of high respectability and influence, the chief of these being Richard Bulkeley, Alexander Callender, John Collier, John Creighton, Robert Ewer, John Galland, Archibald Hinchelwood, William Nesbitt, and Lewis Piers. In the wake of the British came a large number of continentals — Germans and French Swiss,—but these for the most part in a short time left Halifax for the town of Lunenburg, farther west on the Nova Scotia shore.

Of such an enterprise as the founding of Halifax, the possibility, of which, as has been said, had undoubtedly commonly been discussed in Boston, it could not be expected that enterprising Boston merchants and other young men eager for new opportunities for mercantile and military advancement would be mere passive spectators. In fact, until the time just before the Cornwallis Company came, when, by one of the strangest acts of statesmanship ever perpetrated by Britain before the Revolution in reference to this continent, Louisburg, won at such remarkable odds, was restored to France, a rather large group of Bostonians were trading or occupying military or civil offices at the captured French town and fort, and the moment Cornwallis arrived, these New Englanders, obliged by the recent treaty with France to evacuate Louisburg, betook themselves promptly to Halifax. There they were soon joined by a group of families from the New England capital that could not have numbered less than a thousand souls, and that in a comparatively short time because of their general intelligence, and superior breeding, as well as steady enterprise and thrift, came to exert a largely controlling influence in government, commercial relations, and social life. In July, 1752, the governor had a census of the town taken, which remains to us in full, the names of settlers and the numbers of their families or households being scrupulously given.

When the judiciary of the new settlement and the province at large came to be established, the lawyer called to assume the important task and to become Nova Scotia's first chief justice was a conspicuous young Boston man. This was no other than the second son of Governor Belcher himself, who in the meantime, however, had been transferred to the governorship of New Jersey, Jonathan Belcher, the younger, whose mother was Mary Partridge of New Hampshire, was born in Boston July 23, 1710, and graduated at Harvard in 1728. After graduating he was sent by his father to study law at the Middle Temple in London, and when, in 1754, he was called to be the head of the Nova Scotia judiciary he was apparently practicing in Ireland. What local influence led the Halifax authorities to call him to the exalted position he for twenty-two years thereafter filled we have never learned, but when the invitation was given him he accepted it, and from Ireland he sailed for Boston as soon as he could. On Monday, Oct. 14, having arrived at Halifax from Boston, he was sworn a member of the council, and a week later he took the oath of office as chief justice.

In the course of Jonathan Belcher's chief justiceship of Nova Scotia occurred that tragical event, the expulsion of the Acadians from the province and the distribution of these unhappy people throughout the New England and other colonies. Five years after the expulsion, from seven to ten thousand persons, representatives of the solid old families of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, came into Nova Scotia and settled the interior parts of the province, though few of these settled in Halifax. But the great sweep of Boston influence into Halifax came with the advent of the Tories with Gen. Howe in 1776. In the course of the Revolution from thirty to thirty-five thousand Loyalists took refuge in this little Province by the Sea, and the first considerable movement of these victims of political fury and hate was the compulsory exile of themselves to Halifax of virtually the whole of the aristocracy of Boston with Gen. Howe in the month of March, 1776. The whole effective besieging force that withdrew with Howe, Lossing says, including seamen, was about eleven thousand, and the number of Massachusetts refugees about eleven hundred; through Walter Barrell, inspector-general of Boston customs, given the number as 937. In Barrell's list we find the Massachusetts lieutenant-governor, Thomas Oliver, and his servants, six persons in all, eleven members of the council and a clerk of the courts, they and their households numbering seventy-three, a group of custom house officials numbering no less than thirty-seven, they and their families aggregating 132, and 278 other men, chiefly ranked as gentlemen, with their families, all these comprising the greater number of the Bostonians who were regarded as the most prominent persons in official and social life in the town.

Sailor collars are smart.

For Colds, Catarrh or Influenza.

Do you feel weak and unequal to the work ahead of you? Do you still cough a little, or does your nose bother you? Are you pale? Is your blood thin and watery? Better put your body into shape. Build strong!

An old, reliable blood-maker and herbal tonic made from wild roots and barks, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This "nature remedy" comes in tablet or liquid form. It will build up your body, cure your cold, and protect you from disease germs which lurk everywhere. One of the active ingredients of this temperance alterative and tonic is wild cherry bark with stillingia, which is so good for the lungs and for coughs; also Oregon grape root, blood root, stone root, Queen's root, — all skillfully combined in the Medical Discovery. These roots have a direct action on the stomach, improving digestion and assimilation. These herbal extracts in the "Discovery" aid in blood-making, and are best for scrofula. By improving the blood they aid in throwing off an attack of influenza.

Catarrh should be treated, first, as a blood disease, with this alterative. Then, in addition, the nose should be washed daily with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Lowest Cost Per Mile

"I HAVE ridden my C.C.M. bicycle pretty regularly for sixteen or seventeen years," writes an enthusiast, "and it is still a good machine."

What was the cost per mile of that splendid service? Certainly far and away less than that of a cheap, inferior bicycle. The few dollars you might save on an ordinary wheel are likely to be lost over and over again in the shorter life and poorer service of such a machine. Make certain of lowest cost per mile with

C·C·M· Bicycles

Could you see the inside of the frame joints, you would find there a "fish-mouth" reinforcement of unusual length and special design that greatly increases the strength. This typical example of sincerity is found at the points of heaviest strain—always with a reserve of strength.

What has extra finish to do with service? Note the depth of brilliancy in the enamel and nickelling. C.C.M. handle bars and all bright parts are generously nickelled over a coat of copper—and copper can't rust. Years after ordinary bicycles are not fit for good company, the sparkle of your C.C.M. makes you proud of it.

All C.C.M. bicycles have the Hercules coaster brake—the only brake without a side arm. It is light, simple, powerful and effective. After coasting the clutch engages without slipping and with utmost smoothness. We back this brake with our guarantee.

Ride a C.C.M. bicycle. Ride the wheel you know is made in fullest sincerity in every seen and unseen part—the bicycle that means lowest cost per mile. There's a C.C.M. dealer close to you.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

UNDOUBTEDLY we all know innumerable people who are in no pressing need of a course of lectures on self help.

If we were compelled to test our advice before giving it perhaps there would not be so much of it on the free list.

Following a fad is the modern substitute for riding a hobby.

Some people always talk as if you were to blame for all their troubles and their wife's relations.

There is a personal characteristic possessed by some people that causes us to like them better the farther away they are.

There are people who do nothing so extremely well that it would be a pity to put them at anything else.

INDIRECT LIGHTING.

The New System Which Uses the Ceiling as a Diffuser.

The "indirect" system of lighting was invented about five years ago by an illuminating engineer in Chicago, who, while experimenting to find something that would diffuse light and yet keep it away from the eyes, tried turning the shades on his fixtures upside down. The effect led him to see the possibilities of using the ceiling as a diffuser of light and resulted in his working out the indirect method.

In this fixtures of a cup or bowl like shape are used, hung from the ceiling by chains or rods. The container is entirely opaque, either of metal or some metalized substance that prevents any light from coming through and forces it against the ceiling by means of powerful reflectors with which the container is lined. In some types the container has a highly glazed enamel lining which acts as a reflector. By this method the light is diffused evenly over an entire room, lighting up the corners and enabling every one in the room to see equally well.

The effect of this kind of lighting is interesting to watch. There are no puckered brows, no strained look on the faces of people who are reading or working in a room so illuminated. The eyes and nerves have involuntarily relaxed, and a feeling of well being and repose that must be experienced to be appreciated takes the place of the high strung, overwrought, nervous state induced by glaring, unshaded "direct" lights.—World's Work

Willard Has His Troubles

Terms of Contract Prevent Titleholder from Engaging in Bouts

NEW YORK, March 29.—Apparently Jess Willard is going to have considerable trouble obtaining sparring partners. Ray Archer, the champion's secretary, who was in town last week to sign several men, had to go back empty-handed. It seems that none of the men he approached cared to act as a chopping block for the big fellow.

One or two declined because of the faint hope that some day they might get a chance for the title and did not care to lose prestige by acting in such a minor roll. Others were not satisfied with the terms offered, being able to make more money boxing in the ring.

Walter Monohan to Rescue.

The sparring partner question is threatening to become a serious one as the time for the big battle approaches. As soon as Walter Monohan can obtain his discharge from the army, Willard will have the services of the man who helped condition him for his battle with Johnson and Moran, but Monohan has done no ring fighting for many years and no longer is able to extend the big fellow.

Willard has been out of the ring so long it will take plenty of hard work to round him into form again. If it is possible for him to regain his best condition, plenty of hard glove work is the only thing that will do it. Willard would be far better off if he could get into condition by taking part in several minor bouts in the ring, but since his position and his contract with Promoter Tex Rickard close that road, the only resource left to him is to hire a squad of live wire sparring partners, who can both give and take something more than mere love taps.

Must Learn Again.

Few boxers of Willard's age can withstand punishment well, particularly after being away from the ring for any length of time. The jaw muscles are the first to weaken, so that blows that mean nothing to a fighter who is used to being hammered, will jar and daze the boxer who is not hardened by constant boxing.

Up to a year or so ago Willard did considerable boxing while travelling with his circus. It was very light work, but it served to prevent him from losing his judgment of distance and his ability to block. However, it now is some time since he did any sort of glove work.

Old Time Baseball

When the Athletics Averaged Thirty-eight Runs a Game.

The present Athletics are supposed to be the strongest attacking machine ever sent to the field.

Before awarding them the laurel suppose we turn to the Athletics of 1900-1871.

In excavating into the dope George Moreland has discovered that this old machine in its 405 match games averaged 38.20 runs to the battle—that it averaged fifty runs to the game no less than eighty-nine times; that it piled up more than 100 runs on ten occasions—and that in its 405 championship games it scored 15,353 to 6,249 for its opponents.

The record of that club was 331 victories and 54 defeats. What we can't quite understand is the fifty-four defeat part of it.

But, judging from these statistics, hitting the baseball is something of a Philadelphia institution. The habit seems to have become fixed. Small wonder with such a buoyant and elastic start.—Grantland Rice in Collier's Weekly.

Charges Baseball Is A Monopoly

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 28.—William L. Marbury, a lawyer, of Baltimore, Md., charged that organized baseball is a monopoly and that professional baseball players are slaves under contracts in the opening here of a $600,000 damage action brought by the Baltimore Federal League Club against the American and National Leagues and certain officials of the defunct Federal League in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Marbury declared that organized baseball comes within the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce laws, and therefore the federal anti-trust laws, because of the fact that the teams are sent across State lines for the various games. He said that he would show during the trial that the American League and National League officials had prevented free and unrestricted interstate commerce.

The action grew out of the purchase of the Federal League by the other baseball clubs, on the ground that the Baltimore club was unable to finish its schedule. Mr. Marbury placed the injury at $300,000, and said the law provides for the payment of three times the sum.

The National Commission has handed down findings restoring Pitcher A. J. Schauer of the Minneapolis Club, and Pitcher Al. Mamaux, of the Brooklyn Club, to good standing in organized baseball.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Jack Dempsey Tells How He Will Fight Willard

Heavyweight Challenger in Condition and Expects to be Champion After July 4—Young Boxer Tells Why He Expects to Come Out on Top.

BY JACK DEMPSEY,
Heavyweight Challenger.

I expect to stop Jess Willard inside of ten rounds and take the world's championship July 4. Here are my reasons:

I have been steadily training for many months and am on edge now. Physically I am in the best of condition. I expect to weigh slightly over 200 pounds when I step into the ring.

I am going to rely to my punching ability. I expect to fight Willard at close quarters, using half-arm jolts, uppercuts and short hooks. Infighting is my strong point, and I will take advantage of it.

I have trained myself to deliver a knockout blow that travels but a few inches.

Lost in Close Work.

Willard is lost when it comes to close work. He showed this conclusively in his affair with Carl Morris, when the latter opened himself repeatedly to attack with short jolts, but Willard was utterly unable to take advantage of the fact.

I expect to keep Willard very busy from the moment I get into the ring, working both hands and using short, snappy hooks and uppercuts. I have expected to get in close, stay there and do all the fighting that is to be done. All that Willard has is a long left. Fighting close it, he is helpless.

Jess Really Too Big?

I know Willard is a big fellow, but he is really too big. He has little else than his bulk, but, as the saying goes, "the bigger they are, the harder they fall."

Willard is a strictly defensive fighter. His only object in every fight he has fought, except his championship contest, has been to let the bout go to the limit and play safe. He let Moran—a second-rater—stay the limit in his ten-round fight in 1916. In his contests with Morris, McCarty and others the bout always went the limit to a no-decision contest.

Size Means Nothing.

I am quite confident that I can take Willard's measure. His size means nothing. Fulton is a big man, too, but I beat him. If I could knock over Fulton I can knock over Willard.

There never was a man as big as either Willard or Fulton who is not a weakling.

I believe that aggression and fast action will win me the championship. I have demonstrated in every fight I have ever fought that if I could put my man to sleep I did it, and quickly. In my fights with Fred. Fulton, Carl Morris, Porky Flynn and the rest of them it took me only one, two or three rounds to rock them to sleep.

Willard Plays Safe.

Willard is not aggressive; he is slow and deliberate, and always fights on the safe side. It is true that I have not seen him fight, but I have seen him box, and I know what he can do. Without boasting, I will say that no man can go into the ring with me and stall. I always get right into the fighting from the tap of the bell and try to drop my man at the first opportunity. That is why I have always had difficulty in getting sparring partners, because the better they are the more likely I am to put them down and out.

Two Months Enough.

I expect to take no more than two months' hard training to get ready for the big bout. That is really more than I need in any case. My theatrical contract with Barney Gerard requires me to box and do considerable exercise on the stage. As I am in first-class physical shape now, I will start again training for the battle around May 1.

It has been said that I am not a clever boxer, but you don't see any marks on me. I haven't had even a nose-bleed or a black eye in my last six fights; there are no tin ears on my head, and I haven't a scar. Which is one way of saying I don't get hit much.

When the fight ends July 4 I expect to be the heavyweight champion of the world.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Mastoiditis.

Mastoiditis is a dangerous disease, and the importance of detecting it in its earliest stages must never be overlooked. Delay means a fearful operation or death. Mastoiditis is recognized by pressing the hard, ridge-like bone behind the ear. Tenderness there, especially if accompanied with a running ear, is an almost certain proof of mastoiditis. It is always wise to consult a physician when trouble starts in the ear.

GERMANS BURNED CANADIANS ALIVE

Gunner Glenfield Saw Germans Use Liquid Fire on Wounded.

Gunner W. H. Glenfield, 393 Oasington avenue, Toronto, has been three years in a German prison camp. He reached home three weeks ago. He has many stories of German cruelty to tell. One is of the murder of five wounded Canadians whom a German officer, rather than be bothered with, ordered that liquid fire be turned on them until they were cremated. "No mercy was shown to Canadian prisoners who were weak and ill from lack of food. I was often too feeble to do the heavy work put on me, and one morning when I reported sick I was pulled out of bed, whipped and left on the floor, bleeding from wounds." Gunner Glenfield is still undergoing treatment, as his nervous system was affected by his imprisonment.
He was taken prisoner the day that General Victor Williams was made a prisoner.

Lenine's Peace Proposal Contains a Time Limit

It Practically Amounts to An Ultimatum—Huns Send Delegate to Russia.

STUDY SITUATION

By Lowell Mellett.
(Copyright, 1919, by United Press.)

PARIS, April 4.—Premier Lenine's informal "peace" proposal to the Allies is virtually an ultimatum, it was learned from an authoritative source to-day.

The Russian Bolshevik leader is known to have suggested a time limit for the acceptance of his offer, beyond which he would not undertake to abstain from consideration of Chancellor Scheidemann's proposal as conveyed to Foreign Minister Trotsky. The time limit is understood to be a matter of only a few weeks. (The German government was reported unofficially recently to have sent Karl Kautsky to Russia for the purpose of studying the situation there, and possibly affecting an alliance between Germany and Russia.)

Definite Statement.

The recent statement in the House of Commons by Andrew Bonar Law, spokesman for the British government, denying the Allies have received a formal peace offer from Russia, is technically correct. The fact remains, however, that the Peace Conference has a definite statement of Russia's position bearing Lenin's signature. This is, in effect, a concrete declaration of terms of peace to which the Russian Soviet government would be willing to listen, and as such must be considered as an actual offer on Lenine's part.

William Bullitt, official agent for the American delegates, who brought the document from Russia to Paris, is not qualified to negotiate with the Allies for the Bolshevik. The proposal, however, is in the Allies' hands for them to use, or state as they see fit. Further, it is possible to assert that it has not been read with entirely lack of sympathy.

There is reason to believe that secrecy with which not only Lenine's statement, but reports of Bullitt and Lincoln Steffens, unofficial observer, are guarded, is due to a desire to keep attention focused on peace with Germany, thus avoiding discussions with possible acrimonious debate regarding Russia, which might delay the German peace programme.

Bolshevism Not Wanted in Australia

Labour Newspaper Had Its Windows Smashed.

BRISBANE, Australia, April 4.—(Canadian Press Despatch Via Reuters.)—A Labour newspaper, which applauded the carrying of a red flag by Russian demonstrators, has had its windows smashed by angry crowds. Russian shops were also damaged. All Brisbane hotels have been closed until further notice. Returned soldiers and others have passed strongly worded resolutions demanding deportation of Bolshevist Russians and sympathizers, including two Labour members of Parliament. They also urged that the State government cease its apathetic attitude towards traitors, and that the Commonwealth government abandon its tolerant attitude. Otherwise, they declare, the returned soldiers will take drastic action.

Time Has Arrived For Philippines Independence

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The time for Phillipines independence has substantially come, Secretary of War Baker to-day told the Philipino Mission here, seeking self government.

FRANK JENNE Says:

"We don't indulge in the superlative or the hyperbolic in a message about Semi-ready clothes. It's not the fashion in Anglo-Saxon commerce to swankily claim a surprising number of 'bests' and 'greatests' and 'largests' even when one is exuberantly pleased with the product offered for sale.

"The tendency to exaggerate— to strive to outdo one another in adjectival redundancy—does not persuade or convince the public. Rather does it create an antagonistic view. It grows tiresome.

"Semi-ready clothes are tailored with meticulous care to please an ever-growing clientele. The value of each garment is clearly marked in the pocket by the makers with the idea that the wearer will be a well-satisfied and regular patron. The price is the same West as East."

BRITISH DECLARE MARTIAL LAW

(United Press.)

PARIS, April 4.—The Sofia correspondent of Le Matin reported to-day that extremist Socialists in Verna attempted a Bolshevik movement. The town, he said, was immediately occupied by British troops, who declared martial law.

Varna is an important Bulgarian port on the Black Sea, two hundred and fifty miles directly east of Sofia.

Coal Price to Remain High

Retail Dealers' Association Hear Gloomy Forecast of Market Trend.

If the gloomy predictions of Mr. R. M. Yeomans, the Assistant Deputy Fuel Administrator for Ontario, should materialize in continued scarcity and high prices of coal, Peterboro's reserve of 1,200 tons or thereabouts should become decidedly useful and even attractive before the snow flies again. Addressing the Canadian Retail Coal Association in Toronto yesterday, Mr. Yeomans stated that the United States Railway bill showed a deficit of nearly one billion dollars, a debt that foreshadowed increased freight rates. The miners, too, were demanding more wages and a shorter day.

"If you could only spread the coal business over a whole year instead of over only six months, the results would be far better," he said. "It is hard, though, to persuade the working man to purchase six tons of coal in the spring. Most of them couldn't do it if they wanted to."

With regard to the bringing of coal from the west, the speaker thought that the cost of transportation would always be too great a handicap.

Canada is absolutely dependent on the United States for coal, and the Government should do something to overcome the handicap.

Would Retain License System

"The Association went on record as pronouncedly in favor of Government issue of dealers' licenses, and decided that should the Federal Government abandon the system, the Association would memorialize the Provincial Government to adopt the policy, and continue the office of Provincial Fuel Control as well, in the interests of the buying public and make it imperative that all anthracite coal coming into Ontario be subject to said license system.

On the question of impurities in coal the meeting decided that all dealers "be requested to watch carefully the percentage of impurities received and report the same to the Secretary of this Association, as well as make demand upon shippers for compensation, based upon the results of such findings, as in no other way can the buying public be protected in quality of coal received—and the percentage of impurities recognized by said Government regulations be printed in the Year Book."

The City's Price.

Nut coal is quoted at $12 a ton by local retailers, but the city's price for its mixed nut and pea sizes is $11.50. This price was fixed by the Fuel Committee for the purpose of disposing of last winter's reserve as quickly as possible without a loss, but if the market conditions referred to by the Assistant Deputy Administrator should prevail the Council need not be anxious of emptying its store house before next winter. The municipal fuel yard's usefulness is probably not yet ended.

Board Will Visit Peterboro

Lengthy List of Telephone Cases to be Dealth With.

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, April 4.— The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board has a lengthy list of telephone cases for hearing throughout the province, which will occupy its time for the majority of the present month. The Board yesterday heard a case at St. Mary's, and among other places will visit Norwich, Bridgeburg, Aylmer, Haleybury, Cobourg, Markham, Fort Francis, Rainy River, Peterborough and Perth. Applications for power, to increase rates and adjustment of relations between the Bell Company and smaller concerns, are the issues in most of the cases.

TO TAKE OVER THE RAILWAY

Negotiating for the Grand Trunk—Government Will Not Pay Interest on G.T.P. Bonds.

NEW PROPOSALS

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, April 4. — The statement made by Sir Thomas White, Acting Prime Minister, in the House yesterday, to the effect that the government would not pay the interest on Grand Trunk Pacific bonds guaranteed by the provinces, has created considerable interest at the capital, while the Grand Trunk Pacific is in the hands of a receiver, the government takes the views, nevertheless, that this fact does not change in any degree the liabilities in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific. In the past, however, it would appear that the interest on the bonds guaranteed by the provinces has been paid out of the federal advances made to the company. Now, apparently, the provinces will have to foot the bill.

According to the Drayton-Acworth report the Grand Trunk Pacific Branch Lines Company has outstanding bonds for $9,879,408, guaranteed by the Province of Saskatchewan, and for $3,589,596, guaranteed by the Province of Alberta, or a total of $13,469,004. For these bonds $12,688,544 in cash was realised and of this amount interest must be paid.

It would be competent for the provinces to acquire the branch lines, but such action would scarcely be justified by their utility to the provinces.

The newly-opened negotiations with the Grand Trunk through Mr. Kelly are proceeding. For the present the government will not discuss the probabilities or the nature of the new proposals, but it may be stated that they will not be more favourable to the Grand Trunk than those which were made before the negotiations were broken off.

Investigation Was Resumed To-day

Large Amount of Liquor Dispensed Through Several Agencies.

TORONTO, April 4.—Since Ontario went under prohibition in September, 1916, and up to March 1st of this year, over one million quarts of liquor have been sold under physicians' prescriptions by the legal vendors under the Ontario Temperance Act.

This was an estimate furnished to the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature this morning by J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Ontario License Board. This is exclusive of the liquor issued by druggists, vendors and distilleries for sacramental or industrial purposes.

Mr. Flavelle further stated that it did not include liquor obtained by physicians for their own use.

Mr. Flavelle said he believed, that despite the fact that the Department had collected more than a million and a quarter dollars in fines for infractions of the Act, there was no comparison in the conditions of the sobriety of the Province now, as against the conditions before the Act went into force.

The amount of liquor consumed, he asserted, was undoubtedly immensely less under the Act.

ADVERTISING OMITTED

Owing to an unprecedented demand for advertising space in to-day's issue of the Examiner, from eight to ten columns of advertising has been omitted, both from lack of space and lack of time in which to have the advertisements set. We regret disappointing some of our advertisers, but, in a very short while, this condition will not exist, as additional up-to-date equipment is being added to take care of any emergency.

Denies Rumours of Dissensions

The Anglo-French Entente Was Never More Complete, Says Lloyd George.

WILL AID FRANCE

(United Press.)

PARIS, April 4.—Premier Lloyd George, in an interview published in the Petit Parisien to-day, declared that should Germany ever again attempt to attack France, the British again would fight at the side of the French.

He denied rumours of dissensions between the British and French delegates in the peace conference.

"Naturally there have been discussions," the Premier was quoted as saying. "They are necessary to reach an agreement on any question. But the Anglo-French Entente was never more complete than it is now.

"The British did not come to fight beside the French merely that France should enjoy comparative tranquility for a limited time. They insist that France have complete security for the future. The ferocious beast is tamed now, but should he ever try to bite again, France will find Britain beside her."

"I have seen the scourge of war twice loosed on France by Germany," the Premier told the Petit Parisien.

"We do not intend that there shall be a third time, and should it be fifty years hence, France will again find England by her side with all her wealth and power, for, mark well my words, the wild beast must be mastered.

"It is mastered at present, but if one day it raises its head ready to spring it will find itself again faced by France and England, united in brotherhood."

Baby Welfare Exhibits at the Motor Show

Provincial Health Department is Sending Down Some Material.

The arrangements for the Baby Welfare Exhibit are progressing splendidly, and if the mothers of the city do their part in coming and bringing their babies, and all interested in the welfare of children make a point of seeing the exhibit, and then ipteresting others, the whole thing will be a wonderful success.

First—The Room

The committee have been fortunate in securing a splendid room, well lighted and heated, and suitable also for showing the films of pictures.

Second—The Material

Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, of the Provincial Health Department, is sending down a splendid lot of material. In fact, Mr. Jones, who was down last week making arrangements for the exhibit said he would have altogether a ton and a half of material. This will include several sets of splendid posters on Child Welfare Work, model clothing outfits for children, photographs illustrating Child Welfare Work throughout all Canada, and material with which Miss Knox will demonstrate how to properly wash and clothe and feed a baby.

In addition to this Dr. McCullough is sending down his Powers No. 6 machine with a number of splendid films.

Attendants

Miss Knox, a graduate of Toronto General Hospital, and employed by the Provincial Government for this work, will be in charge of the room all the time, and will be glad to explain or demonstrate any points in regard to the welfare of children.

Then several of the local doctors have very kindly consented to give their services during the clinic hours from 3 to 5 each afternoon, and will thoroughly examine each baby. Besides, there will be in attendance each afternoon, two members of the St. Johns Ambulance Corps, to help in any way necessary.

Refreshments

Each day, afternoon tea will be served to the mothers who bring their babies. Only babies two years old or under will be examined

The Babies

Of course, there cannot be a Baby Conference without babies, and that is your part, if you have a baby, or know some friend who has, bring them all along and the Baby Welfare Room will be the prettiest and most interesting spot in the whole Armouries.

Each mother will be presented with a Baby Book and a lot of splendid pamphlets.

Foch Conversed With Erzberger

A Second Conference With Hun Delegates Was Held Later in the Day.

DANZIG QUESTION

(United Press.)

SPA., April 4.—The German armistice commission to-day was in possession of the Allies' decision regarding the Danzig controversy, and instructions concerning observance of the armistice. These were communicated to the enemy representatives in two conferences yesterday.

Marshal Foch convereed with Mathias Erzberger, former chairman of the armistice commission on the former's special train, for forty minutes, beginning at 9.30 a.m. Foch and Erzberger held a second conference later in which General Weygendn, the Marshal's aide; General Nudant, French representative on the Allied armistice commission; and General Von Hammerstein, present chairman of the German commission, participated. This meeting was held in Neubois Villa, starting at 11 a.m. and continuing for over an hour and a half.

FOUR AMERICAN AVIATORS KILLED

(United Press.)

TREVES, April 4.—Four American aviators were killed and two injured to-day when two airplanes collided near Wittlich, falling in fragments and bringing two others out of control. One of the machinists fell in the Moselle river, the others landing in a field.

Looks For Annexation

Striking Statement Made by Senator William Edwards.

Canadian Press.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Two New York morning newspapers, the "Tribune" and the "American," publish the following to-day from Atlantic City: "Canada will be annexed to the United States within the next ten years, is the prediction made here to-day by Senator William C. Edwards, for more than thirty years a member of the Canadian Parliament, and one of the foremost business men in the Dominion.

"Senator Edwards, who is stopping at the Hotel Traymore, continued: 'Economically and industrially there is every reason which the two great American countries should be united under one government. Old ideas on the subject have been swept aside by the close association of the governments, business men, and men in service during the war. There is the strongest sentiment taking deep root throughout the Dominion in favour of amalgamation, and from observations that I have made everywhere in Canada, there is every reason to believe that annexation will have been accomplished within the next ten years.'"

(Canadian Press.)

Denies Report.

OTTAWA, April 4. — Senator Edwards has stated, according to a despatch published here, that statements attributed to him by New York papers, respecting Canada's annexation with the United States, are entirely untrue.

President Wilson Is Sick in Paris

Council of Four will Likely hold Sessions in Sick Room.

Canadian Press.

PARIS, April 4. — Although President Wilson was confined to his room with a cold the council of four met in his residence as usual. It is understood that necessary matters will be referred to the sick room, or that the conference will consult the President personally if the occasion arises.

Phillipine Islands Ask Independence

Secretary Baker says Time has come for Independence of Phillippines.

Canadian Press.

WASHINGTON, April 4. — The members of the Special Mission of the Philippine Legislature here seeking independence for the islands, were told to-day by Secretary of War Baker, that he spoke President Wilson's mind when he said he believed the time had come to grant the complete independence desired by the Philippine people.

ITALIAN TRANSPORT SUNK AT SEA.

Had 2000 Soldiers on Board.

Canadian Press.

PARIS, April 4. — The Italian transport "Umbria," with 2000 officers and soldiers on board, bound from Venice to Tripoli, has struck a mine and sunk. Several on board were killed and 100 injured.

UNDERSTANDING IS COMPLETE.

(Canadian Press.)

PARIS, April 4.—In a statement to the Petit Parisian, Premier Lloyd George denies there are any dissensions between France and Great Britain regarding guarantees for France against Germany. He declares that the understanding between the two governments is complete and that Great Britain is ready to make fresh sacrifices if necessary to secure the peace and importance of France.

Children in Foster Homes Are Well Cared For.

Mr. Wm. O'Connor, Inspector Children's Department, Ontario, has been in Peterborough and vicinity for the past four days. He states that the children placed in foster homes in this district are as a general rule well cared for. One exception is that of a boy under fourteen years, who has not attended school since going to the home more than six months ago. This will be remedied, but it would be helpful if truancy laws were more strictly enforced.

SUFFERING FROM COLD

Peace Conference Will Have to Struggle Along Without Woodrow for a Few Days.

BELGIUM'S CLAIMS

By Carl D. Groat.
(United Press.)

PARIS, April 4.— President Wilson was suffering from a severe cold today, necessitating his temporary absence from all conferences. It was announced, however, that prompt treatment is expected to effect his quick recovery.

The "Big Four" met in the "White House," Col. House representing the President. King Albert of Belgium, who conferred yesterday with Wilson, Premier Clemenceau and President Poincare, was invited to the meeting which was expected that that Belgium's claims to priority in the matter of reparation, would be given official consideration, and that Belgian territorial questions would be considered simultaneously with the problems of Germany's western and eastern boundaries.

Hitting the Hay.

WASHINGTON, April 4. — President Wilson, suddenly taken ill with a severe cold last night, is confined to his bed to-day, Admiral Grayson, his private physician cabled the White House this morning. Grayson added that there was no need for worry at present.

THE AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION.

Membership in the Peterborough Automobile Association offers so many benefits that it is rather surprising to find that the officers of the Association have felt the necessity of inaugurating a membership campaign among the motorists of Peterborough. Such, however, is the case, and the effort is now under way. Naturally, the Association is taking great interest in next week's motor show, and it is planned to distribute cards there telling about the advantages of a membership in the Association and giving a list of the members. It is hoped that by the beginning of next week there will be at least one hundred names on these cards.

By joining the Peterborough Automobile Association the motorist not only gains the benefit of fraternizing with his fellow car owners and of the work on behalf of the motoring fraternity that is carried on locally, but also becomes a member of the Ontario Motor League—the value of which is apparent when the many activities of the League are realized. The advantage of joining the local Automobile Association is so marked that the officers should have little difficulty in making a success of their membership campaign. Every car owner in Peterborough should belong to the Association.

A REGRETTABLE DECISION

The decision of the local Trades and Labour Council not to have representation on the Peterboro Board of Trade is to be regretted. The Board of Trade as reorganized and invigorated with new blood and new ideas seems to have reached a stage where its influence will be felt. It is the desire of the officers of the Board and it should equally be the wish of all those who are interested in the advancement of Peterboro that the membership of the organization should be as representative as possible. The Board is not working in the interest of any one class but for the benefit of all citizens in the city's population and for that reason it is unfortunate that organized labour, as represented by the Trades and Labour Council, has decided to remain aloof from the organization.

The objects before the Board of Trade as outlined at the meeting the other night, are surely such as can be understood by Labour. The improvement and improvement of parks and public grounds is a movement that is directly in the interests of the working people of the city. So too is the resolve to press for better and more practical, moral, physical and manual education. And why should not the Trades and Labour Council be willing to help in a campaign for better building, housing and neighbourhood conditions, which is another plank in the Board of Trade platform?

The better conduct and administration of public affairs is another that it would be imagined would be strongly supported by the representatives of organized labour. As Mr. Ryerson Richie right in his contention that "working men in their allegiance to unionism lose sight of the greater social objects just beyond the point of self-seeking."?

The re-organization of the Board of Trade seems to the Examiner to be a great importance event in the city's history. Knowing what great public and industrial reforms and improvements have been made by similar bodies in other communities, the enthusiasm displayed at Tuesday's meeting and the nature of the work outlined, were regarded as signs that the local Board had reached a stage in its development when something worth while was to be expected of it and when the citizens could rally around it and support it as a means of making this city a better place in which to live. It is therefore, frankly a disappointment to find that the representatives of an element in the city's population which would be directly benefited by the successful carrying out of the aims and objects for which the Board of Trade is striving, have with but scant discussion or consideration, decided to have no share in helping the Board of Trade to accomplish what it has set out to do.

Even yet it is not too late for the two bodies to get together. Organized labour should be represented in the Board of Trade for the mutual benefit of both bodies. There is no reason why they should work at cross purposes, and for the general welfare of Peterboro, a closer relationship would be welcomed.

NON-CONFIDENCE MOTIONS.

In the Ontario Legislature the other day, when the motion was made that the House resolve itself into a Committee of Supply, and an amendment was proposed, one of the Ministers, in resisting the amendment, laid down the broad rule that any amendment at that stage was necessarily a motion of non-confidence in the Government, and for that reason must be opposed by all friends of the Government. Perhaps the particular amendment under consideration was open to the objection, but the rule laid down by the Minister is not one calculated to make for the free discussion that ought to take place in our legislative bodies. Too often the rule is invoked unfairly and strained to prevent freedom of debate. The motion for a Committee of Supply is one which under our Parliamentary system, is designed to afford an opportunity for the presentation of grievances, if there are such, and to discuss public affairs generally. It belongs to the only class of motions on which it is possible to obtain a direct vote on an issue of importance. On any ordinary motion raised the issue may be evaded or side-tracked by an amendment. When the formal motion for Committee of Supply is made and an amendment offered, that amendment must be voted on—yea or nay. No evasive amendment can be moved. It is certainly desirable that our Parliamentary practice should allow this means of voting squarely on important questions. The terms of a motion, or the manner in which it is presented, may make it a step distinctly hostile to the Government, and in such a case, whether it be an amendment to Supply or in any other form, the Government are justified in asking their friends to vote down the proposition. But when a motion does not express or imply any hostility to the Government, but merely aims at securing a free expression of the opinion of the House on the issue raised—an issue on which the Government themselves may not be united—the true spirit of our Parliamentary system requires that the question be regarded as an open one, and the people's representatives be permitted to speak and vote according to their conscientious convictions. When in such a case a Government raise the cry that the motion is one of non-confidence, they do not carry out the spirit of British Parliamentary institutions. On the contrary they endeavor to stifle the free voice of Parliament. Where no Government policy is attacked, and where, owing to internal differences, the Government are not able to propound a policy, the House should express its mind freely and the Government should cheerfully accept the verdict of the House. Journal of Commerce.

THE LIBERAL CONVENTION

The leaders who are in charge of the arrangements for the great national Liberal Convention to be held in Ottawa in August are to be congratulated upon the progress that has already been made and upon the decision to hear the views on public matters of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, the Dominion Trade and Labour Congress, the Great War Veterans' Association and the Canadian Railroad Brotherhood all of whom have been invited to send representatives. There are so many great problems facing Canada and the conditions are so changed as a result of the war that before a national Liberal platform is drafted and adopted it has been deemed advisable to secure the opinions of these great bodies in order that the Liberal programme shall be progressive and comprehensive. By the method chosen it should be possible to obtain a survey of the national problems as viewed by different sections of Canada's population that will be a guide to the future.

The convention in addition to adopting a platform will also deal with the question of party organization and will choose a new leader so that it promises to be one of the most important conventions in the history of Canadian Liberalism. It has been arranged that the delegates shall include all the members of the Senate and the House of Commons who wish to co-operate with the Liberal party, all the Liberals candidates who were defeated at the last elections, the Liberal premiers and leaders of the Liberal opposition in the province, the president of the Provincial Liberal Association, three delegates, from each constituency in the Dominion, and a representation chosen by the Liberal members of each Provincial Assembly and the Liberal candidates defeated in the last Provincial election.

WEIGHED EVERY SCHOOL CHILD.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—There are 210 children under school age in one small Iowa town and 212 of them were weighed and measured in the recent test conducted by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor. "We enrolled all the children that we could find," the chairman says, "and we examined all that we found." This 100 per cent. record has seldom been equalled, although over 1,600,000 youngsters from forty-eight States and the district of Columbia and the territories were tested.

A permanent record has been kept of the children who were shown by the test to have defects of some sort. They are being "followed up" in an attempt to bring them up to the standard of Uncle Sam's huskiest boys and girls.

Here Are Swell Suits and they're Great Values

Remember this, that after a long period of topsy-turvy market and restricted production, industrial and business conditions cannot change overnight.

Our Spring Values commend themselves from every standpoint by which good clothes are judged.

Patterns and weaves are rich, built with "Give Good Service" as the central idea, and priced on the basis of actual cost rather than present greater worth.

$22.50 to $40.00

Your Spring Overcoat Here at $18 to $25

You will feel mighty comfortable in one of our Overcoats. They are correct in weight for Spring days, and correct in style for association with quality clothes.

We have a splendid showing of colors to select from—tailoring of high merit, and styles that breathe distinction.

When you slip on one of our many models of Suits or Overcoats, you'll recognize they are not ordinary "put together" garments, they are well "built."

Bridgenorth Men Were Honoured Last Evening

Signet Ring Presented to a Number of Returned Soldiers.

Last evening a rousing reception was given Bridgenorth's returned soldiers by the people of the village and vicinity. The returned heroes who were thus honored were: Dr. B. E. Kelly, Privates W. Nichols, Machman, W. Trew, C. Avery, B. Nichols, and B. Telford. Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston commander of the 93rd Battalion occupied the chair and stirring addresses were delivered by Rev. John Galt of Gilmour Memorial Church and also by the Rev. Mr. Webster.

The Programme.

Solo—Miss E. Tremane of Peterborough.

Solo—Mrs. C. Telford.

Chorus—Messrs. C. Telford, J. Jopling, J. Paul, W. J. Telford and F. Jopling.

Pianist—Mr. Richard Devey.

Mr. John Telford read the address of welcome and Miss Dorothy Kelly presented each of the veterans with a signet ring. Major (Dr.) Kelly replied for the soldiers and thanked the Foresters and citizens for the gift, a token of appreciation from their own kith and kin and Canadians in general.

The Address.

Address from the Foresters and citizens to the soldiers of Bridgenorth and district on the occasion of their public welcome home.

April 3rd., 1919.

Soldiers of Bridgenorth and the Empire, returned to us, by the Grace of God, in honour from the blood-stained fields of France and Flanders where for long years you have withstood "wild war's weary blast", we the very men and women for whom you sallied forth as the true Knights of the Twentieth Century: we your debtors for all time do ourselves honour in greeting you in this public welcome home on the spot of all the earth most dear to you: your own home land and the land of your own people. Thanks to you, and to such as you, our homes are inviolate, our liberties are secure our fears quelled. We have always believed in you: that you would quit yourselves like men ,that if ever brute force hacked its way to Canada it would be after you had laid down the uttermost even life itself. We wish to assure you that all through we have believed in you and trusted in God to give you the victory which has so gloriously crowned your efforts. We have as it were heard you speak also over the saying after the immortal words of John Guard:

'Mothers cease your weeping,
Calm may be your sleeping
You and yours in safety now
Canadian men are keeping.
Sure as Sun is high in heaven
They you fear, by panic riven
Shall like frightened sheep be driven
By Canadian men.

We greatly rejoice in you and in the part that you have played and in fact that Bridgenorth and the Empire will for all time to come have amongst their most cherished traditions the story of your going forth of your daring and your doing, of your sufferings of your glorious victory.

We are proud to know that Bridgenorth and district now counts among its sons men who proved themselves to be the peers of the best of mankind, that you have come back to us laden with honours manifest in the scars of many wounds and in the splendid Distinguished Service Order.

There is nothing that we can do that would adequately indicate our feeling of the debt that we owe to you for what you have done and suffered for us nor the debt we owe to God for hearing our prayers and bringing you back to us again.

We feel, however, that something must be done so in order that it may be quite apparent that there is no kind of comparison between our little gift to you and your heroic service to us we beg your acceptance of a simple signet ring which will be presented by one of the fair ladies of our own and your own Bridgenorth on the Lake.

Clayton Telford, C.R.,
Rev. Mr. Webster,
Rev. J. Galt, Citizens.

SINGLE TAX SCHEME FOR OTTAWA PASSES

Ontario Legislature Approves Scheme, Subject to Citizens' Vote Being Favourable.

TORONTO, April 3.—The City of Ottawa was empowered by the Private Bills Committee to-day to institute a new assessment system which will abolish taxation on houses and other buildings. The bill, which was sponsored by Mr. Wilson Southam, provides for an exemption of 25 per cent. on all buildings and all incomes, the first year after coming into effect; 50 per cent. exemption the second year; 75 per cent. the third year and total exemption the fourth year.

This system, Mr. Southam explained, would result in higher assessment on business land, but would be a great benefit to the poorer residential districts. The Act provides that the system shall be approved by the ratepayers before going into effect. The committee approved this also.

You cannot hope to impress others with your keenness or your optimism, if your eyes are crying out for relief.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I would like to express my opinion on the daylight saving. I consider it isn't right to force it on the people when there are so many citizens against it. The only people who are benefitted by the system are those who don't have to go to work until late in the morning. They can have a good sleep before work and then have an extra hour for joy-riding at night or playing golf. Nine out of every ten of the labouring men are opposed to the D. S. system. The following are some of the reasons why the daylight saving is no good for the working class:

1. It causes the average factory employee to arise at 5 a.m. in order to get to work at 6 and thus he loses 1 hour of healthful sleep.

2. It causes the street railway employee to arise at 4:30 a.m., which is an unreasonable hour to expect any man to get up.

3. It is not fair for growing children, as they have to arise 1 hour earlier under the system, and it is impossible to get them to bed when it is broad daylight, which it is at 8 and sometimes 9 p.m. under daylight saving. A growing child should have 12 hours' sleep. I speak of children attending school.

4. It is not fair to the tired mother who works hard all day for her children and often sits up mending and sewing after the little ones have gone to bed. She needs her rest at night to recuperate her body for the next day's work. Under daylight saving she must get up at 5 a.m.

5. The lighting and heating are not saved under the system, as you have to burn light and fuel in the early morning. Taking everything into consideration it is of no benefit to anyone.

When our government voted the measure down it should not have been put in practice. The law makers in Canada are paving a way for a revolution. The labour man is getting sick of being bossed. They tell him what he must drink, what he must eat, and now they tell him how long he must sleep. When election time comes the councillors look to the labour men for re-election, with great promises of what they'll do if re-elected, but when election is over they do as they like.

Standard time has suited the people for 1900 years, and should not be changed at this late date.

The papers would lead you to believe the factory men were all in favour of daylight saving. I work at one of the largest factories and I have asked every man I came in contact with, and in every case the man was opposed to daylight saving.

The promoters of the system are always harping on the time saved for gardening. I work as big a garden as the average man, and I found plenty of time for it before daylight saving came in force. The people who want daylight saving are those who spend their evenings on the river or in their cars. The working man is quite satisfied with the good old solar time, and will do all in his power to have it next year.

Thanking you for space in your paper to express my views on this subject, I remain,

A Labour Man.

Was Troubled With BOILS FOR SIX MONTHS.

From the days of Job to the present time, boils have been one of the greatest afflictions of the human race.

Very few people escape from having them at some time.

All the poulticing and lancing you may do won't cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are caused by bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood must be made pure before the boils will disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system, and purifies the blood by removing every particle of foul material from the system, and when this is done, never another boil comes and health and strength are permanently restored.

Mr. C. H. Bridges, 470 Barton St. E., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with boils for about six months and tried several remedies without any relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, and the effect has been wonderful. After using two bottles, I was rid of them all. I feel like a new man; my appetite is better, and I sleep better than I have for years. I can highly recommend B. B. B. to all who are troubled as I was."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for the past 40 years, and manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Preparing to Undertake the Overseas Flight

British Aviators May Start on Thursday Next.

(United Press.)

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., April 4.— Pilot Harry Hawker will make his attempt to fly across the Atlantic next Thursday at the latest, according to present indications.

The work of setting up the airplane in which Hawker and his navigator, MacKenzie Grieve, will make the flight, started to-day at the aviation field near here. The mechanics, who had been delayed by ice floes, which held up their steamer, arrived last night.

Hawker and Grieve were busy to-day studying the first meteorological reports, covering the whole area of the proposed flight from Newfoundland to the British Isles. These reports show light south winds and fine weather from here to the longitude of the Azores, and from there to the British Isles, moderate northerly winds. The aviators regard prospects of making a successful flight as exceedingly favourable.

Aviator Morgan, with his Martinside machine, in which he will also attempt to fly across the Atlantic, is en route to St. Johns on the steamer Sachem. Morgan plans to make his start not later than April 16.

Hawkes' plane will be in shape for test flights within forty-eight hours, it is believed, and if good weather prevails the early part of next week, he will probably start before Thursday.

LEMONS MAKE SKIN WHITE, SOFT, CLEAR

Make This Beauty Lotion for a Few Cents and See for Yourself

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to whiten the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way. Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost, and the grocer has the lemons.

Germans Direct Appeal to Wilson

Insist on Securing a Wilson Peace.

(Canadian Press.)

BERLIN, April 4. Leading ethical, philosophical and religious societies of Germany have addressed an appeal to President Wilson, giving warning against a disregard of principles to which Mr. Wilson pledged himself, which, they claim, induced Germany to lay down her arms. The appeal declares that "if the Germans are driven to desperation, they would rather become Bolsheviks than slaves."

It is maintained that the Allies provoked anarchistic conditions in Germany by refusing to relax the blockade.

Mr. Wilson is warned that the United States, "with its great private fortunes and billion dollars trusts," is a "fertile field for communism." And it is suggested that the wealthy Americans, "had better support the League of Nations."

"Shadows" is Goldwyn's Third Farrar Picture.

Given every opportunity to display her dramatic gifts, Geraldine Farrar in "Shadows," a Goldwyn Picture comes to the Grand Opera, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The story is simple in its fundamentals and therefore strong in its appeal. Miss Farrar is Muriel Barnes, happily married to a New York financier. Devoted to their child, life seems to her to lack nothing. When Craftley, a stranger, seeks to gain her husband's support in a mining scheme she feels that the first cloud—or shadow—has appeared on her horizon. And the man senses that Muriel is familiar to him. He asks his partner Jack McGoff, about the Alaskian girl he is always looking for and in her photograph Craftley sees the present Mrs. Barnes.

Acting on his wife's warning Barnes declines to invest in Craftley's scheme. Then the fellow telephones Muriel, calling her a name which reveals his knowledge of her past—and Alaska. She is ordered to persuade her husband to go into the deal at the peril of having him know of her now forgotten life. How Muriel extricates herself from this heartbreaking complication is developed in the play. Matinee Daily at 2:30.

How to Kill Dandruff So It Won't Return

By a Specialist

Ten Minutes' Home Treatment Works Wonders, Stops Falling Hair and Dandruff and Makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy

Better than all the so-called "hair tonics" in the world is a simple, old-fashioned home recipe consisting of plain Bay Rum, Layona (de Composee) and a little Menthol Crystals. These three mixed at home in a few minutes work wonders with any scalp. Try it just one night and see. Get from your druggist 2 oz. Layona, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ½ drachm Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in 8 oz. bottle. Then add the Layona, shake well and let stand for an hour before using. Apply it by putting a little of the mixture on a soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days' use and you will not find a single loose or straggling hair. They will be locked on your heads as tight as a vise. Dandruff will disappear. You will find fine downy new hairs sprouting up all over your scalp and this new hair will grow with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The prescription is very inexpensive and we know of nothing so effective and certain it its results.

MILLIONS FOR NEW HOUSES.

Many Municipalities Take Advantage of the Housing Scheme—Peterboro is Among the Missing.

The following municipalities have passed by-laws to come under the provisions of the Housing Act: Windsor, Sudbury, Galt, St. Catharines, Fort William, Sault Ste. Marie, Ingersoll, Sandwich, Hespeler, Port Dalhousie, Madoc, Oshawa, Port Credit.

J. A. Elis, municipal director of the Ontario legislature, estimates that the loan required by these municipalities will aggregate from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000. He expects that over 15 other municipalities will come under the provisions of the Act within a month and that about 60 municipalities will be operating under it by June.

INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION FORMED IN NORWOOD

An "Industrial Commission" has been formed in Norwood with a number of the most prominent business men as members. One of the first efforts of the Commission will be to confer with the town council to see what can be done to improve the condition of the streets of the village, and to interview the ratepayers and council of Dummer with a view to a co-operative effort to secure a grant for the improvement of the 9th Line of that township.

Do You Want To Know WHY the "GREENE" PIANO Was Made?

It was manufactured specially for us to meet the demand for a GOOD PIANO at a MODERATE PRICE. In the "Greene" Piano you get the product of a long established factory, and skilled workmen. It is not an experiment, but a well proved instrument on which we are proud to have our firm name. Our contract terms enable us to sell it at a lower price than the extensively advertised pianos, and every instrument goes out under our own special guarantee.

The Y.M.C.A. Circus Will Be Repeated This Evening

Last Night's Performance Was Full of Thrills—A Big Orchestra.

The Y.M.C.A. Circus, an annual event which is looked forward to with as much pleasure by "ma" and "pa" as by the younger element, was held last evening in the Grand Opera House.

There were artists, clowns, acrobats, conjurers, gymnasts, strong men, musicians, athletes and prestidigitors galore.

The accumulated orchestra dispensed music which lifted the audience into another planet so ethereal were the refrains. Mr. Charles Parsons made a capable ringmaster and coupled with a silk top and high-heeled shoes, reminded one of a dandified "parson(s)." Then the six sick Sihks appeared on the scene and they were sick. The Sihk that had so much to say was "Rastus" Huff and the native with the straw rusher was Mr. Ken Anderson, composer of "Mary get the Hammer, There's a Fly on Baby's Nose," and "Pecking through the knot-hole in father's wooden leg."

Mr. Harry Carte with the ring of fire and the ball of flame which he swallowed with a voracious appetite was a clown that would be a credit to the travelling circuses. Charles Elliott, the clown from Buckingham Palace did the Jack Dempsey stunt in an India rubber fashion, which threatened to do damage to the fly gallery. The dumb bell drill presented the athletic work of the gymnasium in a realistic fashion, a drill by several budding Peterboroites who were as full of pep and ginger as the barber's cat.

Back Again

The annual pest, Prof. Howeverdoeshedoit was back on the scene and was an adept at disguise in spite of the fact that he receives no salary and gives half of that to the poor. A native Hawaiian imported from as far off as Nassau played the ukelele in a pleasing manner. The sob producer was Mr. Clifton Carruthers. Besides these amazing features there were the calisthenic drill, the pyramids with "Skinniy" Thirnbeck there all the time, the wand drill a harmonious exhibition of perturbing unreality, Dr. Bunion the corn specialist who uses ether by the gallon; Profl. Creosote, the world famous cometist whose normal home is Orillia; the Dutch dancer, a daring, darling, dashing, dainty exhibition of the art of forgetting how to do it. The next act is done in the dark and if you are there tonight be careful whose hand you squeeze—be sure that it isn't your own. Hang on to your watch, because the city policeman no longer watches the performance from the rear. The fire flies are wonders.

The Orchestra

The orchestra played in intermissions with the trombone in the hands of Mr. Harold Lancashire as the chief instrument of torture.

The performance will be repeated this evening.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Godden, 325 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

Labour Nominees For Commission

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, April 4. — Tom Moore, President of th Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and John W. Bruce, of Toronto, representative of the United Plumbers, and member of the Labour Appeal Board, are the Labour nominees for the Commission on Industrial Relations.

If the Commission is increased from five to seven, there will have to be a re-adjustment of members.

The Cabinet is in session to-day, giving final consideration to the various names suggested, and an early definite announcement is expected.

DENMARK WILL SECURE TERRITORY.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, April 4.—The aspirations of Denmark are regarded favourably by the Peace Conference, the Matin says. Indications are that Denmark will recover the part of Schleswig-Holstein, which she desires.

The Conference, the paper adds, has decided to return to Denmark, without delay, the natives of Schleswig Holstein, who served in the German army and were taken prisoners by the Allies.

"Flo-Flo" at Grand To-morrow Afternoon and Evening

With a "perfect 36" chorus, a cast of metropolitan favorites, effective scenery, special orchestra and a fashion parade worthy of Paquin or Poiret, John Cort's musical comedy "war bride" hit "Flo-Flo" which ran for a full year at the Cort Theatre, New York, will be presented at the Grand Opera, to-morrow, matinee and evening. Mosher and Simpson, propietors of the Bride Shop in the Cort production, are a riot of laughter in themselves, but when taken in conjunction with that alert pair of eccentric dancers, Pinky and Aloysius the lovely Flo-Flo, Mosher and Simpson's most accomplished mannequin; and Angelina Stokes, who finds that the course of true love never did run smoothly, the result is a comedy which runs the entire gamut of amusement.

The story is concerned with a match-making mother; a scheming Count; Angelina Stokes, in love with Billy her childhood sweetheart from Oshkosh; th ehero from Oshkosh and various others. Angelina Stokes is brought by her worldly mother to Mosher and Simpson's Bride Shop for her trousseau. She is to be married to the bogus Spanish Count. About the time Angelina orders her trousseau Billy secures a position in the Bride Shop and there meets Angelina. Mrs. Stokes orders him discharged when she finds him with her daughter and Billy drowns his hopeless love in a flirtation with Flo-Flo, the vampirish corset-model. Angelina is heartbroken at this turn in her romance, but the theft of her trousseau and the determination of Flo-Flo to give up the idea has created a new standard for himself by the score he has supplied to "Flo-Flo". Some of its hits are, "Would You Love Me", "On the River Nile", "A Wonderful Creature," "Good-bye Happy Days", "Don't Trust Them," and the "Ziegfeld Girl."

For his cast Mr. Cort selected Louise Kelly, Jere Delaney, Carl L. George, William Cummings, Rose Southern, Mildred Beverly, Augustus Buell, Rhea Norton, William Burton Burns, Edward Lynn and other favorite musical comedy artists and the Perfect Thirty-Six Chorus.

The Old-time Painter Says:

"Whether I paint the home of a millionaire or the humblest cottage I always remember that they both must the same kind of weather. I use

MAPLE LEAF PAINT

It Makes Good Because It's Made Good.

—the millionaire can't buy better paint anywhere.

—and the man who owns the humble cottage can't save money any surer way than with MAPLE LEAF.

MAPLE LEAF PAINT is the most total motor driven adding machine of paint progress when it comes to comparison with the old pot and paddle days I had to go through.

For the "old man" with his shirt sleeves up and nothing to do on a Saturday afternoon—but a little job of painting—there's nothing to it but MAPLE LEAF and follow the directions on the can. Perhaps he won't need my services, but here's my advice to him:—go to it strong with MAPLE LEAF and the eternal smile will become a permanent fixture on his face—for every time he'll look at the job he'll say MAPLE LEAF for mine every time.

The man with the MAPLE LEAF around his store is the man to buy paint from. look him up in your town.

PATRIOTIC FUND HAS OVER $8,000,000

Expenditure at Present is About $750,000 Per Month.

IS NEARING THE END

OTTAWA, April 3.—Sir Herbert Ames stated to the Pensions Committee of Parliament that the Canadian Patriotic Fund had between eight and nine million dollars on hand. The present expenditure is $750,000 per month, which is decreasing monthly by about ten per cent.

In view of the fact that the Patriotic Fund is nearing the end of its work, Sir Herbert made a plea for consideration for the widows of Imperial, French, Italian and Belgian reservists, who had gone over to fight for the allies. He said there were probably fewer than five hundred of these and $175,000 a year would take care of them all.

He said there was no outlook for these women and their families, many of whom were Canadians, and almost all of whom had come to Canada to live before the war began, except starvation when the Patriotic Fund went out of business. The pensions of these reservists were totally insufficient to keep them in Canada.

Sir Herbert indicated that the funds of the Patriotic Fund which would be left might be invested in some way and the income made available to take care of special cases that would not be covered by the Pensions Act.

Prices Are Falling, But Still Far Above Those of a Year Ago

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 4 — Wholesale prices, though showing a downward trend this year, remain much higher than those of a year ago, it was disclosed to-day by the March issue of the Monthly Labour Review, of the Department of Labour. Food, clothing and metal products were reported as showing the greatest declines in the last two months.

"Wholesale prices in the United States showed a downward trend with the beginning of the new year," said the review, "the weighted index number of the bureau of labour statistics standing at 202 for January, as compared with 206 for December, 1918."

Cotton, corn, hides, tobacco, butter, eggs, lard, bacon, woollen goods, bar iron, copper, steel, oak and poplar lumber were listed among important articles whose prices were less in January than the preceding month. Cattle, potatoes, soap and whiskey averaged higher, while hogs, canned goods, beef, sugar and milk were among those that remained practically unchanged.

"Comparing prices in January, 1919, with those of a year ago," concluded the review, "it is seen that the index number of farm products increased from 205 to 220; that of food articles from 198 to 204, and that of clothe and clothing from 209 to 231."

Bandits Get $2,500 Liberty Bonds in Daring Hold-Up

Broker Assaulted and Clerk Shot in Office Near Pennsylvania Station.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Another one of the series of robberies in that section occurred in the real estate office of W.H. Burroughs, at No. 217 West Thirty-fourth street. Two hold-up men entered the offices just after seven o'clock, held up Mr. Burroughs and an office assistant, and after shooting the assistant and beating Mr. Bourroughs over the head escaping in an automobile with nearly $2,500 in Liberty Bonds and money.

Although hundreds of persons were going into and coming from the Thirty-fourth street entrance of the Pennsylvania station across the street the robbers were undisturbed.

Aside from his real estate activities Mr. Burroughs has been buying and selling Liberty Bonds. Yesterday one of the men who took part in the hold-up at nightfall, went to the office and sold a Liberty Bond, and when he returned in the evening he nodded in friendly fashion and said that he had brought a friend who had some bonds and stamps to dispose of.

A Liberty Bond and a book of stamps were produced by the newcomer, and then both men suddenly drew revolvers, one covering Mr. Burrows and the other firing at John Gibson, who is employed in the office. Mr. Burroughs backed up against the office wall as Gibson dropped with a bullet in his shoulder. The two men seized a pile of bonds, opened a drawer and brought forth more than $1,000 in money, and after taking a purse from Mr. Burroughs containing more than $300 they dashed out, jumped into a waiting automobile and drove away.

Mr. Burroughs called the New York Hospital and Dr. Dalesnmay came and found that Mr. Gibson had a bad wound and that Mr. Burroughs had suffered a bruise in the back of the head.

The men were described as of medium height about thirty years old and foreigners. Both wore black caps and dark clothes.

THIN, NERVOUS FOLKS SHOULD TAKE BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Women Need it to Bring Pink Glow of Health to Pale Cheeks and Forestall Tell-Tale Lines of Age. Men Need it to Make Strong, Vigorous Bodies and Steady Nerves

Weak, thin people—men and women—are nearly always nervous wrecks; thus conclusively proving that thinness, weakness, debility and neurasthenia are almost invariably due to nerve starvation. Feed your nerves and all these symptoms due to nerve starvation will disappear.

Eminent specialists state that the best known nerve food is an organic phosphate known among druggists as Bitro-Phosphate, a five-grain tablet of which should be taken with each meal. Being a genuine nerve builder and not a stimulant or habit-forming drug, Bitro-Phosphate can be safely taken by the weakest and most delicate sufferer, and the results following its use are often simply astonishing.

Weak, tired people regain strength and vigor; thinness and angularity give way to plumpness and curves; sleep returns to the sleepless, confidence and cheerfulness replace debility and gloom; dull eyes become bright and pale, sunken cheeks regain the pink glow of health. Bitro-Phosphate, the use of which is inexpensive, also wonderfully promotes the assimilation of food, so much so that many people report marked gains of weight in a few weeks.

It is sold in Peterboro by McDermid & Jury and by all good druggists.

CAUTION: — Although Bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Addressed the Milk Producers Last Evening

Object of Meeting is to Interest Consumers—Prospect of Prices.

Last evening, in the Council Chamber, Mr. E. H. Stonehouse, president of the Provincial Milk and Cream Producers' Association, and president of the National Dairy Council, addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting of the local producers and non-producers of milk, with the object of establishing a better feeling between the two sections of the community.

Mr. R. B Rogers, who occupied the chair, said that the milk producers were glad at all times to confer with the distributors and manufacturers of milk products, and that the endeavour of the producers in holding such conferences was to help the public understand conditions concerning the production of milk.

Mr. A. J. Bolwell and Mr. T. Toons, of the Trades and Labour Council, who were present at the meeting, expressed their entire sympathy with the movement and thier willingness to co-operate with it and explain the aims of the milk producers to all with whom they came in contact

A Square Deal.

Mr. Stonehouse, in opening his address, emphasized the fact that the purpose of the organization was not selfish, that the producers were not looking all together at the advantages to be derived by the producer himself, but rather for a square deal for all concerned. He deplored the antagonism which has grown up between the two great elements, the producer and consumer. This the speaker believed was due to a misunderstanding for which the producer is perhaps to a large extent to blame in the fact that he took for granted that the farm conditions were understood by the urban population and had not thought it necessary to demonstrate the fact that the high cost of production was the great feature responsible for the high cost of living. This, coupled with the high cost of distribution of all articles of human consumption, milk products in particular, was responsible for the high cost of living.

Holding Conferences.

A movement to mitigate the misunderstanding, he said, is being put on foot in the holding of conferences between the producers' organizations, the distributors and the great consuming public. It is the latter faction that is being taken into the confidence of the producers as to conditions. In this way a better understanding is being arrived at. As a contributing cause to the high cost, the labour situation comes in for investigation. It was demonstrated by the speaker that labour conditions on the farm had not improved, and were not likely to improve, in the near future. Higher wages, shorter hours, etc., are being offered to induce labour to remain on the farms. He dealt earnestly with community life, and said efforts were being put forth towards catering to the social life of the rural communities.

Returning Soldiers.

The speaker dealt with the return of the soldiers to the land. He demonstrated that history showed that succeeding the great wars the soldiers had not returned to the farms. Of the 209,000 who have returned to Canada, comparatively few have availed themselves of the opportunity for establishing themselves on the land. The consensus of opinion seems to be with the returned men that farm life does not appeal to them. The impression that remained in the speaker's mind after interviewing many returned men was that the soldiers' life and experience overseas does not predispose him to comply with the quiet life in the country.

Prospects of Prices.

Dealing with the question of prospects of the price of milk and dairy products, contrary to the general impression that they would be lower, present indications do not point that way. But prices are higher than ever before in the experience of the speaker or probably in the history of Canada. This fact points to a falling of production. The milk will be absorbed to a great extent in the manufacture of milk products. The prospects are therefore that milk prices will be maintained at least at last summer's level.

Owing to labour situations and longer hours and trying conditions of dairying, farmers to a great extent are going into other branches of agriculture as they offer equal and in many cases larger returns.

Leaving this phase, the speaker emphasized the fact that if the producers are to receive and perpetuate fair prices of products more care must be taken in the manufacture. The care of milk also came in for a certain amount of criticism by the speaker. The proper quality of milk, he said, had not been maintained by the producer during the past few years.

Advantages of Organization.

The speaker concluded by outlining the advantages of organization, saying that anything permanent in the way of securing better conditions could only be accomplished by organization and co-operation. Absolute loyalty toward the organization was the first requirement. He also emphasized the fact that the executive must have the whole-hearted support of the local membership. It is impossible to obtain results, he said, unless every member felt his responsibility in the matter. He strongly advocated affiliation of the local organization with the Provincial Association of Ontario.

From a standpoint of finance it is important that every farmer support his organization. The fact was pointed out that even the boot blacks of Toronto are organized, and the fee set by them is in advance of that usually set by the farmers' organizations.

Vote of Thanks.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved and seconded by Mr. Seymour and Mr. Moncrief for the speaker's splendid address and the help which he has gratuitously given the local association.

FIRE UNCOVERS GIN STORE.

Canadian Club in Hull had Good Supply Hidden Away.

OTTAWA, April 4. — Thirty cases of liquor—the most of it gin—were found on the third floor of the Dorion Building, occupied by the Canadian Club, after the fire which damaged it had been extinguished. The "cache" was discovered when the Hull firemen were going through the building on an inspection tour. The Hull police were immediately notified and the whole consignment was soon safe in the Hull police cells. Two women and a girl lost their lives in the fire.

Trying to Crowd Lindsay Out

Lindsay Warder.

For some time past it has been felt that there was a movement on the part of Port Hope and Cobourg to crowd Lindsay out of the Midland League. The following telegram, which was received by the Warder this afternoon, seems to bear out that report, but it is hoped that Mr. Dedman, Lindsay's delegate to the inaugural meeting at Port Hope this afternoon will be able to convince the clubs in the proposed league that Lindsay should not be left out of the new organization.

Millbrook, 2:50 p.m.

Understand there is a movement to leave Lindsay out of the Midland League from information gleaned here. M. J. Dedman.

High Rollers Defeat Grocers

At the Water street Alleys last night, the High Rollers won all three games from the Grocers in a 10 pin league fixture. Grocers were somewhat off color, and the breaks were also against them. The High Rollers hit the 2500 mark for three game with 932 for the first game. For the High Rollers, Mitges rolled up the nifty total of 617 with a 245 for a single; Solomon contributed a 598 total. For the Grocers, Weber and Routley were high with 482 and 483 for totals.

MAD WEAK and FAINTING SPELLS

Those feelings of faintness, those weak, "all-gone" sinking sensations, which come over most people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They mean an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered nervous system.

When the system is in this condition there is no time for delay. One fainting spell may be recovered from—will the next? One dizzy spell may pass off, but the next may be more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills before their case becomes deep rooted and perhaps hopeless.

They will act directly on the disordered heart and weakened nervous system and restore them to full strength and vigor.

Miss Mary McCoy, Algoma Mills, Ont., writes:—"I was awfully troubled with fainting and weak spells, and I could never get any doctor's medicines to help me. One day a friend of mine was at the house when I took one of those spells, and she got me a box of Milburn's Heart and nerve Pills. That was six years ago, and from that day to this I have never had any of those spells. I would not be without your pills for any money and can highly recommend them to any one."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Feeble Old People Vinol is What You Need

because it contains the very elements needed to replace weakness with strength, viz: Beef and Cod Liver Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates, and Glycerophosphates, with a mild tonic wine. This is a splendid combination to restore strength, vitality and vigor. It has given ninety percent satisfaction for sixteen years. HERE IS PROOF:

Malone, N.Y.

"I am 84 years of age and got into a feeble, weak and nervous condition so I could not sleep. Vinol has not only built up my strength but it has given me a good appetite and I sleep all right now. Without doubt Vinol is the greatest [illegible] for old people obtainable." — Mrs. S. B. W[illegible]

Winchester, Va.

"I am a farmer's wife, 75 years of age, and pneumonia left me in a weak, run-down condition, so I could hardly keep about and do my work. A neighbor brought me Vinol and it has built up my strength so fast that I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken." Mrs. Jessie Chapman.

[illegible] there is no remedy like Vinol.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM SAILSBURY.

The death took place in Toronto on Thursday of William Sailsbury, for many years proprietor of the Sailsbury Bookstore in this city. The late Mr. Sailsbury was originally from Cobourg, and came to Peterborough and conducted a bookstore for some years, removing to Toronto about fifteen years ago, where he had secured a position in the Parliament Buildings. During his residence in Peterborough he made many friends, who will regret to hear of his death. His wife still survives him in Toronto.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. E. F. Hamblin, of Syracuse, N.Y., is visiting with her sister, Mrs. G. W. Fitzgerald, 458 Aylmer street.

Among the Peterborough boys who arrived home on the Olympic was Pte. D. H. Darrah, 590 Chamberlen street. Pte. Darrah enlisted with the 8th C.M.R., B squadron, Feb. 1, 1915, arrived in England June 21st, 1915. Later he was transferred to the 3rd C.M.G. Battalion, and after serving three and a half long years in France, was heartily welcomed home by his many friends.

Mrs. George King has returned to the city from Toronto where she attended the opening of the new Academy of Music.

Mrs. W. Hartshorn returned recently from New York, where she spent the winter.

Lt.-Col. A. L. Young, who served for over four years overseas during which time he was acting Brigadier-General for some time, was in the city yesterday visiting his brother, Jr. Young, en route for his home in Souris, Manitoba.

Mrs. Gilman left yesterday for Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Grahame have taken one of the Charlbond Apartments.

Mr. W. H. Walkey is in Haliburton relieving Mr. Hiscock as manager of the Bank of Montreal.

Miss Cora Mowry, Charlotte street, is leaving tonight to visit her sister, Mrs. Walter Breigel in Montreal.

GEORGE ST. CHOIR CONCERT

At the rehearsal on Tuesday night splendid progress was made in the choruses. A friendly rivalry has developed between the ladies and men in their respective choruses, both of which are showing up splendidly. In addition to this, many fine numbers have been prepared. The following artists will take part:—Otto Gliddon, Clarinet Solo; Miss Logan, Violin Solo; Readings by Mrs. Jenne and Miss Winnifred Parker; Solos by Miss Doris Rathbone, Tom Ward, Miss Ida Lynn, and Mrs. Renwick. A sextette for ladies' voices and two piano quartettes will also prove very interesting. A full programme will be published in Saturday's issue. The date, Tuesday, April 8th. Tickets may be purchased from any member of the choir or Ladies' Aid. Several hundred have already been sold.

DAYLIGHT TIME IN HAVELOCK.

Havelock officially adopted "Daylight Time" on Monday night at 10 o'clock, when Reeve Mathison issued a proclamation on Monday asking all citizens to advance their clocks and watches one hour, in order that there would be a uniform time in force in the village, and so cause no confusion or inconvenience to our citizens. Havelock is affected far more than the ordinary village by the summer time, as three-fourths of our citizens are governed by the C.P.R., which, in common with the other railways, adopted the new time on Sunday last.

PRINTER'S INK DID IT.

Newspaper advertising is declared to have been the chief factor in raising $40,000.00 for the Presbyterian church in the United States. The church's publicity director said:

"There is no agency which can be made quite so effective as the daily newspaper in enlisting the interest of those who do not go to church. It already has an entree into the homes of the people; it is not looked upon with suspicion; it appears every day, the matter it contains is discussed by everyone, and worth-while advertisements paid for by the churches proclaiming religion will be read by many millions, who would never, in the first instance, go to church to hear it discussed."
